Heat is Very Helpful in Rheumatism—Arthritis

When it was discovered about thirty years ago that infected teeth and tonsils caused rheumatism and arthritis, many good teeth and slightly enlarged tonsils were removed, such was the desire to prevent rheumatism and the heart disease which frequently follows rheumatism.

"While a vast amount of good was accomplished it was nevertheless discovered in due course that all cases of rheumatism did not recover when tonsils and teeth were removed."

A little later it was found that bad food habits, defects in personal hygiene, exposure to dampness and cold, poor housing conditions, worry and fatigue could all be factors in causing rheumatism or arthritis, and that these conditions must be corrected or removed as were infected teeth and tonsils, if relief were to be obtained. And to bring the parts back or nearly back to normal takes almost as long as it took the infection or conditions to develop the symptoms.

Among the great helps in arthritis, as in many other ailments, is heat.

Dr. Bernard Langdon Wyatt, Tucson, Arizona, in Medical World, says: "The benefits of arthritic patients of a warm, dry and sunny climate with but slight changes in atmospheric pressure, are beyond question."

"First, heat expands and softens the tissue of the body, while cold tightens them. Arthritics, therefore suffers less in summer time as a rule."

"In the second place, a warm climate not only makes these patients feel better but also aids in their recovery because it makes possible direct sun bathing."

"Finally, in the case of those arthritics whose arthritis is kept active by throat, sinus, and bronchial infections, the organisms causing these infections disappear, as a rule, within a few weeks in the warm, dry climate."

Now all arthritics cannot leave their homes to live in a dry hot climate, but there is some sunshine everywhere and what is present should be used.

As it is mostly the heat and dryness, not any special rays of the sun, the use of heat in any form is helpful. It should be remembered, however, that the cause of the arthritis should be sought and removed before and during the treatment by heat.

MODERN SUNDAYS

The average man and woman has come to look upon the Sabbath not so much as a day of rest and introspection, as of relaxation and amusement. It is too much trouble to go to church, especially when there are so many counter-attractions of a more congenial nature. Some prefer to stay at home, doing just what they pleasee or nothing at all; others would rather go out motoring, play golf, etc.

It is convenient to make the minister or the brand of church service the scape-goat, but it is most unjust.

The way to promote religious zeal in oneself and in others is to take an active, personal part in church activities. Nothing is accomplished by staying away and criticizing the few faithful ones who are unselfishly carrying on—and who would be only too glad to welcome those who believe they have a useful contribution to make to the spiritual progress of their community.—Hamilton Spectator.

CANADIAN CONFIDENCE

News that European investors are turning to Canadian securities is doubly welcome. Additional capital is always valuable and the action is a strong indication that this country presents opportunities not to be found elsewhere. It shows that foreigners have confidence in the future of Canada, whatever pessimists at home may say.

During September, when the threat of European war was strong, some $2,500,000 worth of Canadian securities were purchased in Europe. But the movement has not been confined to that month by any means.

Foreign or absentee ownership of Canadian enterprises is not an unmixed blessing. But establishment of new industries here should help both to develop our country and to afford needed employment. Paying dividends abroad may mean an exchange problem, but it should also mean demand in other countries for Canadian goods.

If sufficient capital is sent in from other lands it might solve, in part at least, the difficulty of affording refuge to refugees from other lands. If these people could be put to work at new industries established with foreign capital many of the objections now raised in regard to their admission would disappear. Many countries have gained greatly by affording refuge to those driven from other lands.

Why should not Canada do likewise? And why should the Government not make some studies of how newcomers can be best handled, in their own interest and that of Canada as a whole?—London Free Press.

Two Dollars Weekly For Living

What can one live on in Montreal, if forced by necessity?

Is an income of $10 or $20 weekly required?

To those in well-sheltered positions or work entailing manual labor, to say nothing of those who, either by the grace of God or their own efforts, do not have to work, it may come as a surprise that it can be done for as little as $1.50 a week. It takes a bit of financing nad shopping around, but it can be done. I have done it.

Taking that amount as the maximum to be spent during seven days, the first problem was to find a place to sleep. Beds provided by charitable organizations were taboo, but there are many places in the city where a bed and a more or less semi-private room can be obtained for as little as 75 cents a week, although the daily rate is 15 cents a night.

The beds certainly have no slumber inducing mattresses nor a plentitude of sheets. Nevertheless there is one sheet, a blanket and a pillow. I chose such a place on Craig street. There were three beds in the room, all occupied.

The view from the one window was a flat roof. In different parts of the room were clotheslines bearing socks or underwear washed by the occupants. One man had been there for four years and desired nothing more than enough to pay for his room (in advance) and a bite to eat.

There were no cockroaches but there were other insects which dropped on you from the ceiling and, even as the army "greyback", kept you warm twisting and turning. They seemed pretty hungry, and I was glad I was not overly fat.

There was no room service or laundry service. Such clothes as were needed were washed in the common bathtub that served about 30 men. There were no clothes closets. No one had any spare clothing, anyway, so closets would have been a waste of space. And there was no hot water for shaving.

Certainly many disadvantages, but then what do you expect for 75 cents a week?

The question of food was the next matter. By walking along the Main Street and eyeing windows judiciously, I discovered that it was possible to have a meal for five cents. This consisted of toast and coffee. I could have had spaghetti, pork and beans or hamburger for the same price. Maybe not nourishing but filling. It is surprising that these places make money, but they apparently do. Anyway, the daily menu and the price remain unchanged.

If I did not want to go into such a "restaurant" it was easy to enter a bakeshop, buy six doughnuts for five cents and take these back to my lodging house and eat them with a glass of water. Ten cents daily went in this manner until I felt the need of a real feed. Then, going extravagant, I splurged with 15 cents. For this I had bean soup, pork sausages, mashed potatoes, rice pudding, bread, butter and coffee. A meal fit for a king, the way I was feeling.

But I couldn't afford it.

Of course, I could have gone to the "Sally Anns" or "Andy's" as they call some of the places where meal tickets are given out.

Walking around the streets in that district, I was approached many times for "enough" for a cup of coffee or bread. My answer to all was the same: "If I had it, I'd eat myself."

The days passed, and so did the week, but not quickly enough. At the end of that time my two shirts and handkerchiefs were dirty, my one pair of socks in holes, and I needed a hot bath. I had one.

Included in my $1.50 was no allowance for tobacco. That I had the foresight to buy ahead.

I did not like the experience, but I found for myself that body and soul could be kept together on that amount for one week. Clothing, laundering, etc., would have been extra, but for the bare purpose of keeping body and soul together, you can get by on $1.50.—J.C.R. in Montreal Gazette.

Brothers Under The Bonnet

A party of 100 British automobile drivers in forty cars is coming to this country next June for the World's Fair and a 2,000-mile look at the country as far west as Chicago and south into West Virginia. Some one had the happy thought, when it was definitely known that King George and Queen Elizabeth are coming here, that we might dress somebody up as Paul Revere and send him out to warn people that the British are coming. The suggestion is more than ever appropriate now that so many British of less exalted station are coming.

We have already had Anthony Eden, and the only shots fired at him from behind trees, rocks and fences by embattled Americans were candid camera shots and friendly greetings. There seems to be little doubt now that preceding the royal visit and in its wake many Britishers from many walks of life will come over to have a look at the country which their ancestors 165 years ago didn't itself begin to appreciate.

Of all British classes and occupations it is the motorists who should come nearest to understanding and liking the United States. The two peoples are in nothing so close together as in their response to the automobile. When the British speak speak of skyscrapers at home they still have in mind something eight or ten stories in height. When they go in for what they fondly think is American slang the effect is sometimes painful. When they resort to American ice cream and soda the less said the better. They do come fairly close to us in the films and in their 50 per cent interest in the language of Shakespeare and Kipling; but even the common tongue and the common screen betray differences in pace and accent.

But by all accounts a British automobile. When the British mobilist are brothers under the hood. It is the one field in which the two national tempos are alike. We may sum it all up by saying that the American homicide rate is ten to twenty times as high as the British homicide rate, but automobile killings are just as high in Great Britain as in this country, relatively to the number of cars.—New York Times.

OUTLAW THEM

Has it occurred to the Dominion Government that some good might be done by prohibiting the importation or manufacture of pistols and revolvers except by special permit and for certain specified purpose? There would, admittedly, be some smuggling and some "bootlegging" done; but close watch at border customs offices and strict inspection of manufacturing plants would keep breaches of the law to a minimum.

Another precaution that would be useful would be in restriction of the sale of revolver and pistol ammunition. A gun is of no use without cartridges; so a law requiring registration of every sale and restricting sales to none but those in possession of permits—said permits to be produced at time of sale—would make it hard, if not impossible, for a crook to get supplies.

It is quite evident that the present law is not effective; stronger restrictive measures are imperative if there is to be any prospect of reducing the number of hold-ups and armed robberies.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

LANARKSHIRE MYSTERY

Early one morning, forty years ago, Miss Louise Young and sister walked out of an eight-roomed villa in Alexandra-street, Airdrie, Lanarkshire, locked the door and as far as their fellow townspeople were concerned, vanished.

Since then this house of solid red sandstone has remained empty.

No one in the town can say why the sisters left or where they went.

But every year the sum of £141 which includes assessed rental and rates, is paid by a firm of lawyers to Airdrie Town Council.

"The sisters were very reserved and nothing was known about them," said a neighbor.

"They walked out of the house one morning after breakfast.

"The remains of the breakfast are still on the table as they left them.

"It is said that the house was haunted, but no one knows why it should be.

"So far as is known no one has entered the house since the sisters left.

"The curtains on the windows are mere dusty shreds, and the windows have never been cleaned."—London Sunday Express.

KING IBN SAUD

European nations are trying to flirt with King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia. They see in him a possible leader of a pan-Arab state. Such a grouping might include Egypt, and it might only take in the Arab tribes along the Red and Mediterranean Seas in Asia.

From Damascus, the oldest city in the world, the Arab political leaders are pouring out their propaganda. They hope to cement the various tribes into one mobile unit which will act under a recognized leader.

There are about 40,000,000 Arabic-speaking people, but not all of these would be included in an Arabian kingdom. There are some 17,000,000 in Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Yemen, Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Kuweit, Bahrein Islands, Trucial Sheikdoms and Qatar, Oman and Aden. Then there are some 15,000,000 in Egypt. The others are in French and Spainsh Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia and Libya. It is the Arab groups in the Near East which are causing concern. Ibn Saud is a powerful leader and his friendship is sought by European leaders.

The old policy of divide and rule will be threatened in the Near East if all the Arabs decide to sink their personal differences to get behind one strong Arab movement.—W. L. Clark in Windsor Star.

HITLER'S MENU

He knew that, just as Czechoslovakia was Mr. Hitler's soup, so Rumania is the fish—with the Ukraine as the roast. The exact order of Mr. Hitler's menu is uncertain. The direction of his moves, however, is clear, and it stands to reason that, although he has no thought of trying to detach the several hundred thousand Germans who now live under the Rumanian flag and does not now contemplate annexing any of Rumania's territory, he is determined to control Rumania's economics—and to do so even more surely and effectively than Germany did after the invasion of Rumania during the World War. Anything which the Rumanian government—which means King Carol—can do to make it more difficult for Germany to realize this ambition may well prove useful to his country. Rumania cannot, of course, escape the German economic yoke. But it still hopes to be able to make the best possible terms.—N.Y. Herald-Tribune.

ITALIAN STUDENTS DEMAND FRENCH TERRITORY

Shouting students are shown demonstrating before the "Popolo D'-Italia", Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper, as they demand that Italy take forceful measures against France for the return of Tunisia, Corsica, Nice and Savoy, once Italian, now French territory. Foreign Minister Georges oBnnet of France declared that France would never yield an inch of territory to Italy, and that any attempt to force her to do so could have no other outcome than war.

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW

And it won't be long in more ways than one, which is to say that soon all the fashionable Beau Brummels about town will be wearing the new short coat as introduced here by Cyril Mills (left), when brother Bernard (right) unveiled a memorial to James W. Selby in London, England, recently. Selby was the greatest coaching whip in British history.

BARCELONA DRIVE BY INSURGENTS IS SLOWING DOWN

Casualties on Both Sides Now Estimated at 10,000

OBJECTIVES OUTLINED

Hendaye, France, Dec. 27 (AP)—Powerful Insurgent fighting columns, badgered everywhere by fierce Catalonian counter-attacks, forged their way slowly eastward today over rugged territory toward the heart of the government stronghold in northeastern Spain.

On the fifth day of General Franco's offensive aimed ultimately at Barcelona, the government capital, casualties on both sides were well above 10,000 of the 500,000 total of fighters.

An exact record of ground won by the drive was obscured by communiques flatly contradicting each other.

Vilanoca De Meya Taken.

In the north, however, Franco's resident mountain troops appeared to have taken the town of Vilanova de Meya, at the end of an improved highway leading to Artesa, "the key to Catalonia" and 34 miles northeast of Lerida.

In southern Lerida province, according to Insurgent radio bulletins issued under strict censorship, the Insurgent command was said to have announced the capture of Borjas Blancas, about 35 air miles from Tarragona and 16 miles southeast of Lerida.

All advices from Government Spain denied the Insurgents were even within field-gun shot of Borjas Blancas.

Despite the conflicting communiques, however, Franco's objectives have become clearer to observers on the border. After he broke through government defences in two of the four main points attacked, he fell back on his usual tactics of biting off chunks of territory by quick, hard thrusts and then reducing them with strong "clean-up" squads.

Loyalists Fight Back.

The drive has been far from easy, however. Franco's own official military dispatches reported the enemy troops "fight back ferociously, contesting every inch of the way".

Advices from Government Spain indicated the Barcelona high command believed the strength of Insurgent forces in the two drives precluded another offensive somewhere in the north. They were reported to have called troops and guns from other sectors down to reinforce the battered Tremp and southern Lerida sectors.

JOHN MOLSON OF MARYSVILLE HURT

Two persons were critically injured in accidents in this district over the Christmas week-end. Both were injured in and near Napanee.

John Molson, a farm hand near Marysville, was found in a ditch about a mile west of Napanee in a critical condition. He was the victim of a hit-and-run motorist.

Two young boys, walking on the highway Saturday evening, noticed Molson walking ahead of them. According to Chief Watts of Napanee, the boys said he staggered. A car collided with the man and knocked him into the ditch. The two boys, 12 and 14, ran all the way home to inform their parents of the accident. The injured man was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital where he is suffering from concussion, fractured skull and compound fracture of the right leg. Dr. Galbraith of Napanee is attending him. Traffic Officer Jillings is investigating the accident.

Man Critically Hurt

James Lang of Napanee was critically injured in a collision in Napanee last night. Lang was a passenger in a car driven by Merle Brown of Napanee. The Brown car was proceeding east on Thomas Street and, turning into the Belleville road, collided with a car driven by Dr. Vincent O. Hart of New York, who was visiting in the neighborhood. Lang was thrown through the windshield by the impact. He was rushed to the Kingston General Hospital.

Allan Kelleher,, 12, of 163 Church Street, had a narrow escape from death while sleigh-riding here, yesterday. The boy was with a number of other boys on Church Street hill. While riding down the icy road, he passed completely under a car driven north by Borden Sherry, 23 Church Street. The boy and sleigh continued down the street unharmed.

Window is Broken And Charge Laid

Skidding forty feet on the wet slippery roads early on Saturday, a car said to have been driven by J. R. Duncan, Trenton, crashed into a building that houses the barber shop of B. P. O'Grady on West Bridge Street, smashing a plate glass window measuring eight by five feet by the force of the impact, and skidding another eighteen feet before coming to rest completely turned around, eighteen feet from the scene of the accident.

Fortunately there were no pedestrians on the sidewalk at the time of the accident. Detective Fred Isard, who investigated, stated that charges of reckless driving would be laid against Duncan who was arrested by the police officers.

AUSTRIAN EXILE

Vera Freudenfeld, Austrian ski champion and daughter of a prominent Austrian chemist, is pictured when she arrived in Montreal to spend Christmas with her fiance, a New York surgeon. Miss Freudenfeld stated that her father was held in a concentration camp for 15 weeks and is now a refugee in Praha. All their property has been confiscated by the Nazis.

FASCIST PRESS ATTACKS FRANCE

French Note Says Country Will Not Cede Any Territory

Rome, Dec. 27 (AP) — Formal French notice that not an inch of France's territory in Africa or anywhere else would be ceded to Italy drew new attacks today in the Fascist press.

Il Messaggero asserted France herself had upset Mediterranean equilibrium in the negotiation of a yet unratified treaty with Syria which, the paper said, gave France "notable advantages and privileges of a military character". The treaty was designed to terminate France's Syrian mandate and establish Syria as an independent country.

The French Ambassador sent a note to the foreign office yesterday refusing Italy further colonia grants. It was a reply to an Italian communication holding invalid the 1935 Italian-French agreement on positions in North Africa.

Il Popolo di Roma said a part of the French press was leading "natural Italian aspirations" with "provocative language" to alarm British ojpinion.

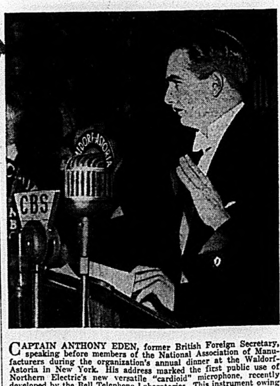
Perim Key to Red Sea.

Commenting on a statement made by a French writer in a London paper that the "fate of Djibouti (Red Sea port in French Somaliland) is the fate of Aden (seaport and British protectorate in Southwest Arabia)," Il Popolo di Roma said:

"Let it be said for the peace of this writer—who does not know or pretends not to know that the southern key of the Red Sea is the important Island of Perim (Arabia) over which the British flag flies—that if Djibouti commanded the entrance the English would have taken it before the French."

Italians charged that Premier Edouard Daladier of France was trying to prevent Great Britain from seeking a settlement of Italian claims against France and described Daladier's forthcoming trip to Corsica and Tunisia as having a political and military character. Some editors asserted one of the premier's chief aims was to make more difficult the appeasement mission of Prime Minister Chamberlain when he comes to Rome Jan. 11.

Famous Speaker Initiates New "Mike"



CAPTAIN ANTHONY EDEN, former British Foreign Secretary, speaking before members of the National Association of Manufacturers during the organization's annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York. His address marked the first public use of Northern Electric's new versatile "cardioid" microphone, recently developed by the Bell Telephone Laboratories. This instrument owing to its unusual characteristics, enables radio engineers to select sounds from any direction and to suppress the effects of unwanted noise.

ACCLAMATIONS MOUNT STEADILY

Many Towns and Municipalities Will Not Have Elections This Year

(By The Canadian Press)

Clearing the way for municipal elections next Monday, hundreds of candidates in all parts of Ontario will qualify today. Nominations were filed yesterday as a cleanup, many centres having held elections Dec. 5 last.

Acclamations mounted steadily as nominees withdrew. Mayors were elected in at least 11 towns and cities and about 65 Reeves gained posts by acclamation. J. R. Joyce was named Mayor in Welland after T. J. Hardy declined to stand for office.

Indications were that competition will be keen in many centres, should favorites nominated allow their names to go before the voters. In Mount Brydges, recently the scene of a bank robbery, however, the situation was different.

No one wants the job of governing the western Ontario police village. No names were forwarded yesterday for the three-man Board of Trustees. Arrangement will be made for another nomination meeting shortly.

Mayors were acclaimed in Ridgetown, Campbellford, Copper Cliff, Coniston, Blenheim, Welland, Palmerston, Burlington, Uxbridge, Preston and Bothwell. No women were named in the mayoralty field but a small number were nominated for other positions.

The nickel belt towns of Copper Cliff and Coniston returned their 1938 councils. Mayor E. A. Collins will serve his 10th term in Copper Cliff while it will be the fifth term for Mayor E. T. Austin of Coniston. Alex McNiven, Copper Cliff councillor, will serve his 21st year as a civic father.

PAN-AMERICAN PARLEY ENDED

130 Resolutions Signed Before Meeting is Closed

Lima, Peru, Dec. 27 (AP)—Delegates of twenty-one American Republics today wrote the final chapter of the eighth Pan-American Conference which was capped by a declaration of continental solidarity for defence against aggression.

The last scheduled act before the final session this evening is the signing of the meeting's fruits embodied in approximately 130 resolutions.

In four languages—French, English, Portuguese and Spanish — the acts are designed to link American Republics closer in mutual defence, facilitate their communications and improve their cultural relations.

Foreign Minister Carlos Concha of Peru, as president of the conference, is to speak at the final session. A farewell dinner given by President Oscar Benavides will follow and many delegates will go from there to Callao to board the liner Santa Maria which sails the following day for New York.

WALL SAFE OPENED, $100 IS TAKEN

Forcing their way through a rear window, thieves broke into the property of the Swift Company on Station Street early Sunday morning and escaped with over one hundred dollars in cash from a wall safe. The loot was divided into denominations of ten, five, two and one dollar bills. A package of office receipts and other office papers are also reported missing. Police are investigating.

The small wall safe was smashed as the thieves made their way into the receptacle.

SONG ENDED SADLY

Mary Martin, latest toast of Broadway, danced to her dressing room with the sound of applause ringing in her ears after singing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," only to receive the news that her father had died in Texas. News of his death was kept from her until after her performance, for fear the shock would be too great.

BEATRICE LILLIE STARS IN PLAY

Is on Stage Ninety Per Cent of Time in Coward's Drama

Boston, Dec. 27—(AP)—With the Hub rustling with more than usual anticipation, Noel Coward, the drama's golden boy, last night unfolded for the first time on this continent his sprightly new musical revue, "Set to Music," starring Beatrice Lillie of Toronto, and one time student of St. Agnes School, Belleville.

Although Coward was not listed to act—this time he was merely the author - composer — ticket speculators had no trouble demanding—and getting—$10 for standing room at the pre-New York premier.

Despite the absence of plot—there were 20 separate scenes, each based on a musical number—the author managed to weave a thread of continuity through the evening by means of caricatures of the "idle rich," or as he put it in one song, of "Children of the Ritz."

But it was Miss Lillie, star of a cast that was 75 per cent British, who overcame any lack of plot. She was on the stage 90 per cent of the time either as a secret service spy in Russia, or astride a snow white horse lampooning Kirsten Flagstad singing "Yo-ho" in "Die Walkuere." It was her first stage appearance here in two years.

POULTRY THIEVES ACTIVE IN CITY

It wasn't much of a Christmas joke, but Jack Bird living at 67 South Church Street hopes that the thieves who captured his two prize white ducks and a white rooster, decapitated them and left the heads lying in his backyard in a pool of blood, enjoyed their holiday dinner.

For all that was left of his prize poultry were three bleeding heads when Mr. Bird investigated the strange noise in his yard.

Detective Fred Isard investigated the theft and the tell-tale bloodstains led him along a trail. Some distance on the bloodstains were missing and the officers of the law lost the trail.

There is but one law, the law of love, but its applications are infinite.

Young Astrologer Gives 'Low-Down' On Cinema Stars in Coming Year

Hollywood, Dec. 27 (AP)—In 1939, if an astrologer's predictions are right, Tyrone Power will marry and Joan Crawford will fall in love. . . .

A little girl named Patsy Lee Parson will rival Shirley Temple with an appealing performance, perhaps in "Gone With the Wind".

Robert Taylor will remain a bachelor.

Gracie Fields, knock-about English comedienne, will score a hit with the American public.

Difficult shoals loom up and must be avoided by the marital barks of Errol Flynn and Lili Damita, John Barrymore and Elaine Barrie, Alice Faye and Tony Martin, and Jon Hall and Frances Langford.

Thus the course of movietown is projected by Norvell, a young astrologer, who annually digs down into a bag of Zodiacal signs for hints of what each New Year portends for human stars.

Predicted Rift.

Last December, he recalls, he predicted Bette Davis' matrimonial rift, Mae West's decision to turn producer, and further legal difficulties for W. C. Fields. He rang the bell on these.

He went amiss in predicting marriage for Carole Lombard, but he is confident this ultimately will come true, particularly since Clark Gable announced he would ask his wife to divorce him.

Looking into the future, Norvell says he sees Shirley Temple retaining her standing as No. 1 box office star in 1939 and continuing to be prominent on the screen as an adult in later years.

Hedy Lamarr, he says, "will capture much of Greta Garbo's fading glory and probably marry within a period of 18 months."

As for Joan Crawford, who's estranged from husband Franchot Tone, "she will fall in love in 1939 and marriage is shown for her again by 1940. It should prove a happy one."

PLANS TO PLACE MILLIONS OF IDLE BACK INTO WORK

Commerce Secretary Hopkins Discusses Possibilities With Business Heads

10 MILLION UNEMPLOYED

Cooperation of Employers Sought to Give Productive Work

Washington, Dec. 27 (AP)—Commerce Secretary Harry Hopkins, it was learned today, is considering a country-wide drive to put millions of unemployed men and women back to work in private industry in the United States.

The man who formerly directed the United States Government's vast work relief program has discussed the possibilities of such a campaign with business leaders here and in New York.

Reaching into every city and town, the drive would be aimed at getting employers to cooperate in giving productive private work to as many as possible of the country's more than 10,000,000 unemployed.

Underway By Spring.

Some well-informed persons said business leaders who had studied the plan professed to see in it considerable merit as a means of directly attacking the unemployment problem.

Methods for conducting the campaign are said to have been developed into a fairly definite program, so that it could start within a few weeks and be well underway by spring. It thus could take advantage of whatever impetus commerce and industry receive from the usual spring improvement in business conditions.

Transients Given Christmas Dinner By Local Merchant

It wasn't any different from any other night, but perhaps one or two of the 'knights of the road' who sought lodging at the police station on Christmas Eve did have a qualm or two. However, they asked to be allowed to grab forty winks in the camparative warmth of the police station, and kindly officers who had been playing "Good Samaritan" all evening to those of the boys who were blessed with more than the transients share of this world's goods, took them in with all the holiday spirit that generally characterizes the "boys in blue" at this time of the year.

But the "knights" met with a welcome surprise the next morning. At least one merchant thought of these more or less wanderers of the Canadian highways, who seek a livelihood from door to door. For the next morning thanks to Luckins' Butcher shop, these gay laddies, some of them grey haired and grey bearded, some of them young and optimistic were treated to a real old-fashioned Christmas dinner through the generosity of this far-seeing generous business man. He forwarded tickets for a hearty Christmas dinner to the boys of the road, and they with all the appetite usually connected with the "knight of the road" took advantage of the repast with many an unuttered word of thanks to their unknown benefactor.

FICTITIOUS BILLS ARE BEING PASSED

Residents of Belleville and district are warned by local police that Mexican bills to the value of ten dollars are being circulated by men said to be working eastward from Brighton over the week-end.

One or more of the bills are said to have been passed in the lakeside town during the holiday with operators working in an easterly direction.

A few weeks ago a number of local merchants were victimized by sharpers who passed fictitious Mexican five peso notes which were claimed to have been an almost replica of Canadian five- dollar bills.

COLD WAVE HITS NORTHERN STATES

Full Force of Severest Weather to Arrive in East Today or Tomorrow

Chicago, Dec. 27 (AP)—The most severe cold wave of the season advanced across the northern half of the United States today.

Temperatures ranging to 10 below zero prevailed from the Pacific northwest to the Great Lakes region as the frigid blasts moved eastward.

Weather observers predicted the full force of the cold wave would reach the Atlantic seaboard tonight or tomorrow and that the bitter weather would stay for several days.

Snow and sleet accompanied the Arctic winds into the midwest and northwest. The cold dipped into Oklahoma and forecasters said it would be felt as far south as Florida.

Sub-zero weather plagued the Dakotas, Minnesota, Montana and Wyoming, with lower temperatures in prospect. Snow, rain and stiff winds heralded the approach of the cold wave in the east.

Storm warnings were displayed on Lake Michigan and from Cape Hatteras to Eastport, Me., on the Atlantic coast.

Several hundred motorists were stranded from three to four hours in western Pennsylvania last night by snow and sleet.

Trees Uprooted.

A windstorm in Western Pennsylvania and Southwest Virginia unroofed buildings, uprooted trees, and disrupted power and communication lines. Part of a hospital roof at Latrobe, Pa., was torn away and 75 patients were left in darkness for more than a half an hour when power lines snapped.

Several inches of snow fell in Western North Carolina and Southwest Virginia. A heavy rain hit New York City while upstate New York received a heavy fall of snow. Many fatal automobile accidents in Ohio were attributed to heavy, wet snow and rain.

A 50-mile north wind scattered a haze of dust in central and northern Oklahoma and shattered windows in Oklahoma City. Two women were injured by falling glass. Temperatures throughout the state dropped below freezing.

The temperature fell 30 degrees overnight in Chicago. A low of 13 above zero was forecast for the city.

VETERAN LEADER OF LABOR DIES

Emile Vandervelde Was One of Belgium's Signers of Versailles Treaty

Brussels, Dec. 27—(AP)—Emile Vandervlede, 72, veteran leader of the Belgian Labor Party and one-time head of the Second Internationale, died today.

He was one of Belgium's signers of the Versailles Treaty. His political positions included the vice-premiership and health ministry.

Vandervlede, who suffered from heart disease, became ill Sunday night and died early this morning.

Known as the "mother-in-law of cabinets" because of his influence, the veteran Socialist had lectured in South America and visited the United States in 1914 to put Belgium's case before President Wilson.

Political observers believed Belgium's Labor Party as at present constituted would pass with its leader and that the group would be transformed along the more conservative lines advocated by Premier Paul Spaak.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Seating Plan

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are giving a dinner bridge at a hotel. Dinner will be served in a private dining room from an oblong table, at which the guests will be seated on both sides. The table is wide enough to accommodate two at each end, and that arrangement will likely be used. We are using place cards, and naturally, are not having a husband and his wife sitting next to each other.

1—Should my husband and I be seated next to each other, at one end of the table, should we be at opposite ends, or should we just be seated among the guests? The hotel is supplying waiters and we are trying to have every detail arranged so that there will be no "consultations".

2—Cigarettes will be passed with the coffee. Should my husband leave the table to get these from a side table and start them on their rounds, or should the waiter look after this detail?

Althea

1—In order to give your dinner as much as possible the effect of a dinner in your home, I suggest that you plan every detail as near as you can to the way you would give a dinner at home. So I suggest that you, as hostess, sit at one end of the table, and your husband, as host, sit at the end of the table opposite you. Besides the fact that this will abide by the conventional seating of the hostess and host it also means that you can divide between you the "social care" of the guests.

I admire so much your determination to have no "consultations" . . . .that's a perfect way of expressing the fact that you and your husband will do your thinking and planning before the party, not regretting omitted details after the party. I wish that all hosts would be so wise.

2—Serving of the cigarettes is a detail that should, be planned ahead of time with the headwaiter. He can easily take care of this by a direction to the waiter.

One more suggestion: if possible, your seat should be the one facing the service-entrance—this makes it easier for you to "keep an eye" on the details of service.

Formal or, Informal, Invitation?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—For a quiet wedding, is it necessary to send formal invitations? If not, is an informal note sufficient?

2—Is it proper for the bride to wear her travelling outfit with coat in the church and for the bridesmaid to wear a dress?

3—What toasts are necessary, if any?

E.

1—Formal invitations are appropriate only for a formal wedding. For a small, informal wedding, such as you are apparently planning, the invitations may be given verbally, or by notes. If the bride's mother is to be the hostess of the occasion it is she who usually writes these notes of invitation.

The bride may or may not wear her coat in the church . . . this depends on the type of ensemble and the type of coat. But it is appropriate for her to wear a traveling outfit, and for her attendant to wear a dress, street-length, of course.

3—Usually there is at least one toast the one customarily made by the best man to the bride and bridegroom. To this toast the bridegroom responds for his bride and himself.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Two Brothers in Love with the Same Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 years of age and in love with a man of 27. I went with his younger brother for a time, and through him met the older man. He comes over and takes me out about once a week. I'm sure I'm in love with him, and I believe he cares for me too. Both these boys give me books, and take me to the movies. My mother prefers the older man to his younger brother. Help me to decide.

Madge

An older man, who takes you to good shows and gives you books sounds all right to me. But my dear, 17, is pretty young for you to takes this friendship too seriously. You haven't told me why your mother objects to the younger brother.

Feels Old at 22

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I know you can help me as you have helped others. My boy friend and I have been going "steady" for almost seven months. When we first started going together, we never thought of love, but intended to be just good pals. And now we're in love and can't marry because he is still in school, and it will be several years before he can take care of me.

Please give me some good advice. Would you suggest that I wait three or four or maybe more years, or shall I give him up entirely? I'm quite old—almost 22. No matter what I do, I'm sure I'm always love only him.

Twenty

Goodness, what an old llady——almost 22. Don't you know, dear child, that 25 or 26 is considered by many as the ideal age for a girl to marry. I think you're very fortunate to be in love with a young man who has ambition and is working for a career.

You must be sensible and put all thought of marriage out of your heads till he can finish his education, Why not take up a course yourself? You might try domestic science or some subject in the vocational training or adult education courses, which are being offered in almost every city.

Praise for Strict Parents

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'd like to use a small space in your column. I read it most every day, and often wonder whether to feel sorry for some of the girls or laugh at them. They complain of "strict parents", and say they are not allowed to lead a "whoopee life", and smoke and drink. Oh, how I envy them! I wish I could exchange places with them for a week; they'd be glad to go back to their strict parents.

All the men in my family smoke and swear and drink. I see enough liquor to hate the sight of it. I don't see why some girls crave this sort of life. If it weren't for my wonderful mother and her high ideals I could not have graduated from high school. My father does not care what I do.

Unhappy Daughter.

It's a blessing that this girl has a kind and understanding mother, for she evidently has suffered much. I often wonder if girls who complain of "strict parents" really don't often feel a little pride in their parents. If a girl uses a little diplomacy and tact, and a little common sense, she can bring her parents around to her way of thinking, as a rule.

Here Are 4 Proved Ways To Relieve Discomforts of Colds

1 Head-Cold Sniffles and Misery. Melt a spoonful of Vicks VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water, then inhale the steaming vapors. These medicated vapors loosen phlegm, clear air-passages, make breathing easier. Then, at bedtime, massage throat and chest with VapoRub; leave bed-covering loose around neck so the medicated vapors, released by body heat, can be inhaled freely during the night. VapoRub's direct action brings comfort—relieves local congestion—helps you relax into restful sleep. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

2 Coughing or Sore Throat due to the cold. Use steam treatment outlined above. Also put a small lump of VapoRub on the tongue. It melts, trickles slowly down—bathes the throat with soothing medication which brings comforting relief to the irritated membranes and checks tendency to cough.

3 Night Coughs due to colds—especially of children—can often be prevented by massaging VapoRub on throat and chest at bedtime.

4 Chest Colds. Thoroughly massage VapoRub on throat, chest and back. Then spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub goes right to work—two ways at once: (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct on the irritated air-passages as its medicated vapors are inhaled with every breath. This direct double action loosens phlegm—eases coughing—clears the air-passages—eases muscular soreness or tightness—relieves local congestion.

Children's Colds are always a problem to mothers. Neglect is dangerous, because it often paves the way for more serious trouble. But constant internal dosing is risky, too. It often upsets a delicate little stomach, lowers resistance just when it is most needed to overcome the cold and ward off complications . . . It is for these reasons that most mothers depend on VapoRub to relieve the misery of their children's colds. With VapoRub there's no needless dosing, no risk of stomach upsets. It can be used freely; as often as needed, on even the youngest child.

Many Other Ways in which VapoRub can help you are described in the medically-approved directions folder that comes in each VapoRub package.

Happiness is Up To Optic Thalami

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IF WE examine a series of brains of the lower animals in an ascending scale up to man, we find that in the lower forms the top of the brain is given over to large masses of nervous ganglia which have to do with such things as smell, vision, hearing and motor co-ordination. The higher you go, the more these ganglia are covered over by real—it is difficult to find a word for it, but we will call it 'thinking' tissue. When you get to the human brain, the 'thinking' tissue is a great mass on top, and the ganglia that have to do with co-ordination are almost hidden underneath it.

But they are there just the same, and very important and necessary to our happiness they are, too. You have probably never heard of one of these groups of ganglia—the optic thalami—but the life, liberty and happiness of every one of you depend upon the intactness of your optic thalami.

Co-ordinate Sensation

The thalami are the centers for the co-ordination of sensation, as the cerebellum is the center for the co-ordination of motion.

It is not easy to describe just what the thalami do. They receive impressions of sense, especially those evoking pleasure and discomfort and consciousness of changes of state. Then they relay these to the higher brain centers. The higher centers are more discriminatory. For instance, if there is a disorder of the thalami, the patient says, "Something is happening to me: I am being hurt," instead of, "You are sticking a pin into the back of my hand."

The usefulness of the thalami probably lies in the absorption and sorting out of sensations. We are constantly having more sensations than we can handle. The thalami receive all these and classify them and adjudicate them. If they are important, the thalami send them up to the big boss.

The cerebellum does the same sort of thing on the motor side. To my way of thinking, the cerebellum is the most marvelous organ in the human body. It is the only one that is absolutely perfect, and woe be unto you if you lose the governing of your cerebellum.

Here is what the cerebellum does. You are sitting in your chair reading this newspaper. You decide to toss it on the chair next to you and with uncanny accuracy it lights exactly on the seat of the chair. If you measured the exact distance, the weight of the paper and the amount of muscular force required to throw it there, and then proceeded on the basis of your mathematical calculation, the chances are your attempt would be an abysmal failure. But the cerebellum does all this calculating for you and the result is perfect. It is, you see a combination of eye, equilibrium, awareness of muscular control and the balance of the body in space. All of the elements are centered and co-ordinated in the cerebellum.

Nice Extras For Holiday

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

WHILE the recipes today have been mostly selected with an eye to the holiday board, there are many, we are sure, that will find favor when there is a demand for something a little different.

First off come some grand dressings, starting with an oyster dressing that is really tasty. It calls for two cups bread cubes, one cup cracker crumbs, two cups oysters with liquor, teaspoon poultry seasoning, one-quarter cup diced celery, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper. Combine ingredients and mix well. If oyster liquor is not sufficient to moisten bread cubes, add meat stock of warm water. Use as stuffing or place in a greased dish and bake for 30 minutes in a 350 F. oven. It serves six.

Then here's an onion dressing that is also very tasty. It calls for six onions, two cups bread cubes, one-quarter teaspoon celery salt, one-half cup water, two teaspoons poultry seasoning, one-quarter cup chopped celery, teaspoon salt. Fry onions in one tablespoon butter until brown. Add remaining items and mix thoroughly. Use as stuffing or place in greased baking dish and bake 35 minutes in 350 F. oven. It's yield is one quart. It serves six.

A Holiday Dish

Egg noodle ring with fried apples is a nice holiday dish because it is different, yet just the sort of thing for this time of year. It needs a package of egg noodles, one-quarter teaspoon black pepper, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup melted butter, two jars cottage cheese, four to five apples and two tablespoons brown sugar. Cook fine egg noodles as directed, and drain. Add seasonings, two tablespoons butter and cheese. Blend carefully with a fork. Put mixture into well-buttered ring mold and reheat in hot water. Core and slice apples and fry in remaining butter. Sprinkle with brown sugar, cover and cook for two minutes. Turn out molded egg noodles on hot platter and fill with fried apples.

Here is a sauce that is delicious over puddings or sponge cake, or as a jelly roll filling—quite a versatile affair, we think. It requires one cup each brown sugar and white sugar, one teaspoon each salt and nutmeg, two tablespoons flour, two cups flour and two tablespoons butter. Mix together the sugars, salt and spice. Add two cups boiling water gradually, stirring constantly, and cook until sauce is thick and smooth. Add the butter, stir well and serve at once.

The Cradle Snatcher

By NANCY RHODES

McClure Newspaper Syndicate
WNU SERVICE

The Great Detective trembled with the certain knowledge that his golden-haired client's life was in peril. Violent hands might grip her slim throat at any minutes. A firm step on the sidewalk. Even now the fatal moment—

"Hello, Reggie," sallied the postman.

"Hello," answered Reggie shortly.

Funny how someone, coming on the scene suddenly, spoiled things. His golden-haired client vanished and in her place sat Ermintrude, the freak pumpkin his father paid him two cents a day to keep his eye on. Mr. McWhortle intended to exhibit Ermintrude at the county fair, and he was afraid that old Bysther Brown, who lived across the street and who also exhibited, had evil designs on her.

The Great Detective sighed heavily, for detecting on Ermintrude was very dull work.

A bumping noise came from inside the house. That was mamma rolling off the fat she put on at the beach. A snoring noise from the guest-room window. That was the Cradle Snatcher taking her nap. Idly he wondered how much longer the Cradle Snatcher would stay and if Buzzy would marry her. Buzzy was horribly in love. But mamma was wild. Simply wild. Reggie had heard her say so himself.

It as she who had named Suzanne the Cradle Snatcher and who had said she was old enough to be Buzzy's mother and that her face was painted and her hair dyed. And Jane had added that Buzzy was a softly to be roped in by the first old hag who rolled her eyes at him.

The August sun scorched. Reggie was thirsty. He wandered into the kitchen after a drink.

Outside the guest room door he paused curiously. Mamma had said that she would like to get a good look at the Cradle Snatcher when she was asleep. It would be a revelation, mamma had added grimly. Cautiously the great detective applied an eye to the keyhole. He could see a hand on the pillow. A head with brownish fringe surrounding a bald spot as large as papa's. The doorknob yielded under his hand. He tiptoed to the bed and stared at the pale grease-covered face on the pillow. It was the Cradle Snatcher, all right. But such a changed Cradle Snatcher.

"She used disguises, too," thought Reggie wonderingly, as his eye caught the gleam of her beautiful golden hair on the bureau. There were the little yellow curls over the ears that he had seen Buzzy kissing. Over the back of a chair was her short blue dress. On the floor stretched a pair of flesh silk stockings. The Great Detective's eyes blazed. His breath came in little gasps. He had an idea!

Hurrying home with an abstracted frown on his face as he saw Buzzy swinging up Elm street in front of him, Reggie broke into a cold sweat and then broke into a run. There would be the dickens to pay if Buzzy got home first!

"Everything's on the table," said mamma, looking at Buzzy kind of mad, as she had ever since she had seen the Cradle Snatcher.

"Where's Suzanne?" asked Buzzy, determinedly cheerful.

"I saw something that looked like htr sprawling out in the pumpkins." answered mamma.

"In the pumpkin patch?" repeated Buzzy, puzzled, staring out the window. From the house he could see the Cradle Snatcher's golden hair gleaming in the green leaves, above a glimpse of her blue dress. He started towards the garden.

"Wait, wait, Buzzy," pleaded the Great Detective, following as well as a feller could whose knee had turned to water. "I gotta explain!"

But Buzzy was staring blankly at Ermintrude's knobby head, one side of which was resplendent with Suzanne's beautiful golden hair. The Cradle Snatcher's short blue dress had been stuffed with dead grass, likewise her flesh colored stockings. From the road or from the house Ermintrude looked like a woman asleep in the garden.

"I did it," wailed the Great Detective, scared at the sight of Buzzy's white face as he examined the golden wig. "I disguised Ermintrude to keep Bywather Brown away. I borrowed Su anne's hair. She was asleep and wasn't using it. It was on the bureau...."

"Never mind, kid," said Buzzy mumbly. For a minute Reggie thought he was going to cry. But he just started toward the house with the golden hair in his hand.

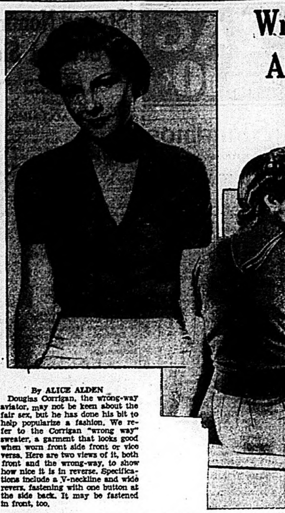
"Well, of all things," began Mrs. McWhortle. But she stopped short after a look at Buzzy.

"Take this up to Suzanne," said Buzzy harshly. "I'm going to camp with Bob Merrifield for a week or two. You can tell her. I'll leave right away." And he went up the back stairs two at a time.

"Puppy love," sighed Mrs. McWhortle. Reggie looked around for Pat, but he wasn't in sight.

"You're a good boy, Reggie," she added, patting the Great Detective on the head. This was even more surprising. He had expected the hair brush.

Wrong Way Also Right Way



By ALICE ALDEN

Douglas Corrigan, the wrong-way aviator, may not be keen about the fair sex, but he has done his bit to help popularize a fashion. We refer to the Corrigan "wrong way" sweater, a garment that looks good when worn front side front or vice versa. Here are two views of it, both front and the wrong-way, to show how nice it is in reverse. Specifications include a V-neckline and wide revers, fastening with one button at the side back. It may be fastened in front, too.

An Adventure In Lands Of Shadows

They heard a loud chirping

By MAX TRELL

IT WAS early in the morning. The children still were asleep. But Knarf and Hanid, who looked a good deal like the children but were only shadows, were already awake.

They could see outside into the garden where the trees were standing without leaves, for the cold wind had blown them off.

All at once they heard a loud chirping on the window-sill: "Wake up!...wake up in there! I'm hungry! I want my breakfast!"

The shadows sprang to their feet and looked at the window-sill. It was a sparrow.

"Ah—good-morning! Have you got my breakfast ready?" the sparrow chirped when he saw them.

"We're not supposed to get your breakfast for you," Knarf said.

"You'd better get your own breakfast," Hanid added.

He's Cold, Too

That only made the sparrow chirp more loudly than before.

"It's so cold there," the sparrow explained, "that all the grasshoppers and flies have disappeared—and all the seeds in all the flowers have been blown away. I can't get my own breakfast any more. There isn't any to be found. So I'd like the children to give me some."

"Oh!. Now we understand," said Hanid.

"But why don't you fly away where it's nice and warm? All the other birds have flown away" Knarf said.

The sparrow sighed. "Yes — they've all flown south all right — all the robins and meadow-larks and thrushes and swallows. But we sparrows are different. We stay up here where it's cold. And that reminds me—I'M HUNGRY!"

"Sh-h, you'll wake up the children," the shadows cautioned.

All at once the children opened their eyes. "There! Now you're going to catch it!" Hanid said to the sparrow.

But do you know what the children said? "O-oh! it's our friend the sparrow. He's come for his breakfast." Then they got a handful of crumbs and spread it on the window-sill. Aren't you glad?

BOOSTER

On dull Mondays, E. F. Franzel, a grocer of Slinger, Wisconsin, has a novel way of boosting business. An alarm clock, its face covered, is set for an unknown hour. Whenever the bell rings, Franzel does not charge for groceries being purchased at the moment. Curious, hopeful housewives prolong their shopping.—N. Y. World-Telegram.

"The American people will meet a rude awakening when they come to pay the national debt."— Harry Byrd.

EVERYDAY PHOBIAS

Probably a great many of us are suffering from a mild form of insanity if we consider the phobias that obsess many persons in one form or another.

For instance, says W. L. Clark in the Windsor Star, some persons write an important letter and have it sealed and stamped, ready for posting. But they fear they have put the letter in the wrong envelope, or they have not signed it, or have failed to insert an enclosure, and they open the sealed letter to find their fears were groundless.

Chemists sometimes fill a prescription and after the person gets it, the chemist is all in a dither because he fears he has put poison instead of something else in the medicine.

Doctors sometimes operate and sew up the wound and then are obsessed with the idea they have left some instrument inside the patient.

Business men sometimes go to safety deposit boxes and ... bank is closed they get the phobia that they have left their documents strewn all over the bank floor.

And then there are those individuals who try the door a half dozen times to make sure it is locked, or make two or three trips to the cellar to satisfy themselves as to the furnace being properly checked before retiring for the night.

These are all strange fears. Practically everyone has them or knows someone who has been obsessed by the phobias. Doctors claim it is a form of instanity. At that rate very few people are 100 per cent sane.—Kitchener Record.

EARTHLY GIANTS

From among the giant trees of Vancouver Island's green timbers there has been felled recently one of the largest Douglas firs ever taken out by lumbermen. Its top towered above its fellows two hundred and fifty feet into the heavens; its curcumference at the butt end measured twenty-four feet.

The tree provided a record of peculiar value to meteorologists. From it they have been able to check weather conditions over a period of ten centuries, proving that there has been little climatic or weather change during a thousand years.

Twenty feet from the swelling butt, a section of the tree seventy-five inches in diameter was sawn off to allow forest experts to determine its age from the annular rings of growth. Their findings revealed that it had germinated early in the tenth century.

From the seventeenth century when written records have been kept these varying widths of the annular rings corresponded with what scientists had charted concerning wet and dry seasons. They told the story that periods of extreme drought lasting for three years occurred with regularity in a cycle of every one hundred years.—Calgary Herald.

Caroline Chatfield Says today

Women as Tigerish Toward Those Who Would Take Their Position as they are Toward Those Who Would Take Their Men.

Nobody wonders that Mr. John Biggers, Chief of the Unemployment Census, sent his resignation to the President, along with his report that women in nation's labor were the crux of the unemployment problem. He discovered with his postcard census that here were approximately three million more women holding jobs or looking for jobs than had been expected. What man wouldn't be slow about tackling that problem? The hopeless feature of it is that every woman who holds down a job can justify herself and she's as tigerish toward anybody that would deprive her of her position as she is toward anybody that tries to take her husband or her boy friend.

Generally speaking a woman doesn't work for the love of it. She'd much rather have a man to work for her. But when you consider those who haven't any men to work for them and those that can't have the man unless they help with the hauling and those that are widowed by death or divorce and those harnessed to husbands who won't work and those whose husbands can't find work it's not surprising that the total reaches millions.

With the exception of a few giddy gals who want the excitement of a job and a few bored wives who think they'll go crazy or die of ennui if they can't connect with some outside interest and also a few who think it smart to be in the swim of business, the majority of those three million working gals are pressed into service by necessity to eat and also to buy bread for dependents.

Leaving out the few women who have talents that tear them for expression a married woman has far more pleasure and pride in a husband who can roll his own than she ever experiences in a successful career. If she's got sense enough to hold down a paying position she's got sense enough to know that it's as much agin nature for man to look to a woman for financial help as it is for her to look to a man to help her with the cooking and the mending and all the other distinctly feminine duties.

But what is she going to do when the husband can't earn enough to give their children educational and social advantages which are their heritage? What's she going to do when a tightwad doles out rent and grocery money and expects her to wear her trousseau until timo to don her shroud? What's she going to do when her old father and mother are dependent upon her help and her husband refuses point blank to contribute a cent to their support. What is she going to do when the husband was thrown for a loop by the depression, has never got his grip or been able to pull up again?

And then we haven't mentioned the widows left with children who would have to go into institutions if their mothers wouldn't work; and the divorcees who settled back to live on court decreed alimony that flickered and went out like a light. There would be enough in these classes to make an unemployment problem, leaving out the gals who work because they are ambitious and want to show the world how good they are.

There must be an answer and it will be found; but it will take a brave bunch to tell the business gals to their faces that they have got to withdraw from business in order to solve the unemployment problem in America. There's still plenty of tiger in the American female.

Solves Baby Problems For You

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.d

Here are answers to more questions about baby care.

Q. Is there danger that the baby might, if left to cry, be suffocated in the bed clothes?

A. Yes, indeed, there is. But this does not mean that the baby should not be allowed to "cry it out." Just be near enough to him, but not where he can see you, for such eventualities while you are carrying a disciplinary measure through.

Spanking Wise

Q. Some parents, especially fathers, will spank the crying baby to make him keep quiet. Is this a wise procedure?

A. No. Although a spanking might, in a few instances, afford sufficient physical shock to quiet the crying infant, it will rarely do so. It is difficult for the child to get the intended connection. Anyway, spanking is designed to give pain and pain induces crying, so the spanking tends only to promote the crying. Besides, the child already may be suffering from pain. A safer, saner way is to work wholly on yourself. After making sure the cries are merely for attention, see that he doesn't get what he cries for. Quit rewadring him for crying Then, if your guess about the cause of the crying was correct, the child, if you managed yourself well enough, will eventually cease crying and the crying habit will subside.

Don't Force Him

Q. Would you spank a child of two to make him pick up a block he had thrown in rage?

A. No. If he had good stuff in him, he might never choose to pick up that block though he were beaten almost to death. If, on the other hand, he had received a good, lusty slap or two on his bare, fat thighs immediately after he threw the block, he probably would not throw it again. I wish more fathers might discern the fine differences between these two typical situations and act accordingly. Then there would be fewer stubborn children.

Q. When should one begin to read to the baby?

A. As soon as he will look at the pictures while you read about them. Most children will enjoy this experience before the age of two, if given the opportunity.

SEEN ALONG FIFTH AVENUE

SEEING that this is a tremendous season for formal clothes, the manufacturers have brought out new lines of evening bags, the majority of which are reasonable, except for some luxurious novelties. In the latter class is an amusing bag that looks and opens just like a camera. It comes in various brocades, gold or silver kidskin, and is piped in gold and set with jewel-tone stones. A rich and beautiful bag is of brocade in glowing colors, with a very wide, flat cloisonne enamel top accented in stones that introduce colors in the brocade. It has double tailored handles. Another luxurious bag is of sequins, worked on top of each other in flower effect, the top one loose and quivering.

THERE is plenty of detail in many of the new formal frocks. A dress of midnight blue satin has a corseted waistline with fuchsia lacings, while the camisole top bodice is of pleated fuchsia chiffon with tiny ruffled edge. A matching pleated fuchsia chiffon panel is at the back beneath the drapery.

Severely smart

By VERA WINSTON

THE SMARTEST women are banking heavily on the high-necked, long-sleeved dinner dress to see them through a season of informal dinners. These dresses are severely smart, in strong contrast to the deep decollete evening frocks that also are popular. This gracious model is of midnight blue velvet and has a high neck, long sleeves and a bodice that accentuates the waistline, tying as it does in a knot. The sash is set in. The V-shaped section, from under the arm to the waist, drapes slightly where it meets the sash. The embroidery, which is of gold cord, is used in decorative stripes on the sleeves and across the neck.

TEST FOR HOSTESS IS HOLIDAY PERIOD

By ELEANOR ROSS

AT NO time of the year does it mean more to be a good hostess than during the winter holiday period. In the average household there's usually some entertaining during the summer. But then it is mostly supplying long, cool drinks for hot, thirsty guests, and if there is a cool porch or terrace or a shady nook, then that's all there is to it. It's too hot for small talk, for bright conversation, for seeing that the right people meet—it's too hot for anything except just sitting.

But now the picture changes. And the duties of the hostess become more defined, more thorough. She has to cope with invited guests and uninvited guests, friends who turn up after a long absence, casual acquaintances whom one has invited to call at some time or other, and who have waited till the holiday season to do.

Even a small dinner or luncheon party is apt to prove a trying affair to all but the experienced hostess. The menu has been found satisfactory. The rooms look charming, the decorations add to the scene. The table is attractively laid, the flowers, the glow of the candles and all to be wished for. But unless it is strictly a family gathering, there is the worry, and a big one it is, too, of how to seat the guests. The hostess, of course, takes the head of the table, while the host is seated opposite to her. Next comes the chief woman guest (usually decided by fame or importance), who sits at the right hand of the host, while the principal male guest is seated at the right hand of his hostess. These things all are done according to established precedent.

Test for Hostess

But now comes the test of the hostess. She has to place her guests so that they will enhance each other, so that the shy guest will be seated next to a sympathetic soul, so that the talkative guest will find him or herself next to a good listener. She sees to it that the conversation is kept pleasantly flowing, that there are no awkward gaps. She is ready with a remark to draw out a quiet person whom she knows would like to be pleasantly talking. Unobtrusively she sees to it that food and potables are passed and served, and no matter what goes on, or how anxious she is, never, never does she give the impression of being fussed or harassed.

The custom of serving coffee in the living room, away from the dining table, is one of the nicest things about a dinner party. Pouring the after dinner coffee is a gracious pretty task, a pleasing conclusion to a meal. If you are serving a cordial with the coffee, so much the better for those guests who enjoy it. The main thing is to have really good coffee, using a special blend for that purpose rather than the coffee used for everyday purposes.

See to it that there are plenty of ash trays scattered about at every strategic point so that there'll be no excuse for a cigarette or cigar to be put down where it shouldn't be placed. Keep cigarette boxes well filled with various brands and have some more on hand to replenish supplies. By this time, even if many of your guests were strangers when they met, the chances are that they are friends already and are busy admiring the social gifts of their hostess.

THE WINNERS

From time to time, particularly in England, the subject of women's rights finds a place in the Press, and just as often as it recurs, so does the outcry for increased franchise arise. On the face of it, it is difficult to know just how much more liberty women consider their just due. As these controversies reach the peak of virulent outbursts the participants refer to themselves —for, for the most part, they are women — as "chattels," "drudges", "legal minors," and the like. There is also the age-old argument of one-sided marriages; it being assumed, of course, that men get all the best of that bargain, whereas, if the cold truth were told, women score all along the line in the matrimonial battle. At their sole discretion the word "obey" may be omitted from the marriage service. Women have arrogated to themselves the right —which has been established in the English High Courts—to decide if and when they shall bear their husbands a child. They may, if they wish, go to work after they are married and their husbands cannot prevent them. But, be it noted, a husband is bound by law to pay his wife's income tax, no matter how much she earns or whether she decides to retain every penny of her earnings for herself, to save or to spend. Meanwhile, her husband's credit is hers to pledge for every reasonable necessity that may arise.—Johannesburg Times.

STREAMLINERS

When streamlining was starting its vogue, some railways put their engines in the shops and covered them with plates to give the appearance of streamliners. The idea was to create less wind resistance and give greater speed.

Railwaymen say that the scheme may have impressed some persons, but the old locomotives could tune up just as much speed without the fancy plates as they could scoot along at speeds getting on to 100 miles per hour and that will make a fast schedule on any railway.

The diesels go in for streamlining, but the ordinary looking locomotive pulls the other trains. Railwaymen like utility and they find that type of engine can travel over 1,000 miles without being put into the roundhouse.—W. L. Clarke in Windsor Star.

Africa Offers Beauty To Tourists

Beach in Southwest Africa

By TEMPLE MANNING

SOUTHWARD from where the Kunene river tumbles its waters into the white caps of the blue Atlantic, Southwest Africa runs its 1,000 miles of sand-duned coastline to the mouths of the dark continent's mightiest waterway, the Orange river. Its other frontiers are bounded north to south by Angola, Northern Rhodesia, Bechuanaland and the Cape Province of South Africa, and its territory includes more than 318,000 square miles.

This rich land, a land of unknown but enormous potentialities, is one of the German colonies mandated to the Union of South Africa by the Treaty of Versailles.

Set up Trading Posts

In the '80's Adolph Luderitz, of Bremen, Germany, acquired a strip of coastal land from a native chief and set up trading posts and factories, and from this beginning grew the colony of German Southwest Africa. It is a land well worth holding and fighting for, a fair, beautiful, rich land. Through the harbors of Walvis Bay and Luderitz flow the fruits of the land, fur pelts, beef, dairy products and minerals. Over the plains and hills railroads and new motor roads link remote spots with the towns, making it easy for the 31,000 Europeans and 328,000 natives to get about. And always the road runs through exquisite scenery, with a climate that makes traveling all delight.

Capital Beautiful

Windhoek, the capital, is beautifully located amidst colorful hills, 5,600 feet above sea level. Its summer climate is ideal, and people from all over the territory come to Windhoek for their vacation. It has just as big a crowd of transients in the winter. It is gay, charming and beautiful.

The municipality reminds one somewhat of a progressive American community, with plenty of boosters and folks pleased to show the visitors around. They can be proud though. The administration buildings, the flower-decked, wide avenues, the smart suburbs, the public gardens, the exhibition palace and park, the public swimming baths fed by nearby hot springs of therapeutic value, the 800,000,000-gallon domestic drinking water dam at Avis—these are all things that would be noteworthy in any community. And they are certainly outstanding in a land so remote.

There are beautiful churches and the schools are splendid. The whole town is so sweet and clean and delightful that, almost everyone we have met who has been there said that they felt like settling down there. It is that sort of a place!

Walvis Bay, the principal port, is a very different type of place. It is all commerce and extremely business-like, with extensive slaughter houses, cold storage plants and warehouses. At the whaling station hundreds of whales are brought in each year for reduction to oil and other products. But Walvis feels that this is not enough and is out to make itself a seashore resort.

ART WEST BARELY MISSED TACKLE OF GRIM REAPER

Argo Back-fielder Punctures Lung in 1934 and Thought Finished

FOUGHT WAY OUT

Could Have Been Playing With Duke if He Had Signed

Toronto, Dec. 27 (CP)—Art West, 21-year-old back-fielder with Toronto Argonauts, Dominion football champions, has evaded many tackles in his starry career, but one that got him down—and nearly kept him down—was made by the grim reaper.

In May, 1934, West punctured a lung by falling on a sharp piece of wood while engaged in schoolboy pranks at Toledo, O., where he lived. He fought for his life for many yeeks in hospital. Hospitalization over, he learned from medical authorities that he should pursue a life of quiet with sports banned.

However, West turned out with the Toledo high school team in the fall of 1934 despite pleadings of the coach and the youngster's father. West played the season with a sponge pad protecting the injury. He was the school's foremost backfielder.

In 1935, he moved to Toronto with his family and attended North Toronto Collegiate where he again starred. He wore the same sponge pad. When he went to Argos the next year, West discarded the sponge. Doctors pronounce him physically perfect.

Last year he was the leading hitter in the North Toronto baseball league with an average of .387 and was runner-up the past season. He also plays an outstanding game of basketball.

Might Have Been With Duke

Had the chain of circumstances been forged differently, it's possible West would be playing in the Rose Bowl football next week at Pasadena, Calif., for Duke University against University of Southern California.

At the time he was fighting for his life in Toledo hospital, a scout from Duke approached with full authority to offer West a college scholarship in exchange for his use by the Duke football team. West declined the offer, although he gives the Duke representative a portion of the credit for his survival.

West said that during the crisis of his illness, no one was allowed to see him and a nurse was posted as guard. The caller from Duke brushed aside the nurse and went to West's bedside.

Barely conscious and in a weakened condition, West heard the Duke caller say "come on kid. you're on your five-year line. Let's see you fight your way out." The caller then gently ruffled West's hair and was gone.

Young West is here today because he did fight so hard—like he does on the gridiron.

Mulcahy's Book Would Be a Best Seller In National Loop

Newton, Mass., Dec. 27 (AP) — Hugh Mulcahy, of Philadelphia Phillies, is writing a book that probably would be a "best seller" among National leaguers—but it never will go on public sale.

The young pitcher said today it might be titled "My Experience Against Certain Batters).

"I'm writing everything under the man's name," he explained. "You go over these past experiences with the batters so often that you know just what they like, where they hit and so forth. It helps"

There's a little psychology to this writing business, too. For atop each page, Hugh has written: "Don't walk him." Wildness has been one of the 25-year-old moundsman's big handicaps.

Mulcahy has been in the big leagues for a couple of years and last season won 10 games and lost 20 for the lowly Phillies

Many Long Distance Calls Reported by Bell Telephone Co.

Calls to British Columbia, Nova Scotia and Kentucky Are Made

NONE TO BRITISH ISLES

Personal greeting calls instead of the proverbial Christmas cards became more popular among residents of Belleville this season, it is shown by record of the local Bell Telephone Company exchange which reported long distance calls as far south as Lexington, Kentucky, west to North Dakota, and British Columbia and east to New Jersey from this city. Other distant provinces called included Nova Scotia and Alberta.

Total long distance calls registered at the local exchange showed 538 on December 24th; 528 on December 25th, and 334 on December 26th. This was a decided increase over the long distance calls one year ago, it was reported by Mr. G. W. Proctor, local manager.

Roads Still Open Though Travel Heavy

Roads were still open to the northern municipalities today, but traffic was being carried on with difficulty due to the heavy snow which alternately thawed and froze as temperatures dropped later in the day. An estimated ten inches of snow fell in Madoc section, and some drifting was reported in later advices received from there today.

The Belleville - Bancroft road was still open and traffic was possible it was further reported.

Government snow plows were reported out in some sections attempting the removal of the snow before the expected freeze following a scheduled cold wave from the west.

Stormy Nomination Meeting Seen at Sidney Town Hall

Contest for Reeve and Deputy - Reeve Assured

COUNCIL ACCLAIMED

Foxboro, Dec. 27—(Special)—A straight fight for the positions of Reeve and Deputy Reeve in the 1939 Sidney Council is promised the electors of the Township as the result of a very stormy nomination held in the Town Hall yesterday afternoon. The 1938 Reeve, Mr. Bush, will be opposed by Mr. B. O. Lott for the first position of the township, with Mr. Clem Ketcheson, the present Deputy Reeve being opposed by Mr. Samuel Nicholson. Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, ex-reeve of the township, was also nominated for the reeveship but declined to have his name placed on a ballot, giving as his reasons that he did not care to make it a three cornered fight. There will be no election for councillors as only two new ones were nominated, Mr. F. Campbell and Mr. H. Badgley and they refused to allow their names to stand so the three present members, Mr. S. Danford, Mr. B. Bleecker and Mr. H. Wilson received election by acclamation.

A. L. Burke, Chairman

After the nominations were over Mr. A. L. Burke, ex-reeve, was elected to act as chairman for the rest of the afternoon and after a few commentary remarks called upon Mr. Bush as the first speaker of the day. Mr. Bush, after thanking his nominator and seconder, launched into a detailed report of the past season's activities, stating that the present season's reduced tax rate was due to the Provincial Government relieving the township of Old Age Pensions, Pensions for the Blind and Mother's Allowances and also to the fact that the outgoing council had successfully petitioned for, and had received, a reduction in the township's equalization. Mr. Bush thanked the electors for the support which he had received in the past and stated that he was a candidate for the reeveship for 1939 and hereby asked for the electors' continued support.

Mr. Clem H. Ketcheson, deputy reeve, wished everyone the compliments of the season and then thanked his nominator and seconder for his nomination for the position of deputy reeve. Speaking as a member of the finance committee for Hastings County, Mr. Ketcheson told the electors that it cost Sidney Township approximately $7,000 as their share of the continuation and high school expenses for the year 1938, or an average cost of forty-six cents per day per pupil. Indigent hospitalization costs were up from the year before as also were the costs of justice administration. Returning to township affairs Mr. Ketcheson stated that during the year 1937 Sidney had put 3933 yards of gravel on the roads at a cost of $3,144, or an average cost of 79.99 cents per yard while in 1938 it had cost $3,661 to place 7,461 yards, the average cost being approximately fifty cents per yard. Mr. Ketcheson attributed this substantial reduction in the cost of gravelling mainly to the fact that the township had during the year purchased a new crusher and also to the fact that the township had seen fit to purchase a number of gravel pits from which they were now drawing their own gravel.

Keep Roads Open

Mr. Danford was the first councillor to speak and he referred to the abolishment of the four per cent penalty, which formerly had been imposed on tax-payers who had not paid their taxes by the fifteenth of December, and also mentioned the council's recent resolution to abolish Sunday dancing at Oak Lake. Township roads are to be kept free of snow this coming winter stated Mr. Danford and for this purpose the council had purchased a new tractor snowplow.

Mr. W. H. Nobes who has been the township clerk for twenty-two years was called upon to say a few words and at this point and after his short talk, Mr. Fred Wilson was called to the platform. Mr. Wilson thanked the electors for their past support and stated that he fully intended to be in the field again for another year. In referring to the crowded hall Mr. Wilson said he was glad to see such an interest being taken in municipal affairs because an interested council was only possible when there was an interested electorate. In continuing, he said that there had been nearly five mills lopped off the 1938 tax-rate, which had resulted in a considerable saving to the rate-payers but the two mill rate, which the township levied for township purposes, he assured them, was almost inadequate to pay all charities and have enough left to run the township business. Mr. Ben Bleecker told the ratepayers that the council had purchased a new crusher at a cost of $3,750 and had spent $11,099 on roads during 1938 but had received some $1,200 from the county for the use of the crusher during the same period.

Written Off Books

Mr. Bleecker explained to the ratepayers in detail the exact procedure which the council took in dealing with the matter of some four hundred dollars which a former tax collector, through the actions of his bailiff still owed the township. It would appear that the bailiff, a Mr. Foster of Trenton, had absconded with the money and Mr. Hamilton, the tax collector, thinking that his bond covered such matters refused to be responsible for the money. However, the council regarded the tax collector as responsible and threatened to sue for the money but after considering the matter thoroughly decided not to take court proceedings and the matter was accordingly written off the books.

The members of the outgoing council came in for a stiff going over, when Mr. B. O. Lott, candidate for the reeveship, came to the platform. Mr. Lott accused the council of slip-shod business methods in almost every department. He asserted, that the aforementioned tax collector was, and should have been held responsible for the taxpayers' money and further asserted that the tax collector should be bonded to cover such things as theft and fire as well as against the possibility of his absconding with the tax roll. Mr. Lott accused the council of unpatriotism, when they had made arrangements for the purchase of a snow plow, which was made in the United States instead of purchasing a Canadian made machine and asserted, that they had issued debentures to pay for the same. He also urged that something be done to ease the tax burden on the south nine townships and stated that the north part of the county was literally living on the taxpayers in the south.

Too Much Machinery

Mr. Nicholson, nominee for the deputy reeveship, stated that the county, in 1934, owed the highway department $175,000 but when this debt was written off in 1936 the county had reduced the tax-rate two and three tenths mills. However, the township did not see fit to pass this reduction on the Sidney taxpayers and then, when the Provincial Government took over the Old Age Pensions, the Mother's Allowance and the Pension for the Blind, the taxes were cut another four and seventh tenths mills making a total reduction of seven mills. This year the township taxes were cut but the council still retained 2 1-2 mills and said nothing about it to the taxpayers. Mr. Nicholson told the audience that the reductions, which were so noticeable this year were not the result of economy by the council but were made possible by the graces of the Provincial Government. The present council, he stated, were buying too much expensive machinery and the big gas and oil companies were receiving money, which should be expended within the township.

There were lots of men within the township, he said, who were only too anxious to work providing they had the chance and he also deemed it advisable to permit farmers the opportunity of drawing more gravel with the team and wagon instead of hiring truckers from outside the municipality to do the work. Mr. H. Badgley and Mr. Fred Campbell, who were nominated for the council both spoke a few words but, after thanking their friends for nominating them, stated that they would not be candidates for the 1939 council.

Not a Candidate

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater stated that he was not a candidate for the reeveship and said he had absolutely no intention of making a three cornered fight of it. After making a few comments on the financial statement Mr. Vanderwater asked if it were legal for the township to pay damages on cows, pigs and chickens, which were allegedly killed by dogs, and then, turning directly to the council he asked pointedly if they were aware that approximately one third of the wood, which was used at the county buildings came off the stump from Lennox and Addington county. In an abrupt change of topic, Mr. Vanderwater appealed to the electors to stand by Democracy and everything which it stood for, and further stated that he could see no way out of the present dilemma, which the world was in unless there eventually be a war between Democracy on one side and Communism on the other.

In Mr. Bush's reply to Mr. Lott he defended his actions as one of the Road and Bridges committee and in closing said that although he did not intend to stay in the council forever he thought that there was a possibility of Sidney being awarded the Wardenship for the coming year and appealed again to the electors for their support at the coming election. In his reply, Mr. Ketcheson informed the electors, that bonding houses would not bond tax-collectors for anything but personal liability and that a separate insurance would have to be taken out against theft and fire. The finances of the township were in splendid condition, he continued, and further stated that the auditor's report, which would be in the hands of the ratepayers shortly, would be found to correspond exactly with the present financial statement. Councillor Danford defended the council's action of deciding on a snowplow of United States manufacture, stating that he was responsible for the motion to accept the American tender, it being the lowest, and assured the electors, that the motion was made strictly in the interests of economy. In continuing, he stated there had actually been no order for the machine given and there would not be until the sanction of the department was received.

Three members of the Thurlow council who were in the audience, were asked to come to the platform and after a short address by Mr. Chas. Vanderwater the chairman called upon Mr. George MacDonald, Mr. H. Harrison and Mr. Seldon Homans, who in turn gave short talks to the electors of Sidney. After singing the National Anthem, the following men qualified as candidates for the election on the second of January.

For Reeve: Mr. Bush and Mr. B. O. Lott.

For Deputy Reeve: Mr. Clem H. Ketcheson and Mr. S. Nicholson.

Councillors: Mr. S. Danford, Mr. B. Bleecker and Mr. Fred Wilson.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and pop was trying to look absent minded while he pored himself another cup of coffee out of the perculator, him not being suppose to drink more than 2, and ma said, Willyum, I was thinking' seriously of having liver and onions for you tonite.

Can I believe my ears or is this some wild phantasy of my imagination without any basis is actual fact? pop said, and ma said, I dont wonder that you are surprised, because 't was only about 4 days ago that we had liver and onions, but I know how reasonably crazy you are about it.

Am I awake or am I dreaming? pop said. Am I floating on a silver cloud of justifiable anticipation or am I lost in a mocking maze of the stuff that dreams are made of? Am I pursuing a will of the wisk or have I really heard the sweet sounds that I think I heard? he said, and ma said, Anyway, now that you realise how thoughtful I was prepared to be in your behalf I hope you'll be equally considerate and not make any objection to going out to a resterant for dinner when I tell you that Nora had suddenly discovered that she simply must have this afternoon off for personel family reasons and I have 3 separate and distince engagements this afternoon, so there seems no other solution except a resterant. I hope you dont mind, Willyum? she said.

O dont mind anything, I'm full of opium and it's a womans world, pop said.

And he folded up his paper and left for his office.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 27—(CP)— The Toronto Market today was slow and a bit heavy from the opening except the base metal group where narrow gains predominated at noon. The London Market was closed and New York was inclined to mild weakness, two factors giving technical support to the Toronto decline. Trading fell off to only 188,000 shares for the first three hours.

Steels were the weakest of the industrials. National Steel Car lost a point and Dominion Bridge 1-2. Foods, papers and beverages held steady to strong and the senior oils were firm but for a 1-4 point loss for Imperial.

Augite traded actively at a slight advance and the higher-priced golds showed practically no change. Base metals ruled higher, including Nickel, Pend Oreille, Sherritt and Aldermac. In the western oils Home lost some ground while Okalta, Davies, Highwood and South End Pete posted minor gains.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Stocks generally turned in a closing performance in today's market, although a few aircrafts, rails and specialties managed to contest the trend with slight advances.

The opening was fairly active, but momentum diminished subsequently. Losses ran to a point or so near the final hour.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford By Financial Service

Few will regret the passing of 1938, as it was a year of disappointments from a market viewpoint. The volume of trading did not permit of any profits for the brokerage fraternity, and on the whole, the market movements precluded any good profits for the average trader, although an exception was noted here and there. 1939, it is felt, should be distinctly better than the year just coming to a close and a bullish market attitude appears warranted.

Developments in the Mining Industry as 1938 Draws to a Close Are at a Standstill

Only one new property of any importance was discovered during 1938 and that was Waite-Amulet, remarked an authority on mining to Financial Service on Friday. This is a pathetic state of affairs in a country like Canada, continued our friend. What is the reason, we asked. Shortage of funds to grub stake the prospector is the answer he frankly replied. Why should this condition exist? To which we received the answer that little or no money was coming in from England or the United States for this work and wealthy individuals in this country are not as keen to gamble a few thousand on this much needed work as they were. New properties must be found if the mining industry is to grow still further. Before this authority finished his cigar, we asked him what the remedy was. That question is not easily answered but the Governments and the Banks could help a great deal and probably a better market for the gold stocks would prove beneficial.

ENTERTAINMENTS

Christmas Concert at Rossmore

At Rossmore United Church on Friday evening a very successful Christmas concert was given by the Sunday School, of which Mr. J. L. Gerow is superintendent. The various numbers were given in a splendid way by the many taking part, and the audience was greatly impressed —with the ability and sincerity of the children. A very large crowd was in attendance, which was most encouraging to those in charge. The visit of Santa Claus was an exciting conclusion to an enjoyable evening.

After the National Anthem, the congregation sang "O Come All Ye Faithful." Rev. Mr. Harrison gave a very interesting address and introduced the superintendent Mr. J. L. Gerow.

The program was as follows: Recitation, Billy Boulter, The Twenty Sixth; Santa Claus is Coming to Town—Children; Guitar duet, Douglas Belnap and Bonnie Gerow; Recitation, by Donnie Belnap; Recitation, Fern Belnap, "The Decorative"; Solo, Barbara Boulter; Piano solo, Betty Reddick; Recitation, Joan Belnap; A Christmas Acrostic, Joy Belnap, Joan Belnap, Una Boulter, Frances Foster, Barbara Pollitt, Ellenore Boulter, Barbara Boulter, Mary Lou Thompson, Doreen Weese. The roles of the twins were very well taken and caused great amusement, while the acting of Bruce Thompson as detective and janitor who found out the secret was one of the highlights of the play. Those taking part were: The heavenly twins, Doug Redick and Bonny Gerow; Mrs. Barton, Mrs. L. W. Pollitt; Miss Samantha Brown, Miss Sylvia Redick; Sophronia Brown, Miss Pauline Thompson; Girls of the school, Misses Lillian White, Edna Belnap, Betty Redick, Babe Thompson, Irene Thompson, Laura Belnap, Maretta Russell, Emma Gerow, Detective and janitor, Bruce Thompson. Finding of Hat On Ice Near Water Indicates Drowning

Levack, Ont., Dec. 27 (CP)—Finding of a hat on the ice of nearby Windy Lake, in front of thirty feet of open water, led searchers to believe today Charles Imse, 58-year-old Ontario Forestry Branch employee, had been drowned while crossing the lake to spend Christmas with friends.

Imse left Sudbury, 35 miles southeast of Levack, last Wednesday to visit the lookout tower on the shore of the lake. He last was seen as he got off a bus at Levack station and struck out across the ice carrying a Christmas turkey and other groceries. He failed to arrive at the tower.

Chief Forest Ranger Harvey Strain headed a party of eight men that sought Imse yesterday. The ice was thin and barely thick enough to bear the weight of one man. The searchers were tied together with ropes with an anchor man left on shore. The hat on the ice and the open water before it convinced the searchers Imse had been drowned.

Christmas Day In City Churches

Christmas services in churches of the city on Sunday were attended by large congregations. Festal music for the day and season was played and sung and the messages from the pulpit all dealt with the Nativity and the influence of the life of Jesus on social and individual life.

At Bridge Street United Church in the evening there was a candlelight service in which carols and ancient music was sung.

Large congregations worshipped at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church where in the evening part I. of Handel's "Messiah" was rendered by the choir in a very effective manner under the direction of Mr. Kilgour.

At Christ Church on Christmas Eve there was a carol service followed by Communion Service. On Christmas Day there were three communions and in the evening a carol service.

These was special Christmas music and sermons at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

Special services were held at Holloway Street United Church, with sermons by the Rev. R. E. Newman and music by the choir and congregation. At Tabernacle United Church the Sunday School and congregation united at the morning service and in the evening the Rev. D. T. McClintock spoke on the changed outlook of man as a result of the coming of Christ.

At St. Thomas Church (Anglican) there was midnight communion service ushering in Christmas Day, communion services on Christmas morning and five o'clock special Christmas evensong.

Young Carolers Bring Touch Of Ancient Yule

Sweet voices of boy and girl singers heard sounding the beautiful music of Christmas carols the week previous to the holiday brought a touch of ancient Yuletide to the city.

Beneath the yellow glare of street lights, the strains of "Holy Night" and other famous Christmas melodies sung in sweet boy and girl soprano voices drew the attention and tangible apreciation of crowds of holiday shoppers.

Eight girls and three boys, all students at Belleville Collegiate Institute, by their splendid musical contribution collected nearly sixteen dollars in change from appreciative shoppers. The money was turned to the Belleville Fire Department's Toy Fund.

"We are very proud of these young Christmas singers," Fire Chief William Lynch stated this morning. "For three nights they travelled to various parts of the city giving up their holiday pleasures in order to sing that other children might have some semblance of holiday cheer. We appreciate very much what they have done."

Included in the group of young Christmas carolers are the Misses Joan Bennett, Jean Cook, Phyllis Barlow, Helen Walker, Irene Michaux, Gertrudé Poste, Megan Kew, Myrla Goodfellow, and Masters Morley Anderson, Ray Anderson and Al. Smith.

95 LIVES LOST IN WORST RAIL WRECK IN RUMANIA

Bucharest, Dec. 27 (AP)—Fatalities in the worst railway accident in Rumania's history mounted today to 93 as more of the victims of the Christmas Day collision of passenger trains near Etulea, in Bessarabia, succumbed to injuries.

Investigations by cabinet ministers indicated that during the holiday travel rush some trains were operated in spite of a partial breakdown of the railways' telephone and telegraph dispatching lines. Apparently in order to have two trains pass at a station other than the normal one was misunderstood because of the wire trouble, attributed to cold and snow.

One railway official, a dispatcher and two station masters have been arrested. The trains which crashed, both locals, were crowded with persons making Christmas visits from village to village.

CARS DAMAGED IN SUNDAY CRASH

Considerable damage was done to two automobiles early Christmas Eve, when a car said by police to have been driven by Dwight Williams, R. R. 1 Picton, skidded on the slippery pavement at the corner of Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Streets, and crashed into a car owned and driven by Everett Gowsell, R.C.A.F. Station, Trenton.

Detective Fred Isard, investigated the accident.

The Williams car, it is reported was travelling north on Pinnacle Street while the Gowsell vehicle was proceeding along Victoria Avenue in an easterly direction when the accident occurred.

PRESENTATION

Corbyville, Dec. 27.—A shower was tendered recently to the newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy, (nee Mattie Gerow), at the home of her father and mother. About one hundred and twenty neighbours and friends gathered from Roslin, Thomasburg, Rednersvile, Belleville and vicinity. Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented. A programme which was greatly enjoyed included guitar solo by Miss Bronson, a reading by Mrs. Ben Clarke, and a piano solo, Fern Patterson. There had been a surprise party at the home of the bride and groom about three weeks ago at West Huntingdon where the groom is a prosperous farmer. An address in verse was read by Miss C. Prindle and was signed on behalf of Carmel friends by Glenn Patterson and Carmen Dafoe.

CENTENARY Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of Centenary Y. P. U. was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Ellen Waite with an attendance of 18. Art Calvert led in prayer and a hymn was sung. The Scripture lesson was read by Verna Keene. Mrs. Elwin Hart gave a reading "Star of Bethlehem." After a hymn, Neta Calvert gave another selection on the accordion. Wilmot Shortt gave a reading "The Keeper of the Stable." A poem "How Far to Bethlehem," was read by Gordon Garrison. Coza Calvert gave the secretary's report and business was discussed. Art Calvert closed the meeting with prayer. A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Waite for the use of their home and the meeting closed with a geography and spelling match conducted by Gordon Garrison.

At The Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"Girl's School"

A film so different the accustomed adjectives of praise must be foregone, Columbia's "Girls' School" touches upon the lovely illusions of adolescent youth, upon the naive comedy of girlish recreations to life and love, careers and boy friends. It is irrepressible, gay, and heart-warming; it is youth-restoring and joyously refreshing. It is as beautiful as its magnolia-scented background, as happily innocent as its attractive young players.

"Girls' School" is Magnolia Hall, the smugly snobbish seminary in the southland. Everybody who enjoys clean wholesome entertainment should see this attraction, at the McCarthy Theatre.

The cast is large and excellent, with diversified roles so well balanced and divided that even more or less minor parts have outstanding distinction.

Characteristic of the young viewpoint of the characters, as expressed by the schoolgirls when they learn that one of their younger teachers has fallen in love, was this remark: "Don't tell me she's having a romance. At her age? Why she's twenty-nine!"

Anne Shirley and Nan Grey, in the principal roles, are perfectly cast as two seniors of the exclusive seminary. Anne is the poor girl working her way through school; Nan, the pampered only daughter of wealthy parents. Opposite these two feminine principals are two excellent young juvenile actors—Noah Beery, Jr., and Kenneth Howell.

Maturer principals, matched in pairs as is fitting in such a moon-and-June-[illegible] story, are these splendid performers: Ralph Bellamy and Gloria Holden, Pierre Watkin and Doris Kenyon.

Especial mention is due Heather Thatcher who plays the scene-stealing role of the "charm lady;" Cecil Cunningham, as the stern but shrewd dean of the school, and young Dorothy Moore, who realistically plays Miss Grey's giggling room-mate.

The direction, by John Brahm, could not have been surpassed. He has caught and held the rose-tinted spirit of youthful femininity in superb fashion. Franz Planer's photography is outstanding. And orchids which figure importantly in the picture, must honestly be awarded to Tess Slesinger and Richard Sherman for their brilliant screenplay.

AT THE BELLE

"STABLEMATES"

Six months ago, Wallace Beery gave up flying, sold his plane to a company in Alaska for the purpose of transporting gold, and settled down to a quiet life of a gentleman farmer in San Fernando. But the spell of Howard Hughes and Douglas Corrigan has hit him. Having completed his newest picture, "Stablemates," at the Belle, has gone up in the air again. He has a new Howard plane.

Beery has always been interested in mechanical matters. Born in Kansas City, Mo., he first worked as a wiper at round-houses. Then he went to work in a factory and would have continued with this work except that his brother obtained him a job in the circus with a substantial raise. He became an elephant trainer in the switch from mechanics that was to keep him in show business ever after.

Having been forced to take singing lessons at home, Beery decided to make the best of them and went to New York where he became a singer in a chorus. He made rapid progress and soon was a star, replacing Raymond Hitchcock in "The Yankee Tourist" when the latter was ill. The trail soon led to films, where he became a director and general manager in the Essanay Studios. This was followed by comedy roles and an ill-fated venture to Japan with a stock company.

Then he began to play the roles that are now the favorite type with audiences. These included "The Secret Six," "Viva Villa," "Slave Ship," "Treasure Island," "Tugboat Annie," "Grand Hotel," "Dinner at Eight," "Old Soak," "Old Hutch," "Bad Man of Brimstone", and "Port of Seven Seas."

The Belle News of the day, a very seasonable color cartoon "Captain's Christmas", and an interesting Pete Smith novelty "Follow The Arrow", complete the program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Storm"

Turning the spotlight on drama in the lives of wireless operators aboard merchant ships, Universal's "The Storm" is at the Capitol Theatre.

Cast in characteristic roles for the story which tells of conflict and disaster at sea, are Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane, Preston Foster and Andy Devine. Tom Brown and Nan Grey carry the romantic interest.

Directed by Harold Young and produced by Ken Goldsmith, "The Storm" depicts Bickford's efforts to keep his young brother, Tom Brown, from following his own reckless mode of life on the sea. A counterplot shows Bickford striving for revenge against MacLane, who has abandoned his friend, Foster, to drown on a sinking ship.

Impressive scenes show the explosion of a gasoline tanker in midocean, the crashing of a speedy ocean liner into an iceberg, and the drama in wireless rooms as ships fight their way through typhoon and hurricane.

On the same programme is Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen in "Free and Easy", a musical, "Music and Flowers", a Cartoon and Newsreel.

Special Children's Matinee

The Capitol presents a show specially arranged for the children. This special kiddies' matinee will include a Mickey Mouse, a Popeye and other short subjects, all loved by the young folk. The program runs for an hour and a half. Parents are urged to take advantage of this wholesome entertainment and send their children.

Winners in Amateur Contest

The first prize in the "Ken Sobles Tour for Talent" amateur show at the Capitol Theatre last Friday night went to Miss Carol Kiser, 13 years old, of 13 Murney St. Number 13 is certainly not unlucky for Carol! In a clear, beautiful voice she sang "The Desert Song" and earned a handsome wrist watch.

Wilbur Wannamaker of Corbyville, was encored for playing "the bones". He is the proud winner of second prize which is a candid camera.

These amateur shows at the Capitol are creating great interest and seem to be uncovering talent of which Belleville may well be proud.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Dec. 27.—(Special) — Suddenly awaking to the fact that Christmas was only a day or two away, shoppers thronged Trenton stores and places of business Friday and Saturday and made up to some extent for earlier business slackness by the amount of last minute buying which they did. Extra help had to be called in to take care of the great influx of trade, and store managers were busy people until midnight Saturday. Clerks and other assistants were kept busy almost constantly from morning opening of the stores and at last merchants are smiling again—after the poorest pre-Christmas period in years.

Twelve Accidents Reported

Friday surely was a red-letter day for car-drivers as some twelve accidents were reported in and near the town during the day and night following. Colder weather early in the day changed to rain and sleet, and driving conditions were at a new low peak for unpleasantness. One man driving from Trenton to Smithfield during the evening reported seeing three cars in the ditch on that short four-mile stretch, and east of town it was equally bad.

During the day three accidents of varying degrees of seriousness were reported to police, the most serious occurring at the intersection of Dufferin and Dundas Street, when a truck driven by Cliff Gunter is reported to have attempted to come to a stop and slid on the ice around the corner and out into the path of a Michigan car coming east down the hill. Its driver, seventeen-year-old Stephen L. Barlough, Jr., of Berkley, Mich., was unable to stop and crashed into the rear of the truck with some force damaging the car seriously and shaking up its occupants.

At the King and Queen Streets intersection cars driven by J. W. Hartman, Lorne Ave., and Mary Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Wilson, Ontario Street, collided with damage to fenders and headlamps.

Another minor crash occurred on Dufferin Street when cars driven by W. H. Farrar and Roy Tripp collided, an interesting feature being that listed in the Tripp damage was loss of one gallon of chemical cleaner which he himself manufacturers. A glass jug of the fluid was broken in the crash.

Four accidents on the town bridge in forty minutes was the evening's toll, the only serious one however being the injuries suffered by the McEwen youth.

Police officers, after an extremely busy period just before the holiday were pressing an urgent appeal that this year Christmas be not marred, all over the province, by accidents such as were known last year.

Thieves who are as yet undetected made entrance through a rear window to the Supertest service station east of the town bridge early Saturday morning or during the night previous at some time after midnight and succeeded in making their escape with auto accessories and cash amounting to about $62, according to information gathered from police sources this morning. A piece of stove wood had evidently been used to smash a window sash at the rear, and the window was thus opened to allow entry. Stolen from the premises were cash amounting to $7.58, a number of spark plugs, defrosters, auto bulbs, other accessories four tires and seven tubes. Local authorities are working on the case and with several clues to go upon have hopes of making some early arrests.

Accused Brought Back

Constable Frank Lozo returned to Trenton by train this forenoon after a trip to Sudbury bringing with him George Smith, formerly of Trenton, wanted here on a charge of non-support of his wife and family. Smith was arrested by Sudbury police on Thursday, and will appear in an early session of police court.

Friday's session of police court attracted some attention as two out-of-town culprits came up for trial, one of them the youth who allegedly was guilty of theft of an overcoat and other belongings from King Street church choir rooms on Sunday morning of last week. James Barclay, alias James Martin, 19, of Owen Sound, was found guilty on his plea and was sentenced to three months determinate and one year indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph by Magistrate E. J. Butler. In giving sentence His Worship strongly admonished the young man to stick to the paths of righteousness and pointed out that with his record of thefts behind him and with a term in reformatory the next mis-step would send him to penitentiary. Another miscreant, Joseph Thompson, 35, rounded up by accident while the search was on for Barclay and found in possession of a revolver was sentenced to one month in jail, and cautioned against further similar indiscretions.

Christmas Concert

Members of the Wolf Cub Pack sponsored by the Moose Lodge held a jolly Christmas concert in the Moose Hall on Dundas Street, on Friday evening with a large number on hand. Oscar Pierce acted as chairman during a very enjoyable programme which was featured by a demonstration of Cub work explained and directed by Cubmaster Frank Churcott. Musical selections and accompaniments were furnished by Mrs. Earl Kennedy. At the conclusion of the programme gifts and candies were distributed to all children present.

Another gala event for the youngsters was held on Friday afternoon in the Salvation Army Temple when veterans, members of Post 110 Canadian Legion, held their annual Christmas tree. A large number attended and over 160 gifts and bags of candy were distributed.

Thursday afternoon saw members of St. George's Sunday School gather at Canterbury Hall for a splendid programme and distribution of similar gifts and presents. The affair was most successful and was very well attended.

Skaters have a rink cleared on the ice of the Trent river near the Canada Creosote plant and are getting in some good practice, while two ice boats were seen disporting themselves about the bay on Wednesday and Thursday.

Rejected Suitor Wounds Girl

Camden, J., Dec. 27 (AP)—An attractive, 26-year-old brunette was in a critical condition in hospital today from ten bullet wounds Detective Clarence Arthur said were inflicted by a man whose Christmas present she had returned unopened several hours earlier.

The young woman, Florence Gottwald, was shot last night, the detective said, as she stepped from a friend's automobile in front of her home. Arthur said he took into custody a man he booked as Emil Mascher, 46-year-old relief worker.

"I loved her," the detective quoted him as saying. "For three years I tried to get her to marry me, but she wouldn't have anything to do with me. I don't know why I did this."

Goldfish is Merry As One of 2 Tails Is Severed

Victoria, Dec. 27 (CP)—Here's a real fish story—one about a two-tailed goldfish that couldn't swim because the two tails worked against each other.

Herb Warren, city park superintendent, says small boys playing in Beacon Hill Park first noticed the goldfish's plight. He was splashing near the surface, one tail trying to drive him forward and the other—growing near the head—trying to shove him back.

Warren said his plight wasn't noticed during the summer and fall because visitors tossed plenty of crumbs and other food into the water and the two-tailed fellow was lost among the others. With winter here the other fish dropped to the bottom of the pond for warmth.

The boys called an unidentified park visitor with a penknife. The forward tail was chopped off and the goldfish swam merrily downward to join his fellows, Warren said.

"Well" said the woman "I've been drinking it all day and I ought to know."

Police located the husband. He wasn't dead—just unconscious.

Why the Weather!

Climate and civilization! It is a known fact that civilization began in places where now only backward races live. How did this come about? Besides many accidental factors, changes in climate were also very influential. For example, the beginnings of the Neolithic civilization, which was characterized by implements of stone and bone, took place in Crete and eastern Asia about 15,000 years ago, when the climate in those places must have been more stimulating than it is now, resembling that of present northwest Europe. And this was at a time when considerable parts of Europe and America were still in the Ice Age. Europe absorbed this Neolithic culture and kept on progressing, while the change of climate to drier and warmer in eastern Asia kept the people there more or less backward.

Treatment Developed For Encephalopathy

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—A new treatment for encephalopathy—organic deterioration of brain tissue caused by too much alcohol—has been developed at Bellevue Hospital.

Dr. Norman Jolliffe told the association for research in nervous and mental diseases yesterday that 14 of 16 patients treated with nicotinic acid had recovered.

Previously, Dr. Jolliffe said, nearly all cases of encephalopathy had proved fatal. The nicotinic acid, whose properties for curing pellagra was discovered a year ago, apparently relieved vitamin deficiencies common to victims of chronic alcoholism.

Dr. Wilfred Bloomberg of the Harvard Medical School told the association of experiments to cure alcoholism through use of the drug benzedrine.

Dr. Bloomberg said the drug was non-habit forming and gave the patient the same sense of elation and "well being" as alcohol without its bad physical effects.

Cautioning care in the use, he explained that benzedrine pills normally released a person of shyness and made him garrulous and gay in spirit, but that they depressed some people.

HOLIDAY VISITORS STILL MAROONED

Michigan County Officials Prohibit Travel on Icy Highways

Chicago, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Arctic chill of the season's most intense cold wave was felt today in the United States from the Rockies to the Atlantic.

Northwest winds carried an icy sting to the eastern seaboard and the south today while the mid-continent continued to shiver under a blanket of cold that sent temperatures below zero in some sections.

Weather observers predicted a slow rise in temperatures for tomorrow.

Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and the Dakotas were the principal cold spots in the United States weather map. Sub zero temperatures were general in Minnesota, and the Dakotas.

Cold and Icy Roads Claim Five.

Scores of Christmas holiday visitors still were marooned in northern Michigan where county officials prohibited travel on snow-blocked or ice-covered highways. Five deaths were attributed to the cold, and slippery highways.

One death from exposure was recorded in Indiana where temperatures dropped steadily to zero and sub-zero levels. A veteran woodsman froze to death in northern Pennsylvania woods while walking to a lumbering camp.

The cold wave brought intense suffering to the poor. Hundreds sought shelter at police stations in the larger cities. Thousands of homeless slept in New York subways or in crowded Bowery missions and welfare department shelters.

How to Take French Colonies Told In Imaginary Phone Conversation

Paris, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Rightist Deputy Henri de Kerillis set Paris laughing today by publishing in his newspaper L'Epoque an imaginary telephone conversation in which Chancellor Hitler tells Premier Mussolini how to take France's colonies.

The Chancellor begins by telling Il Duce how to receive Prime Minister Chamberlain when he arrives in Rome in January.

Hitler: "Now you begin by making him wait at the end of your famous office. You let him walk the 100 yards down to your desk on a floor covered with wax. To stage it properly he must fall flat and lose his umbrella once or twice before he reaches you."

Mussolini: "Then I demand Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy?"

Hitler: "Don't be silly. Talk about your passionate love for peace and glorify the spirit of Munich—all in a sweet, soft voice. Then suddenly you swell up, shake your fist, stick out that jaw and talk about Italy's power."

Mussolini interrupts several times to suggest that he ask for Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy, but Hitler advises him to ask at that interview only for "Djibouti and a few advantages in the Suez Canal".

Hitler: "Then you end the interview and say to him softly: 'You are old and I am young. I will meet you part way for the next talk. It will be at Milan.' He accepts with a tear in his eye and you escort him to the door taking care he does not fall."

Mussolini again asks if he can demand Tunisia, Corsica and Savoy at Milan, but Hitler says he is to ask only for an "outlet on Lake Chad".

Hitler: "When you get that it is my turn—I will take Ukrainia."

Mussolini: "But Adolf, I don't understand. Can't I take Tunisia after you get Ukrainia?"

Hitler: "You said it, Benito."

ITALIAN TROOPS ASSEMBLE NEAR PORT IS REPORT

Public Inclined to Regard Italian Campaign As a Bluff

DALADIER IS ADAMANT

Dispatch Boat Arrives at Suez on Way to Djibouti

Paris, Dec. 28—(AP)—The Ministry of Colonies announced today a detachment of Senegalese troops has been sent to strengthen the Djibouti Garrison.

The reinforcements were requested by Governor General Hubert Deschamps, officials said, to 'assist in maintaining order' amid reports Italian troops are concentrating near the French Somaliland port.

Colonial authorities said they did not know the exact number of Senegalese en route to Djibouti, but estimated there are between 1,200 and 1,500.

The French Press and the public were inclined to regard the Italian campaign for Djibouti as a bluff and to have confidence in France's ability to defend her colonies.

Several Conservative newspapers limited their comment solely to a government communique denying reports of Italian troop concentrations in Ethiopia and Eritrea, near the border of French Somaliland.

The Left-Wing Press, the Extreme Right and some Centrists warned the government against capitulation to the Italian demands—unofficial and made through the controlled Fascist press.

Government spokesmen, meanwhile, left no doubt of Premier Daladier's determination to go to war if Italy tried to seize Djibouti.

Warship Dispatched

As a symbol of French determination to defend Djibouti the 1,969-ton dispatch boat D'Iberville arrived before the Suez Canal today on its way to the port from Beirut, Syria. Arrival of the D'Iberville, with its 5.5 millimetre guns one seaplane and anti-aircraft batteries, was believed in some quarters to be significant of the French army and navy intention to rush more warships and heavy troop reinforcements to Djibouti if necessary.

As another symbol of what France might do, officers of the Foreign Legion formally opened a vital new military road from inner Algeria to the inland frontier of Italian Libya. The road connects all France's military garrisons in the interior of Morocco and Algeria with the border.

To French military men that meant that France could use the Foreign Legion and other troops to smash into Libya from the rear in case of war.

In the absence of formal Italian request for Djibouti, the French sent their answer back the way the demands came—through the press which scoffed at Italy's chances in a French-Italian war.

Wants to See Chamberlain

Daladier, in close touch with London, was reported to be asking that Prime Minister Chamberlain's January trip to Rome be broken by a stop at Paris or be called off entirely if the Italian anti-French campaign continues.

It was learned that Italian military caravans had occupied and had been holding for 18 months some bases in the disputed, arid frontier between France's Somaliland and Italy's Ethiopia.

Drunk, Drinking Drivers to Get Double Penalty

Detroit, Dec. 28 (CP)—Drunk and drinking drivers will get double penalty in Detroit's traffic court during the holiday period, the court judges, George T. Murphy and Thomas F. Maher, announced today in a joint statement.

"Nine deaths and 764 accidents on our streets over the Christmas week-end is appalling," Judge Murphy said. Drinking drivers involved in accidents will get heavy fines or jail sentences and lose the right to drive for sixty days. Drunk drivers will get straight prison terms.

Judge Murphy said the court believes the traffic at holiday time is so much heavier, the probable consequence of reckless driving is greater, and thus penalties should be boosted.

Blinding Clouds of Snow Swept Before 50-Mile Gale

(By The Canadian Press)

The worst blizzard to strike Ontario in years, a storm that had its primary origin in the Gulf of Mexico, blew itself out today, leaving in its wake a trail of destruction, snow-blocked roads and crippled communication systems. Prevailing near-zero temperatures were the lowest of the winter.

Breaking Monday night, the storm continued all yesterday and subsided early today after piling snowdrifts five feet high in some parts of the province, tearing down telegraph and telephone lines and cutting off communities from contact with outside centres. At the height of the gale, its velocity was 60 miles an hour at Fort Erie where floodwaters caused extensive damage.

Origin In Mexico.

Chief Forecaster Frank O'Donnell of the Dominion Meteorological Service said in Toronto the storm had its primary origin in an area of low prsesure which moved up from the Gulf of Mexico north-east across the Great Lakes, pulling cold winds from the north-west and meeting a cold-air area from the north.

Chief damage caused by the gale in Fort Erie was to work under construction in a new park being built at the point where Lake Erie waters

CONTINUE CHASE OF BLACKMAILERS

Two Men and a Woman Already Arrested for Extortion

New York, Dec. 28 (AP)—Police continued their search today for blackmailers suspected of protecting—at their own prices—the secret of F. Donald Coster's identity as Philip Musica, arch-swindler.

Two men and a woman, accused of extorting thousands of dollars from the president of McKesson and Robbins, Incorporated, by preying upon his lifelong fear of the exposure that finally ruined him, were to be arraigned today.

Those who knew him before he assumed the Coster personality were numerous. Among them, police declared, was Joseph Brandino, 61, arrested yesterday after a fight in which he brandished a cuspidor and a pine scantling.

Brandino, the police said, was in the cheese and olive business thirty years ago when Coster-Musica was engaged in the same trade and was sent to prison for bribing customs inspectors.

Gregory Noonan, Acting United States Attorney, said Brandino and his sister Mary, 37, were Coster-Musica's partners in 1920 in the Adelphi Drug Company in Brooklyn, where he started the campaign which eventually gave him control of the country's third largest drug concern.

Both Brandinos were booked on federal charges of using the mails to defraud and conspiring with others to extort money from Coster-Musica, as was Walter Cragg, 56, disbarred lawyer and ex-convict who were serving a prison term in 1914 when Coster again was in the law's toils.

1938 IS REGARDED YEAR OF TRIUMPH BY ROME, BERLIN

Outstanding Event in Italy Alignment in "Racial Ideology"

Friction Grows Between Vatican and Fascist State

By ROGER MAFFRE
(Copyright 1938 By The Havas News Agency)

Rome, Dec. 28 (CP-Havas)—Fascist leaders regard 1938 as a year of triumph for the Rome-Berlin axis and the foreign policy of Premier Mussolini.

At home and abroad, this axis has functioned smoothly and efficiently, they state. The outstanding domestic event of the year marked Rome's alignment with Berlin in "racial ideology", while the outstanding foreign event of the year—the Munich conference—found Il Duce and Reichs Chancellor Hitler working hand in hand for a peaceful solution of the Czechoslovak crisis.

Strength of Axis.

Whenever the outside world thought the axis strained, both Italy and Germany demonstrated it was stronger than ever. It stood its most severe test when Hitler's troops marched into Austria last March and Premier Mussolini found on Italy's northern doorstep an empire larger than that of the Hapsburgs which the Italians fought to destroy in the Great War.

The Fuehrer sent his historic telegram to Il Duce: "Mussolini, I shall never forget you for this." And the axis continued to flourish.

It flourished on the issues raised by the Spanish civil war. It flour-

DECIDEDLY COLD IN WEST CANADA

Snow Blocks Roads With Drifts Six to Seven Feet High

Winnipeg, Dec. 28 (CP)—Western Canada's unwelcome Christmas present—a cold wave—held forth across the Prairies today with no sign of relief. The forecast was for "decidedly cold" weather.

Centre of the Christmas storm which whipped in from the Arctic, Northern Alberta continued in the icy belt with record sub-zero temperatures posted. Icy winds swept across Northern Saskatchewan and into Manitoba during the night.

Edmonton, Alberta's capital, held the record low mark, an unofficial reading of 51 below zero last night, and Battleford, in northern Saskatchewan, recorded 34 below. After an early morning low of 24 below zero Tuesday, the mercury in Winnipeg climbed 10 degrees. It then dropped and was 15 below early today.

Stormy weather struck transportation facilities in both Alberta and Saskatchewan. Central Saskatchewan roads were snow-blocked with drifts six to seven feet high. Motorists were forced to seek shelter in farm homes and rural school houses. No storm casualties were reported.

A new weather threat menaced lower British Columbia mainland last night, as a freezing rain swept through the Fraser Valley, damaging telegraph lines and disrupting stage services.

HEARING FOR MEN OBTAINED BY KING

Officials Will Listen to Demand for More Relief

London, Dec. 28 (CP-Havas)—The king has obtained hearing for a delegation of unemployed who asked him to use his prerogative to obtain an increase in unemployment benefits during the winter months of half a crown (60 cents) weekly.

A delegation of fifteen unemployed last Friday presented a petition to this effect at Buckingham Palace. Today the head of the delegation, Donald Hinton, was informed by the king's private secretary that his Majesty had advised Labor Minister Ernest Brown and the chairman of the Unemployment Assistance Board Lord Rushcliffe, to receive the delegates and examine their demands.

Brilliant Light On Lake Michigan Is Mystery

Harbor Springs, Mich., Dec. 28 (CP)—Marine sources were checked without result today for a possible explanation of a brilliant light that appeared yesterday on the western horizon of Lake Michigan, near here.

The light, bright as the rising sun, appeared for about ten minutes and disappeared. Motorists said they thought it might be a ship on fire. This theory was discounted later when marine sources said no boats were missing.

ROADSIDE GARAGE USED AS HOSPITAL

After First Aid is Rendered 3 Injured Persons Taken to Private House

Mitchell, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP) — A roadside garage became an improvised hospital when three persons were injured in a highway accident near here at the height of yesterday's blizzard which left district roads blocked by snowdrifts several feet high in places.

Mrs. Minnie Roppel suffered severe back injuries and Arthur E. Roppel and Mrs. Ida Roppel were less seriously hurt when an automobile in which they were riding collided with a truck. After first aid treatment at a nearby garage they were taken to the farm home of Russel Keyes when blocked roads prevented ambulances and doctors reaching the scene.

The injured remained in the Keyes home today and as the storm subsided snowploughs were called out to buck the huge drifts and permit transfer of the three to hospital.

Shakespeare, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Nearly 40 persons were stranded here for a time yesterday when the worst blizzard in years blocked the roads and forced many automobiles into ditches.

Bus passengers, motorists and truck drivers sought shelter in this village six miles west of Stratford. They left on Canadian National Railways trains, abandoning their cars.

LOYALISTS WILL DEFEND ARTESA

Insurgents Claim Conquest of 60 Villages and 300 Square Miles

Hendaye, France, Dec. 28 (AP)—The Spanish Government army concentrated defences today at the textile town of Artesa, on the northern sector of the Insurgent offensive into Catalonia. Insurgent field guns began dropping shells into the streets before dawn. Government fighters returned the fire.

The Insurgents advanced to shelling position of Artesa, a communique said, with capture last night of Alos de Balaguer, 15 miles to the south and on the northern bank of the Segre River.

Artesa is in the northern-most of the three main sectors of the offensive begun Dec. 23 and in which Insurgents claim capture of nearly sixty villages and conquest of approximately 300 square miles of territory.

There was continued fighting in the other two sectors also. Through Lerida Province, the central sector, Barcelona troops launched a series of counter-attacks.

300 U. S. Colleges Soon to Begin Training of 20,000 Fliers a Year

Washington, Dec. 28 (AP)—President Roosevelt's plans to train 20,000 civilian aviators a year provided another indication today of his determination to keep the United States powers.

The program, as disclosed at a press conference and by the civil aeronautics authority, contemplates experimental training of about 300 students in a dozen colleges this spring.

If the United States Congress votes sufficient funds, the training will be offered at several hundred colleges and universities in the fall. Mr. Roosevelt estimated it would cost $9,800,000 for a year's schooling for 20,000 pilots.

The cream of the new fliers, under tentative plans, would find opportunities for military careers in the expanded army and navy air forces.

"Only by such an approach," said the civil aeronautis authority, "can the United States adequately safeguard itself against the vast aerial militarization programs now being pressed with fanatic zeal by foreign powers."

The pilot training project was the first of the present's far-reaching rearmament plans to be made public in detail.

Steps already have been taken for a parallel training of aviation mechanics. In the view of some military officials, mechanics are even more immediately essential for a greatly expanded air force such as Mr. Roosevelt is believed to be ready to propose to Congress.

In general, the civil aeronautics authority is to direct the training of pilots, and the National Youth Administration the schooling of mechanics.

Nearly 40 Feet of Rock to Work Through Before Rescue Achieved

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Rescue crews dug into the depths of Lake Shore gold mine today for two miners, trapped more than 2,400 feet underground by an explosion that caused a rock burst at 11:50 last night.

The trapped men are John Holubec, 33, and Vito Vlaisavgevich, 40, who were working in a stope or drift which collapsed during the blast.

The two were drilling rock in the drift which extended up from the 2,700-foot mine level to the level 125 feet above.

At noon mine officials said more than 100 rescue workers were within 40 feet of Holubec and Vlaisavgevich. Rescue workers then had been tearing away loose rock for twelve hours. There was no indication whether the trapped men were dead or alive.

Statement Issued.

G. P. Doggett, secretary-treasurer of Lake Shore, issued the following statement at noon:

"A rock burst occurred at 11:50 p.m., Dec. 27. The centre of the burst was in the 2700-foot east drift. Two men, John Holubec and Vito Vlaisavgevich, who were in the drift at the time, were trapped and have not been located.

"Rescue crews were at work at all entrances to the drift immediately after the burst and at the present time there are not more than 40 feet of rock to go through to reach the men."

TENSION INTENDED SALIENT FACTOR

Yorkshire Post Wants Anglo-French Meeting Before Rome Visit

Leeds, England, Dec. 28 (CP-Havas)—The tension between Italy and France "is being deliberately provoked by the Italian government in the expectation either that France will make concessions under the pressure of Birtain or that she may be confronted presently with a fait accompli in the district where she is at a military disadvantage," the Yorkshire Post (Conservative) said today.

"While it is difficult to suppose that Premier Mussolini hopes to produce such a situation before Prime Minister Chamberlain arrives in Rome, it is in any case obvious that Franco-Italian tension, both in the Mediterranean areas and elsewhere, is intended to be a salient factor in European politics a fortnight hence.

"It is both natural and very necessary that in these circumstances close coordination of views relative to all matters in dispute between France and Italy, including those affecting any part of Africa, should be established between the French and British governmerts. The obvious step would be that a meeting should take place between the British and French minisers before the visit to Rome."

FIND GIRL'S BODY INSIDE FURNACE

Autopsy Did Not Indicate Whether Girl Was Slain by Cremation

Vancouver, Dec. 28 (CP)—Police said last night an autopsy showed Emiko Yamada died from burns but did not indicate whether the 16-year-old Japanese girl had taken her own life or was slain by cremation in the furnace of her family's Fairview District home.

The body was found early yesterday partly consumed by fire generated from oil-soaked paper which had been shoved into the firebox. Other pieces of paper similarly treated and containing matches had been pinned to the front of the girl's clothing.

There were no burned matches outside the furnace but several unlighted ones were found underneath the firebox.

Bruise On Forehead.

Officers added a bruise was found on the forehead but were unable to say whether it had been caused by a blow before or after the girl entered the furnace. They said they would make a further examination of the girl's home for traces of oil with which the paper had been soaked.

Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance of the Police Bureau of Science was asked to examine the body for evidence the girl might have been knocked unconscious before entering the firebox.

Eichi Yamada, 15-year-old brother of the girl, and G. Yamada, her father, who discovered the charred corpse, and three roomers at the Yamada home were questioned. They were unable to supply any clue to the girl's death, police said. A fire was still smouldering when the discovery was made.

Police could not supply a possible murder motive. Neighbors said the girl was quiet and kindly and had few intimate friends. She had been out of school for about a year.

12 MAROONED IN BUS FOR DAY

Finally Brought to Fergus in a Service Truck

Fergus, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP) — Twelve persons will not forget in a hurry the blizzard that swept Ontario Christmas week-end.

For eight hours yesterday, while the wind howled at 50 miles an hour and a snowstorm raged without let-up, the twelve were marooned in a Gray Coach Line bus four miles north of Fergus. They finally were rescued at midnight and brought to Fergus in a service truck.

The bus went into the ditch at the height of the storm and although the passengers were not in any danger, the bus could not be brought out again. A snowplough went to the rescue during the day but skidded into a ditch before reaching the scene.

After several unsuccessful attempts to get supplies to the bus, the service truck succeeded in breaking through the drifts. The passengers suffered from lack of food during the eight hours. Luckily the heating system worked throughout without a hitch.

APPRECIATION VOICED BY SUPERINTENDENT

Special appreciation of individual gifts as well as those of city organizations and churches that brought an additional touch of holiday spirit to the ninety-five inmates of his institution, was voiced today by Superintendent Elmer Sandercock of the Hastings County Home.

Several merchants of the city, and Point Anne made generous contributions, it was pointed out while the Rev. A. L. Geen, long a friend of the inmates issue a special individual gift, that was highly appreciated by inmates and members of the staff alike. Christmas trees were donated to the Home by Fred Gray, of Thurlow Township.

St. Michael's Church, the Salvation Army were among the church organizations who contributed in no small manner to the holiday happiness of the inmates, Superintendent Sandercock declared.

SERGEANT MOORE VISITOR IN CITY

Renewing the many friendships and acquaintances made during his sojourn here, Sergeant T. S. Moore, R.C.M.P., of Sherbrooke, Quebec, was a visitor in the city yesterday. Sergeant Moore was a former patrol sergeant on duty with the Belleville Detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. During his visit he dropped in to pay the season's compliments to Lance Corporal J. C. McPhee, and Constable William Beattie of the local detachment.

ALL NEEDY FAMILIES BELIEVED CARED FOR

"All were cared for", it was the belief of the city welfare department today following a brief check of the performance of Christmas giving by the associated service clubs, fraternal organizations and charity societies of the city.

This year it is believed little duplication was experienced in the giving out of Christmas baskets and if any homes were missed, no reports had been received to this effect. It was not known exactly how many families were thus cared for until a final check is made.

EASTERN MEN GET BRIGHTON CONTRACT

M. Sullivan and Son of Arnprior general contractors, have been awarded the general contract for the construction of the Brighton Post Office at an estimated cost of $12,474.00, it is announced by the Dominion Department of Public Works. Architect is J. Arnold Thomson, M.R.A.I.C., of this city.

FREE SAND CALLS REACH HEAVY TOTAL

Yesterday, one of the busiest and heaviest days on winter records of the department, eighty calls were received at the office of the city works department from residents requesting free sand with which to combat the icy and slippery condition of streets. Today an even larger number of calls than this was expected to be received and orders filled. "We have tried to get residents to phone for sand when the department is not so busy as at present, but the task seems a hopeless one," commented officials.

OAK HILLS SLOPES TEMPT LOCAL SKIERS

First skiing of the season is now being carried on in the Oak Hills section by local devotees of the sport under conditions which have been declared satisfactory insofar as conditions will permit. The heavy crust of snow which covers the hills offers considerable speed on its surface, but has been responsible for heavy falls and painful abrasions, not experienced when spills occur in softer snow, it is reported. Last evening several cars filled with equipment and passengers left for the hills north of the city.

TWENTY-FIVE MEN DIG ICY STREETS

Twenty-five men from the relief rolls continued the work of street clearing this morning and today, a task made considerably heavier by the freezing yesterday of the thick slush and wet snow which covered city streets to a four inch depth. This morning picks were used to clear channels along curbs in the event of a following thaw, while shovellers loaded tons of ice on the tucks for transportation to the city dump.

ADVERTISED UNDER THE WRONG NAME

In the advertisement of MacLaurin's grocery appearing in this newspaper Wednesday, December 21 a chocolate candy was advertised under the name of "Maple Buds" at twenty cents per pound. Using the name "Maple Buds" was in error as this name is a registered trade mark controlled by the Rowntree Company Limited and the name can be used only in connection with goods manufactured by them.

Picton, Ont., Dec. 28 (Special)—Despite the fact that eight members of the 1938 edition of Prince Edward County Council have received acclamations in their various municipalities, some of the keenest election fights seen in years are expected to be waged next Monday before councillors of the municipalities are returned to office

Military-Disciplined Work Camps Coming Says Mayor Bone

Establishment of military-disciplined work camps for unemployed youth of Canada, as originally proposed some time ago by Mayor Jamieson Bone, and lately given support by the Canadian Corps Association, which organization has passed a resolution urging that the Dominion Government survey this project at once, is coming in spite of the utterances of "such men as John Noble, Toronto," general representative in Canada of the American Federation of Labor, it was prophesied today by Mayor Bone.

Yesterday Mr. Noble objected to the establishment of the camps as "savoring too much of Hitlerism and dictatorships," in a speech at Toronto.

"But in spite of John Noble and his ilk, this project will go through," answered Mayor Bone today.

"When we have to come to the time when we are forced to listen to such talk from men, who do not represent labor, the general feeling of the country, or anything else, then the country is in a bad way," said the Mayor. "John Noble will have nothing to say about this project which would be the best move that Canada could make. What are we going to do with our youth . . . let them go along as they are now, applying to magistrates for jail sentences just so they can be put away off the streets which they have tramped for months on end in a vain search for work that doesn't exist?

The original suggestion by Mayor Bone to the government urged that at least ten camps be set up, each one capable of housing, maintaining and training about 5,000 youths. The camps would provide moderate military training and military pay and give training along vocational lines so that when times did improve the men could be released as work was provided, and good paying jobs secured.

"This would be the answer to the present condition of loss of morale, aimless drifting, petty crime, and degeneration among our youth who at present do not know which way to turn," declared Mayor Bone.

Rawdon Council Given Acclamation

Bonarlaw, Ont., Dec. 27—Rawdon Township at a meeting held in the town hall Monday at Harold and attended by a record crowd of ratepayers, decided to avoid the expense of an election and returned Reeve Geo. E. Thompson, Deputy Reeve Bert Bedford and Councillors W. J. Tanner, John Morrison and Wilfred Spencer by acclamation as their Council for 1939.

Township Clerk W. J. Barlow ably acted as chairman and called on the various members of the council. Other speakers were Councillor Post of Huntingdon Tp., Councillor F. Stapley of Stirling, and H. R. Tompkins, Editor Stirling News Argus.

There was some discussion regarding the advisibility of adopting the road commission system instead of statute labour. Most of the speakers were in favor of the former and more up to date system which they pointed out would give the township better roads for less money. A vote taken to decide the feeling of those present resulted in about 2 to 1 in favour of the road commission system, although a vote of the whole township has consistently been in favour of statute labour for a number of years. It is felt that the question is more thoroughly understood now than ever before.

The meeting was very orderly and attentive throughout the entire proceedings.

Police Blotter

Crime deterrents come and go but by far the most effective one, that has yet shown its wares is a blustery winter night with the wind howling in the teeth of a typical Canadian winter blizzard and thermometers dropping to zero. For in the local police station last night, desk sergeants and other police officers enjoyed the warmth of their quarters without a single inebriate or transient to bother them.

Not a single knight of the road got as far as Belleville, or at least sought the comparative warmth and comfort of the cell-block. Streets were more or less deserted as belated residents hurried home from theatre or private party, to enjoy the warmth of home-fires and the radio.

Only one accident was reported. Fender damage was done to a truck and car on Coleman Street when the driver of the former turning out to pass a parked car slid into an oncoming automobile causing damage to both vehicles. Police Constable Peter Thomson investigated.

RETIRING WARDEN GIVEN OVATION

Tyendinaga Twp. Council is Elected by Acclamation

Shannonville, Ont., Dec. 28 — (Special)—Residents of Tyendinaga Township paid a fine tribute to retiring Reeve Henry Larkin, Warden of Hastings County at Melrose town hall on Monday, when they filled the time-honored place, the scene of many a stern nomination battle, to capacity, to bid farewell to the man, who has represented them in municipal affairs for a long number of years.

Conspicuous by their absence were the many problems usually associated with nomination day and which in years gone by added a touch of color to the proceedings. Vociferous applause greeted Warden Larkin as he rose to speak. He voiced his appreciation of the faith and confidence placed in him by his constituents during his long tenure of office.

Only three residents allowed their names to stand for the councillor candidacy, while Deputy-Reeve Sam Sherman was nominated for the Reeveship. The new deputy reeve will in all likelihood be W. S. Dies while the new council, unless unforeseen developments occur, will be given an acclamation. Those nominated for council include Messrs. William White, Joseph Forestall and Frank Naphin.

Theatre Tickets Popular Gift

The small compact Christmas present is rapidly gaining favor in the eyes of holiday givers. Not only was this exemplified in the sale of small goods by merchants, but now along comes a statement by Mr. George Forhan, manager of the Belle Theatre here that the sale of theatre tickets as gifts at Christmas time has increased over three hundred per cent during the past three years.

Millionaires may give Rolls-Royce cars, locomotives and elephants but the ordinary man is rapidly declaring himself in favor of the smaller gift, Mr. Forhan pointed out. Not only in the theatre business, but in other phases of industrial, professional, and entertainment life as well.

The simple expedient of leaving money at a theatre box-office with the address of the person to whom the gift is intended solved many a Christmas problem for residents of Belleville and other centres of Ontario. A large number of local residents availed themselves of this effortless method of sending friends the handy pasteboards that guarantee good entertainment. Niagara Falls, St. Catharines, Galt and other centres received these small bundles of Christmas Cheer while in a great many cases the gifts of tickets from outside sources were received by Belleville theatre lovers.

REAL STRUGGLE TO KEEP ROADS OPEN IN DISTRICT

Mercury Drops to Three Above for Coldest Day of Winter

HIGHWAYS SLIPPERY

Temperatures toppling in the wake of a gale-born blizzard brought Belleville and district another taste of near-zero weather this morning and last night. The mercury hovered around the three-above mark early this morning as householders stoked furnaces to bring warmth to houses and apartments that rapidly cooled off last night, when they took the full brunt of a westerly gale, the aftermath of a cold wave, that is sweeping the country from the Yukon to the Maritimes.

Hardy residents, who braved the blustery weather last night found travelling hazardous, with light drifts of snow covering treacherous ice-covered sidewalk and highway. Buses and other motor vehicles skidded dangerously as a light covering of the white mantle offset the sandy protection placed on ice earlier in the day.

Pedestrian Loses Hat

One pedestrian, whose hat blew off in the gale and was whirled playfully about West Bridge Street in the vicinity of the Lower Bridge gave up the chase after a few minutes of frenzied search, and wrapping his overcoat collar high above his ears struggled home the best he could. He found his hat resting on the ice of the Moira River a few yards south of the Lower Bridge this morning.

Office shop and factory workers struggled along slippery treacherous roads and streets this morning, ears muffled under fur and heavy overcoat collars, in the teeth of a cold wind. A few minor accidents were reported with no serious damage done in any case.

Highway traffic was reported reduced to a minimum last night, as strong winds buffeted heavy transports on slippery rights-of-way. Garage and service station men were busy with wrecking trucks hauling belated motorists from slippery ditches.

Snow piled up in the vicinity of Napanee and Deseronto causing late calls for district ploughs. In Prince Edward County snow likewise piled up in heavy drifts, as county ploughs battled their way in the teeth of the gale to keep highways open.

155 Baskets Given Needy Families Through Fire Dept.

Thanks to the generosity of the Belleville Fire Department city organizations, merchants and the general public, one hundred and fifty-five needy city families received Christmas baskets this year.

The baskets contained twenty-four items and were valued at $2.75 each. Tasty roasts of beef, potatoes, vegetables and other substantial fare comprised the contents of the holiday boxes.

By the same token, over eight hundred children received toys remodelled, repainted and rehabilitated through the efforts of members of the Fire Department, who gave of their time and efforts that these underprivileged children might get at least some Christmas cheer.

In voicing his appreciation of all who helped to further the cause, Fire Chief William Lynch stated that cash donations amounted to $192.15 that included the sum of one hundred dollars contributed by the Kiwanis Club of Belleville. The balance included sums donated by the Belleville Municipal Band, a group of teen-aged Christmas carolers and other organizations.

IN CHARGE OF CONCERT PROGRAM

At the concert given in Rossmore Church on Friday evening Miss Sylvia Redick directed the play "The Heavently Twins." Mrs. L. W. Pollitt was in charge of the entertainment, with the following committee: Sylvia Redick, Lillian White Bonny Gerow, Doug Redick, Pauline Thompson, Edna Belnap, Bruce Thompson, Maretta Russell, Laura Belnap, Mrs. C. Redick, Mrs. S. Root and Mrs. F. Belnap.

FIRE DAMAGES YEOMANS ST. HOUSE

Flames caused by overheated stovepipes caused slight damage to an upstairs floor and sidewalls of a house at 21 Yeomans Street shortly after nine o'clock today. Fire squads answering an alarm reduced the blaze in time to prevent it from spreading in the rooms and gaining serious proportions. Damage was estimated by Fire Department officials at twenty-five dollars.

Mayor Wants Change In Regulations Of Advance Polls

Revision of present regulations governing advance polls in the Province is being sought by Mayor Jamieson Bone in a communication to the Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney General for Ontario.

In the letter Mayor Bone has pointed out that these regulations, "like many other regulations passed in the horse and buggy days, and still in effect," which prescribe that only railroaders and commercial travellers having membership in and able to produce cards of their commercial association have no further meaning in this present day.

"Nowadays over one half the salesmen or travellers in Ontario do not travel by train at all but use their own automobiles in their daily work. The biggest majority of these have no association with any travellers association or organization and thus are not able to produce cards. Thus they are disfranchised.

"This law or regulation is antiquated and should be changed," insists Mayor Bone.

CALGARY WOMAN REACHES CENTURY

Mrs. Eleanor Kerr Receives Message from the King and Queen

Calgary, Dec. 27 (CP) — Mrs. Eleanor Kerr, celebrating her 100th birthday yesterday at her daughter's home here, received congratulatory messages from King George VI and Queen Elizabeth and scores of Canadian friends.

The white-haired woman whose life links with the Upper Canada rebellion of 1837-38 had scores of Calgarians call on her. About her were her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Jeffery, several great grandchildren and other relatives.

One of the most appreciated messages came from Mayor Horsley of Meaford, Ont., where Mrs. Kerr resided until her husband's death in 1917.

Messages also were received from Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada; Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former National Conservative leader; Premier Aberhart of Alberta, and many other prominent Canadians.

A century ago a young member of the Canadian militia was called to his home near Oshawa, Ont., from the front during the Upper Canada rebellion to find his wife had given birth to a daughter. The daughter later became Mrs. Eleanor Kerr.

Sideswipe Caused By Heavy Gale

First aftermath of the gale-like wind that sprang up early yesterday came shortly after eleven o'clock when Frank Harris, Wellington garageman, suffered slight injuries after his car had been struck by a light delivery truck, driven by Trueman Ferguson, R.R. 1 Consecon, near Potter's greenhouse on the Picton-Belleville highway.

According to H.T.O. Sam Ervine, who investigated the accident, Ferguson's truck caught by the strong wind, whipped sideways across the highway at this point crashing into the car driven by Harris, that was proceeding in a southerly direction, forcing it into the west ditch. Both vehicles were badly damaged. Ferguson was unhurt.

The accident being of a purely accidental nature no charges will be laid in connection with the affair, police stated.

A Community Shower was held in the church parlors Friday night for Mildred McColl and Sterling Nelson, whose wedding is to take place Dec. 28. A lovely lot of presents showed in what high esteem the young couple are held.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McColl and Vera Leal left on Saturday to spend Christmas with the former's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Art Consaul, Lansing, North Toronto, and are leaving there on Monday for Florida, where they intend to spend the winter.

Mrs. Ada Boneham, Belleville, spent Sunday and Monday with Wooler friends.

A surprise concert was put on by members of the Sunday School followed by Christmas games and carols. After refreshments were served, Santa Claus appeared and distributed gifts to the children. Afterward several hampers of eatables were made up for distribution throughout the parish.

Friday afternoon around two o'clock just as the north train pulled in who should appear coming down the Main Street on a truck adorned with a gaily decorated Christmas tree and laden with gifts but old Santa Claus. A parade was formed at the four corners with around two hundred children following Santa Claus and headed by the Citizens' Band. Arriving back at Mikel's Mill on the Front St. over two hundred bags of goodies were distributed by Santa and his helpers while the band played Christmas carols. The business section was crowded with young and old who came to see the happy faces of the children as they received their gifts. Next year several improvements are to be made in the procedure and it has been suggested by several that a community Christmas Tree be placed from which the gifts will be distributed around dusk, the myriad of colored lights adding greatly to the picture.

First Commercial Telephone

In October, 1877, Hugh C. Baker of Hamilton, son of the founder of the Canada Life, leased the first telephone instrument for commercial use in Canada. Three subscribers started the first telephone exchange in the British Empire.*

Thirty years before this epoch-making event the Canada Life issued its first policy. It was the first Canadian life insurance company and remained alone in the field for almost twenty years.

With the same enterprise so apparent in pioneer days, the Canada Life continues to safeguard the future of its policyholders and their dependents. Each week, an average of five hundred thousand dollars is distributed to those it serves.

WOMAN MAYOR GIVEN 3RD TERM

Mrs. Hanley of Webbwood Acclaimed as Well as Council

(By The Canadian Press)

Scores of snow-covered Ontario municipalities counted acclamations today as others prepared for election campaigns that will wind up with voting Monday. Many points, mostly townships, returned slates of municipal officers at qualifications yesterday, thus saving costs of an election.

Such a procedure took place at Webbwood, Sudbury district town, where Mrs. Barbara Hanley only woman mayor in Canada was re-elected by acclamation along with last year's council. Mrs. Hanley is entering her third consecutive term.

The season's worst blizzard, bringing high winds, snow and much lower temperatures, came with the qualifications. Old-fashioned winter settings were promised campaigns.

Largest municipality to select candidates was the city of Port Arthur where Mayor C. W. Cox, Liberal member for Port Arthur in the Ontario Legislature, will be opposed by J. W. Wolvin. Only other city to take part in Monday's election will be Oshawa where Mayor A. S. McLeese is running against former Alderman J. Coleman.

Among large western Ontario towns returning mayors by acclamation were Tilbury, Dresden and Ridgetown in Kent County. Acclamations were also received for the mayoralty in other towns, including Blenheim, Preston, Hespeler, Burlington, Clinton, Mitchell, and Listowel.

The village of Victoria Harbor on Georgian Bay elected Ed Dutton as reeve for the 16th successive year. He was given an acclamation for 1939. Councillors were also returned by acclamation.

TRAFFIC CRASH WORST IN YEARS

Two Critical of Thirteen Injured as Five Cars Involved

Niagara Falls, Ont., Dec. 26—(CP)—Five persons are confined to hospital today, two of them said to be in critical condition, following one of the worst traffic accidents in the history of the Niagara Peninsula. The accident, involving three trucks, an automobile and a large bus, occurred yesterday during a blinding blizzard that swept the province.

A succession of mishaps began when an oil truck skidded on icy pavement five miles west of here at Lunday's Lane and piled into a ditch. Driver of a truck immediately behind pulled his vehicle into the opposite ditch to avoid a crash and the driver of a third truck stopped on the highway to escape collision.

The automobile, unable to stop in time, crashed into the back of the standing truck and occupants of the car were thrown to the highway. The large bus then came on the scene and its driver took to the ditch to avoid striking any of the vehicles or persons on the roadway.

Three of the five in hospital were in the motor car whose engine was driven back several feet by the impact. Another was the driver of the first ditched bus and the fifth was Mrs. Laura Dunn, East Douglas, Mass., one of 21 passengers in the eight-ton bus, who suffered a cut eye and facial lacerations.

Hungarian Gendarmes Fire on Slovak Crowd

Budapest, Dec. 27—(AP)— One man was shot to death and several persons were injured today when Hungarian gendarmes fired into a crowd of Slovaks who were demonstrating for the return of the Hungarian border town of Nagysurany to Czecho-Slovakia.

Nagysurany, 55 miles east of Bratislava, was included in the 4,875 square miles Czecho-Slovakia ceded to Hungary last month.

According to an official Hungarian account, Slovaks of Nagysurany, a manufacturing centre with large sugar-beet refineries, for several days had been demonstrating in front of the Hungarian gendarmerie station.

FEWER ACCIDENTS

Traffic accidents during the long Yuletide celebration were the lowest in some years, a sign that the agencies at work to keep down the number of tragedies of this kind have had an influence. The weather also had a part in the reduction as on Monday night conditions did not favor speed.

This year there was a great deal of stress laid in advance on the plans of the authorities to patrol streets and roads. The advice must have been heeded by those who used the roadways.

In driving eternal vigilance is the price of safety. The authorities and the newspapers by referring to the need for safety in driving serve effectively in making safety campaigns a success.

Toronto reported a large reduction in the accidents, with one fatality instead of three and a sharp reduction in the number of persons injured. This was no doubt in large measure due to the campaign put on in that city for safe driving.

"NO OFFICIAL GERMAN REACTION"

The outspoken attitude of the United States to Germany last week was more than the Germans expected and accordingly the Germans found that even "this must not be allowed to interfere with the spirit of Christmastime."

German word attacks of a very flamboyant character have been characteristic for many months of the German leaders and propogandist press but for once the American speeches had the better of them, and at the very time when German-American relations were said to be growing more strained, the Germans decided to call a halt and say that there was "no official German reaction." In one of the news services however, German readers could find an attack on "disturbances of the Christmas peace", attacking Senator Pittman, who was said by the service to have "insulted a great European nation in such an unbelievable manner." The paper spoke of cynical baseness and impudent smugness in assuming to speak for the American people without consulting them. This must make Americans smile coming from a news service in a land where there is dictatorship and where the people are not consulted as Americans and Englishmen understand "consultation."

OVER TUNISIA

Has the Munich Pact established an idea or a method in the minds of dictators? Mussolini has, according to report, let the French know through an unofficial channel that he would like the Franco-Italian differences of opinion over the Mediterranean and African colonial questions to be brought to arbitration. The rumor mentions Hitler as Italy's representative and Chamberlain as favored for referee for France. Do the dictators see a new way?

It will be interesting to watch the course of the dispute and its final disposition to see what part, if any, arbitration will play in it.

It is remembered that Hitler at the time of the Austrian Anschluss spoke of it as a bloodless victory and at the time of Munich the same thing was said of the gains to Germany after the Czechoslovakian crisis. Italy has received nothing lately and Spain is not settled, and it would seem as if the swing may come to the Mediterranean with Italy as the intended reaper.

It seems that Italy does not want war any more than Hitler but France is evidently not to be frightened by the threat of the future for she refuses to yield any territory which the Italian dictator might want. To the Frenchmen, as to others, Italian agitation seems nothing more than the principle which has been causing so much unrest and fear in the world — demanding of territories in disregard of treaties and reviving of the question of former ownership.

Now the world sees that the demonstration which was staged some weeks ago in Rome when there were shouts for "Tunisia" must have had some background of support for the Italian agitation for a "settlement" of the colonial question in the Mediterranean is coming out into the open. Italy's denunciation of the 1935 Treaty seems a proof.

Now it has reached the stage of a quarrel and the showdown is near, according to general belief. A couple of weeks ago was the first the public knew of it through the channel of the press story of the agitation in Rome.

Homes will be slowly returning to their accustomed appearance after the great Christmas festival This year there were more decorations for the season than usual. Parcels were done up in brilliant wrapping paper, Christmas trees adorned many homes.

But the toys will not be dropped this week or next. They will linger after the evergreen has been removed and the wrapping paper and string have been cleared away.

Normalcy however will not quite return until after next Monday, when the household will settle down to three months of winter weather and winter occupations and amusements.

NO PAPER TONIGHT, saddest saying of a general holiday. Folks have got so accustomed to looking for the home paper every evening except Sunday that it seems hard to get along without it. Every holiday reminds us of that — how important the home paper is to every home in its orbit. That's why folks pay the subscription price and do not begrudge the money, the most value for the least money possible. When you can get over three hundred papers with the news of the world and all the local news delivered to your door daily for a few cents a day — what greater value could there be? Harking back to the good old times we hear so much about it is well to remember that those funny looking weekly papers used to cost the head of the house at least one pound sterling each year, and that means more than five dollars of our money, for one paper each week — 52 in all — printing foreign news received by mail or via scissors route, and little if any local news. Plenty of poetry, indifferent stories and heavy on editorial. Now we have to have our news piping hot daily — a daily in every home and perhaps two dailies — but the home daily is a MUST.

ONE OF THE ODDEST CHRISTMAS GIFTS OF ALL TIME came to Smithfield Section, west of Trenton, where a modern Public School building was presented the settlement by a former resident, E. A. Collins, B.-Sc.. As a lad the donor attended the little Red School House — a barefoot lad he had climbed the highest fence to see the train go by and dream of the time when the train would take him out into the great world full of such mystery and enticing promises. The time came when the train took the lad away and in the years between he has risen to a position of eminence in a great national organization. This is not his first gift to Smithfield by any means and he has taken a constant interest in the Smithfield hockey team which has made a splendid record in the county leagues. The new school will be modeled after the most modern public school in Ontario.

DESIGNATED BY THE KINGSTON WHIG AS THE SHORTEST RAILWAY IN THE WORLD the Thousand Islands Railway, which runs from Gananoque town to Gananoque Junction where it connects with the Canadian National Railway (formerly the Grand Trunk Railway) 4.6 miles, is interesting. On this railway you can buy a return ticket to the cemetery and live to boast of it. The Thousand Islands Railway was built in 1883 by the Rathbun Company of Deseronto, also owners of the Oshawa Railway and the Bay of Quinte Railway. The line has four stops, Gananoque King Street, Cemetery, Cheeseboro and Gananoque Junction. The stop at the Cemetery was established by the builders at the request of the people of an earlier day when roads to the cemetery were sometimes impassable. In 1912 the railway was taken over by the Grand Trunk Railway and is now a part of the Canadian National Railway system.

That's How the Walk Began

North American ballroom enthusiasts who nightly strut their stuff in the Lambeth Walk and hilariously shout "Oi!" in the most approved English style, may not be so proud of themselves when they learn that they may be imitating inmates of a lunatic asylum.

x x x

But facts are facts. Lupino Lane, famous little comic star of Me and My Girl, now running in Victoria Palace, London, is the true inventor and begetter of the Lambeth Walk. Interviewed in his dressing room the other evening, Lane mused along:

"In the last show in which I appeared I acted the part of a Cockney and did a sort of a Cockney walk. When one of the characters in the play asked me where I learned it, I replied 'Lambeth.' Naturally, in the present show when I developed the thing into something like a real grotesque dance, I called it the 'Lambeth Walk.'

"Now your true Londoner is your true Cockney. And he is probably as old as London itself. As you know, as early as 43 A. D. London was a Roman city known as 'Londinium.' You remember at the shows in the forum when the crowd wanted to see a gladiator die, they turned thumbs down. If they wanted him to live, they turned thumbs up. Your Cockney of today when he swaggers along and is happy, swings his hands with his thumbs up. I adopted that posture in my 'lambeth Walk.' It descends from these Roman Cockneys.

x x x

"Now the oldest hospital in the world for the treatment of insane persons is Bethlem Royal hospital, which was founded in the Bishopsgate section of old London in 1247.

"In 1815 the hospital was moved to the region south of the Thames. It stood on Lambeth road. People were admitted, for a time, to the hospital to view the patients, as today they go to the zoo.

"Right near the Lambeth road is a street called Lambeth walk, where the milder insane patients were occasionally taken for strolls by the keepers. They may have walked grotesquely. And your Cockney, quick on the uptake, may have adopted some of their steps. He takes anything that amuses or interests him and changes it into something that is typical of himself."—Milton Bronner in Hamilton Spectator.

CARELESS MAILINGS

Anent Christmas-time mailings, we often hear people say "lost in the mails" when some card or letter fails to reach its intended destination. Uncle Sam does not lose one in a million, but he does destroy tons of mail because of the carelessness, ignorance or downright dishonesty of those who send mail.

For 1½ cents postage, third-class matter, Uncle Sam agrees only to receive a greeting card, in an unsealed envelope, bearing no written message other than the greeting and signature, and to deliver it to one single itemized address which must appear on the envelope. But people will write messages and hope they get through at the bargain rate. They omit postage, number and street, sometimes even the town. They paste stamps over names or address, and even think that putting "Please Forward" on the envelope is equivalent to the other 1½ cents needed for first-class service.

All these "violations" take third-class mail direct to the "Dead-Desk" for destruction and give the wastepaper man a happy Christmas.

If you wish this class mail delivered surely, don't write messages, don't omit postage or street or number from the address. And if you want it forwarded beyond the route of the first carrier, in case of removal or unknown local address, put on a 3c stamp.

Most "lost" first-class mail is "lost" because of no return address, no number and no street in the address and no complete address inside. Letters to Betty Brown, Buster Jones or Mrs. Helen Smith might be returned for identifying addresses if return address were shown, but not knowing which of the many Brown, Jones or Smith families they should go to they are sent to the Dead Letter Office at Washington—and it takes more postage to get them back from there.

Most Postoffice auctions of "unclaimed packages" are of "no return address" items—unreturnable when undelivered. — A "Dead Desk" Man, Maplewood, N.J., Dec. 21, 1938, in a letter to New York Times.

The New Treatment for Mental Ailments

When a leg or arm is so badly injured or poisoned that life is threatened the patient's family do not hesitate to permit it to be removed by surgery. When the mind is so badly afflicted that the patient is unable to take his place in the community and the physician wishes to use the new treatment—large doses of insulin that cause shock which is sometimes followed by a cure the family are often afraid to permit their loved one to undergo this method of treatment. Despite brilliant results in many cases, there have likewise been many failures and also other cases where the improvement lasted but a short time.

The most satisfactory results have been obtained where the mental symptoms have existed for months instead of years.

What may prove effective in the treatment of these mental or 'behavior' cases is metrazol (a heart and lung stimulant) which is now being tested in various parts of the world. Dr. A. M. Wyllie, in Glasgow Medical Journal reports his results in a series of twenty cases of dementia precox. These patients live in a persistent dream state which totally unfits them for the work, cares, and duties of life. Their scheme or system of life satisfies them however.

There were eight women and twelve men in Dr. Wyllie's series of cases and physical improvement was observed in seventeen. Those that were very much underweight gained weight rapidly, gaining from 14 to 21 pounds in two months. Their appetites improved and their complexion became healthier. These seventeen patients also showed mental improvment, that is they showed more common sense, more ability to face the real facts of life. One patient who had been mute for ten years was enabled to speak. The others became less absorbed in themselves and spoke more freely. Some of the patients who were previously idle were induced to occupy themselves. A patient with profound melancholia greatly improved; two with persistent stupor showed slight improvement.

I am recording the above results so that families and patients themselves may be willing to undergo this treatment if so advised by their physicians. It is certainly worth while. "Owing to the simplicity and safety of the metrazol treatment, it may replace treatment by insulin shock."

Roses on the Maginot Line

At first blush the planting of roses along the Maginot Line could not fail to seem a little incongruous—like putting a daisy chain on a tiger or a pink ribbon bow on a bomb, or the unseasonable results of the brawls between Oberon and Titania, when,

On old Hiems' thin and icy crown
An odorous chaplet of sweet summer buds
Is, as in mockery, set.

But that was at first blush only. The French are witty mockers, but they do not mock at the security of their national existence. They are not sentimentalists, to drape a terrific truth in a pretty veil and pretend, whether to themselves or to others, that it is not there. If they intend to plant roses along the Maginot Line, they are sure to have a good reason for it—and a better reason than the very practical French view of flower-growing as a means of profit. We may get a little closer to that good reason, perhaps, if we think of the inlaid armour which knights and princes used to wear, in battle as well as in the tourney, or of Chinese artillery, designed to look terrible indeed, but also beautiful in the forms of dragons, or, again, of Saracen gunstocks wrought with as much elaborate and dainty care as a jewel-box or a watch-case. Those craftsmen, armourers, gunsmiths, carvers, and ivory-workers, and the men who ordered or bought their works of art were feeling their way towards the very sentiment—say rather, the conviction—which plants roses on the Maginot Line.

By a coincidence Matthew Arnold, thinking of something very different, has left three lines that go straight to the point:

Strew on her roses, roses,
And never a spray of yew.
In quiet she reposes . . .

The roses are a symbol of the quiet; we read a few lines later that "peace laps her round." And like the decoration of the armour and the guns, but on a far more majestic scale, the roses are a sign, first of a desire to do honor to that which is the means of defence of a man or a nation, and next of the deeper conviction of confidence in that means of defence. The roses are to be planted because the Maginot Line is made to repose in quiet, to be lapped round by peace. It is to be associated in idea not with the funeral yew, but with the flower of the high summer of life and happiness. The roses are an affirmation of the desire for peace and of the resolve that peace shall prevail.—London Times.

Broadway Rumbles Along

New York's finest have been organized into a helmeted and blue-garbed Broadway Squad to patrol "the most famous street in the world" from Bowling Green to 59th Street. Something must be done to keep the buggies moving . . . Palace cars with curtained windows and plush upholstery are catering to the better class trade at 20 cents a seat. Third Avenue's El announces a fare of 10 cents if a seat is vacant, otherwise free. Between 5 and 7, a.m., or p.m., everybody rides for a nickel, sitting or standing . . . Rumors of a lady mustache-curler are discounted. Miss Jessie Lyons proves the prophets right by setting up a shop on 32nd street. She "studies men's faces and helps them cultivate the most becoming mustaches for their particular type" . . . Broadway is cynical.

But today: Commissioner Valentine rules New York police on patrol or traffic duty may remove Summer blouses. The well dressed cop is wearing regulation shirt, black four-in-hand, and black belt. No gloves or suspenders, and the shield fastened to the left side of the belt . . Pedestrian traffic during the Christmas shopping rush is heaviest in the Times Square and 14th Street areas. Policemen are still dislodging "low pitchmen" from their little sidewalk crowds to whom they sell everything from can openers that won't open cans to potato peelers that won't peel anything. The hawkers move, immediately, for business in the next block . . . Charlie, at the Aquarium, is living in retirement. "The most talented sea lion in Greater New York" can at times still be encouraged to break into a hula and give imitations of cows and horses . . . Visitors to New York are reduced to "alvins" in up-to-date underworld slang. In the same vein, "glue" means to steal, "cow-simple" is a young man in love, "rumbled" means caught in the act, and a "five-specker" is a five-year term in Sing Sing.

Next year: "The most utterly super spectacle ever conceived by the mind of man or contrived by the outlay of $150,000,000" is confessed by publicity agents to be the World's Fair which begins April 30. Its location is in a reclaimed dump . . . Policemen in "pleasing operatic" uniforms (according to the New York Times Magazine), patrol the Fair Grounds. The Fair's president designed them himself, without assistance from Hollywood..Grass bordering the walks is protected by little signs bearing one plaintive word, "Please" . . . Sixty million people will be spending a billion dollars at the Fair . . . Oversize hot dogs and hamburgers will create indigestion in the sixty million . . . Spectacle is still being piled on spectacle, and marvel follows marvel. No end is yet in sight . . . Broadway is still cynical.—Ottawa Farm Journal.

BRAZIL'S COFFEE

A remark by Mr. Ybarra in the last of his dispatches from Brazil makes it seem unlikely that there ever will be a completely peaceful world. Men may some day come to agree on economics and politics and frontiers, but there will never be a meeting of minds on the proper way to prepare coffee. Mr. Ybarra says that the easy-going Brazilians do not take much stock in the Yankee Peril and wily Uncle Sam. When such a phase assails their ears the Brazilians smile, shrug their shoulders and "go on sipping that blend of midnight and dynamite known in Brazil as after-dinner coffee."

So it seems they don't know how to make good coffee in Brazil. To pursue a haunting line of thought from Irving Berlin, perhaps they are poor at cooking rice in China. People stage an inferior type of bullfight in Spain. It is hard to get a really good steak in Texas or satisfactory piece of cheese in Switzerland.—N. Y. Times

Shannonville

Shannonville — The spirit of Christmas prevailed throughout the community over the week end and had a strong influence during the past week over the children of the village who were unusually quiet and good. The majority of the residents celebrated Christmas on Sunday although a few celebrated on Monday. During the past week the local post office was a beehive of activity. Ordinarily outgoing mail is ready for distribution by at least two o'clock but during the Christmas rush the mail was not ready before 4.30 P. M. and as a result local mail couriers delivered their mail by moonlight.

This week seems like old home week to the villagers. The majority of the boys and girls formerly of the village who are employed throughout Canada and even in the United States are home for the Christmas vacation and villagers are indeed in a reminiscent mood as they chat with the 'Visitors'. Shannonville has every right to be proud this Christmas as there is no one without plenty to eat and as a result the villagers felt that they could eat their Christmas dinner without worrying about the condition of their neighbors.

Weddings

KENNEDY—MACKINNON

Vancouver, Dec. 27.—(CP)—Patricia Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. MacKinnon of Vancouver, and Flight Lieut. Walter E. Kennedy, were married yesterday by Rev. George Pringle in St. Andrews-Wesley Chapel.

The couple left for a honeymoon in Oregon and will continue on to Trenton, Ont., to live where the groom is stationed.

MACALLISTER—RODGERS

The marriage took place quietly at noon yesterday in St. Paul's Church, Innisfil, Ont., of Miss Esther Louise Rodgers, daughter of Major and Mrs. George Robert Rodgers, Camp Borden, to Flight Lieutenant Gordon Dale Macallister, Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Macallister, Rochester, Alberta. Rev. Mr. Smith officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a frock of French grey crepe with corsage of bouvardia and blue accessories. Her sister, Miss Phyllis Rodgers, was her only attendant, and the groomsman was Flight Lieutenant Murray Lister. On their return from a trip to Montreal, the couple will live in Trenton.

RILEY—WEESE

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday evening, December 24th at 8 p.m. at the home of the Rev. W. J. Walker, 271 George Street., minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, when Miss Bessie Weese, Rossmore, became the bride of Mr. Edward Riley, Wellington, with the Rev. Walker officiating.

The bride was attended by Miss Betty Kew, Belleville, while the groom was attended by his brother, Mr. William Riley.

The bride looked very charming in a brown velvet dress with matching accessories. Her corsage consisted of bronze and yellow baby 'mums with baby's breath. The bridesmaid's dress was of navy moire taffeta with a corsage of red roses.

Immediately after the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the groom's parents in Wellington, Ont., with immediate relatives and friends being present.

The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

BRADSHAW—ROBINSON

London, Ont., Dec. 28.—A tiny white aeroplane "took off" from a white, tiered wedding cake, at a reception following the marriage Monday afternoon of Miss Marjorie Mae Robinson, South London, and Flight Lieutenant Douglas Alexander Ransome Bradshaw, recently of Toronto. He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. G. Bradshaw, North London; and at present is stationed with the Royal Canadian Air Force in Trenton.

The cake ornament is symbolic of a common interest of the young couple, as the bridegroom's profession signifies an ambition since high school days, and the bride is herself a member of London Flying Club, and flew "solo" for the first time this fall, one of the few girls in the club to accomplish this. She is now ready to try for her private pilot's license, but owing to illness she could not achieve it before the wedding. Although she will not be allowed to fly government planes in Trenton, she hopes to return to London, perhaps in the spring, and take the pilots' test.

The wedding was solemnized at six o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Robinson, Elmwood Avenue. The bride, a graduate of University of Western Ontario in '36, was subprefect in her senior year, and on the staff of Dean K. P. R. Neville's office for the last year and a half. Given in marriage by her father, she was gowned in white sheer mounted on taffeta, the shirred bodice having a Peter Pan collar, and long sleeves of the shirred jacket coming to a point on the hand. She carried Japanese lilacs and white roses. A sprig of lilac fastened the white tulle veil.

Miss Katharine Craig of London, wore turquoise brocaded satin, in Empire style, with puffed sleeves, and her flowers were Sweetheart roses and pink carnations in a Colonial bouquet. Flying Officer Cavendish Carling-Kelly of Trenton attended the bridegroom. Only the two families attended the ceremony, at which Rev. P. P. W. Ziemann, former minister at Talbot Street Baptist Church officiated, assisted by Rev. Stanley Inman, present minister. Mr. Kingsley Ireland, church organist, played wedding music.

At the reception, white tapers, pink roses buddleia and stevia graced the buffet table. Mrs. Robinson gowned in powder blue crepe and corsage of Briarcliff roses and Mrs. Bradshaw in beige crepe with jacket, and corsage of violets and Talisman roses, received. To travel, the bride donned an ensemble in glass blue crepe, gray broadtail coat with squirrel collar and blue accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw left by motor for the United States.

RENNIE—ARTIS

A pretty wedding took place in Christ Church, with Rev. G. G. Wright officiating, at eleven o'clock on Monday, December 26, when Ethel May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Artis, became the bride of Donald K. Rennie, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Rennie of Detroit, Mich.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harry Artis of Sarnia, Ont, was lovely in Rust chiffon velvet with gold accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. Her bridesmaid, Miss Beatrice Russell wore blue chiffon velvet with matching accessories and corsage of tea roses. The groom was assisted by Mr. B. Leslie of Napanee.

The groom presented the bridesmaid with a gold Rosary and the best man with a military brush set.

A luncheon was served to the immediate friends at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's travelling dress was of British Tan with brown accessories.

After a short honeymoon they will reside in Detroit, Mich.

MAVETY—CRUJI

On Monday morning, December 26th., the wedding took place at St. Michael's of Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Cruji and Mr. Delbert T.. Mavety, Hamilton, son of Mr. Jason Mavety, Brockville. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., officiated.

Effeminate Look Now Is Goal

By HELEN FOLLETT

Girls are themselves again, using make-up discreetly and taking to the tall up hairdress that imparts charms and dignity. The exotic one must take a back seat. You know her, with her pale skin, crayoned eyebrows and eyelids heavily smudged with shadows.

There is a change in the appearance of the complexion and it is all to the good. It is no longer seemly or smart to carry vivid warpaint. The feminine phiz is treated lightly and delicately. Powder gives delicacy to [illegible] skin; if rouge is used, it is only a faint glow. The rouge pad is no longer permitted to go wild, scamper over the cheeks; nor is the lipstick privileged to smear itself on in double layers and yell fire.

The idea is to simualte the natural complexion in its most sublime state of perfection, not to profane it, as happened when women fared forth with vivid red spots on their cheeks and lips varnished with vermilion or cherry pigment.

Even the chronic critics can't find a thing to harp about. It's all rather nice, this new kind of charm. It's thoroughly effeminate. It's what the men like. Men are full of human nature and don't like their women to look conspicuous. Dear old dodos that they are!

The chronically red nose is a dreadful affliction, one of the worst of all beauty griefs. Instead of trying this and that, the wise course is to seek a physician who treats diseases of the skin and scalp. In the long run, that step pays.

The trouble may be due to sluggish circulation, to some digestive disturbance, to a local infection. It is difficult to get at the root of the trouble.

If you hesitate to seek medical attention, cut down on condiments, pastries and highly spiced—foods. Never use water very hot or very cold. Every night apply ointment of zinc oxide Use a light powder but don't grind it in.

At The Theatres

AT THE McCARTHY

"Girls' School"

Distinctly one of the most enjoyable and entertaining productions to come from Hollywood in some time, the new starring film of Anne Shirley, with Nan Grey, Noah Beery, Jr., Realph Bellamy and a host of beautiful girl stars of tomorrow, entitled, "Girls' School" at the McCarthy Theatre. We urge you to come and see "Girls School", its heart-throbbing romance, its adventurous back-ground, its human venturous back-ground, it's human interest and its direction by John Brahm, will truly appeal to all as one of the finest screen offerings to date, it is one "swell movie" do not miss it.

"Toyland Casino" one of the cleverest musical treats, presenting the pick of the world's greatest child stars in a short subject production that every adult and child in Belleville will thoroughly enjoy, plus an excellent surrounding programme offering at the McCarthy theatre.

"Rio Grande"

Flaming with gun-fire! Blazing with action and with what it takes to make thrill-seekers pack the theatre to the roof-top. Charles Starrett, ace of western hero's comes to the McCarthy theatre next in one of the swiftest-moving western productions that ever flashed across the screen, "Rio Grande," Dick Curtis, Hank Bell, Bob Nolan and other well-known western characters appear in this feature hit of a thousand thrills "Rio Grande." The third chapter of the detective mystery serial "The Spider's Web," Leon Errol in his latest comedy "The Jitters," a screen vaudeville musical hit entitled "Carnival Show" and a merry melody laugh hit will also be presented on the programme with the above western feature coming next to the McCarthy theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Fools For Scandal"

Fun aplenty is promised for patrons of the Capitol Theatre— for "Fools for Scandal," a comedy-romance with Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet as its stars, will be given its local premiere there. It is presented by Warner Bros. and was both produced and directed by Mervyn LeRoy, ace director of comedies.

Gravet's tremendous success last year in his first American movie, "The King and the Chorus Girl," will be readily recalled. Joan Blondell was his co-star in that. He is the young Franco-Belgian idol that LeRoy discovered in Paris and put under personal contract.

Carole Lombard's successes have been innumerable. Her two latest, each a tremendous hit, are "True Confession" and "nothing Sacred." In her present picture, she portrays an American movie queen (which ought to be easy for her) seeing Paris and London in disguise. Gravet plays an incognito Baron doing approximately the same thing.

Rodgers and Hart, America's leading tunesmiths, wrote the music, including two songs which are already in the hit class—"There's A Boy In Harlem" and "Can You Forget?" Adding to the general gaiety there's a Paris night club scene featuring a big dance number, and a "Noah's Ark Party" to which all the guests come in animal costume.

Other notables in the excellent cast of "Fools for Scandal" include Ralph Bellamy, Isabel Jeans, Marie Wilson, Allen Jenkins, Marcia Ralston and Les Hite and his orchestra.

On the same bill will be seen "Stranger Than Fiction," a musical "Sideshow Fakir", and a sport reel, "High Wide and Dashing."

AT THE BELLE

"The Citadel"

When Dr. A. J. Cronin wrote the novel that was to place him at the top of the best-seller lists in both England and America, he wrote it with the idea that Robert Donat would be its ideal star should the book ever reach the screen.

The book, "The Citadel", has reached the screen, and M-G-M in filming it as its second British-made production, following on the successful "Yank at Oxford", concurred with the author's views in its selection of the male star.

For Robert Donat plays Dr. Andrew Manson in the filmization of "The Citadel", which will be shown at the Belle with the American Rosalind Russell enacting the doctor's wife and other prominent roles in a cast of one hundred speaking parts filled by such well-known British artists as Ralph Richardson, Rex Harrison, Emlyn Williams and Penelope Dudley-Ward, under the direction of King Vidor.

Two years ago, when Cronin had already become a best-selling author, he felt the urge for a home hidden from the trespassers on his private life. With his wife he searched the countryside, touring the south coast of England, seeking a place where he might settle and bring a new novel about a doctor into being. Finally, one day Cronin came up a narrow lane on Sussex Downs. Here behind a high hedge, through a white gateway, was a square, solid stone house, an old rectory. Here "The Citadel" was written, subsequently to become alive on the screen.

To Cronin his writing is, in his own words, "hard work". There is nothing of the hack scribbler about him. His original manuscripts are models of accuracy and afterthought. Large spaces between the words allow for neatness and correction; long lines drawn finely through whole passages show his care in reading through, his keen striving after the right phrase.

He works anywhere, any time, retiring sometimes to a room overlooking the hills. But despite this intensity there is also the family man, Dr. Cronin. His appearance is contented and it is due to the affection for his wife, his love for his children. Two boys are at school, one at Arundel, the other at Ampleforth. The third, eight-months old Andrew, is lord of his home.

Blue-eyed, sandy-haired, with a humorous mouth, there is very little about Cronin to suggest the grim power of his thoughts in book form. Almost everything belies him as the man who drew such gripping and forceful characters in "The Citadel". He strolls across his lawns with his dog; sometimes plays a little tennis, sometimes has some golf practice.

His garden interests him, his fruit trees give him problems, the birds on his raspberries worry him. He likes to watch the cattle in his fields, to climb up on the high ridges of the Downs, to walk on the summits with the wind in his face.

But always there are ideas brewing, something latent stirring which causes Cronin to pause from leisure to take his pen and send words across his page that almost smoulder as his ink dries.

"Stablemates"

Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney—both veterans of the screen are united for the first time in "Stablemates", a melodrama of the race track, studded with thrills and fun that closes a highly successful engagement at the Belle.

Belle News of the Day, "The Captain's Christmas", a timely color cartoon and a Pete Smith's "Follow the Arrow" complete a splendid program that will appeal to every member of the family.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Thumb-Sucking Constitutes Important Problem to Mothers

Every month I get many letters from mothers who want to know how to break children of the habit of thumb-sucking that I have become convinced that it is a very important matter insofar as the raising of children is concerned.

The impression has gotten abroad that if a baby starts sucking its thumb, then it automatically follows that his mouth will be malformed and his teeth will be out of shape. Of course, there is danger that if a baby is allowed to suck its thumb as much as it likes that the mouth won't achieve its proper shape and the teeth may be thrown out of line as a result.

Much too often, I am afraid, mothers overdo things in trying to cure this habit in children. In fact they emphasize the habit so much that the child is apt to suck its thumb because his or her attention has been drawn to it so often.

What convinces me that most people emphasize this habit, is the experience we had when the Quintuplets were born. We received all kinds of medicines and apparatus from people all over the United States and Canada, along with a whole lot of regulations and instructions as to its use.

Most of the medicines sent us contained bad-tasting ingredients. You were supposed to put this on the baby's thumb, and when the child put the thumb in its mouth, the bad taste induced it to remove the thumb at once.

Of course we didn't try it on the Quints but I have known other mothers to try it, and I can't say I'm in favor of it. For one thing, the child usually has ideas of his own, and he may suck his thumb no matter how disagreeable the taste.

The apparatus we received consisted usually of splints of various lengths and kinds. Some such splints would cover only the thumb; others were for the baby's whole hand; some were huge things supposed to cover the infant's arm and hand. They were pretty formidable cures, I can tell you.

I had some people write me and advise that we sew up the sleeves of the children's nighties so they couldn't get at their thumbs when they went to bed. All these people some of them dentists, warned me that if the children sucked their thumbs their teeth would undoubtedly grow in crooked.

We were fortunate at this time to have the advice of Dr. W. E. Blazt, head of a group studying child psychology in the University of Toronto Dr. Blatz at that time was supervising their preschool training. He had no hesitation in supporting our theory that all medicines and mechanical means for breaking this habit were no good. In place of these he advised us to train the children in proper habits, and in that way this habit would take care of itself.

Don't misunderstand me, I am not saying that thumb-sucking isn't bad. I'm sure that it has a bad effect on incoming teeth. But if it isn't continued too long, I don't think any permanent damage will be done.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

How to Keep Him Happy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been reading your column for years, and following your advice to other girls, I won my husband. We are both very young—he is 21 and I'm 18. Now please tell me how to keep him happy so he will remain constant to me. My rule is never to use a cross word where you can use a kind one.

Young Bride

Heartiest congratulations! I am so glad to have helped in bringing about such a happy union, and I believe your own intention to be sweet and gentle will go farther than anything toward making a success of your marriage.

Another important thing is to see that your home looks attractive and that you learn to cook appetizing dishes. You probably realize these things.

A further matter affecting both your husband's happiness and your own is that you must not, in your love for him, encourage him to grow selfish and thoughtless of you. I hope you fill continue to be kind to each other and have all the good times possible while you are both young.

Failed to Keep a Date

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a young man at the beach this summer and he came over to see me several times, as he lives in the same city. Then one day he made a date, and, saying he had a business appointment, spent only a short time with me. When he left, he made a date for next week, but failed to keep it. And I haven't heard from him since. I saw him once, but only to say "hello" and pass on. Do you think it would be all right to call him on the phone and find out why he didn't come, or had I better let the whole thing drop?

Wondering

I think it would be a mistake to force the issue, when a young man acts like this. He may not want to tell you his reason for breaking a date. The world is full of interesting young men. Try and forget this one, and I'm sure you will find another friend who has better manners.

To Marry or Not to Marry

Dear Miss Fairfax

The young man in whom I am very much interested is 27 years old, and I am 25. We became very good friends during the summer and in the past month have talked of marriage. He is in the building business, and I have a fairly good position. He has a little money saved and so have I.

The question is: Do you think, if we started in on a small scale, we would be wise to marry now instead of waiting until he is better established in business? Or perhaps you think it best we keep on seeing each other occassionally and marry later? Sometimes we "live in hope and die in despair". We are both college graduates. Do you think we can work it out?

Marjorie

Your problem is simple. I should certainly advise you to marry. You're both college graduates, and therefore have the best possible equipment for making a success of marriage, even if things don't always run along smoothly. Your letter is very sensible and as you are willing to start life together on a small scale, I know you'll make a go of it. Best of luck to you.

MOVE PERFECTLY AND STAY YOUNG!

By HELEN FOLLETT

Do you know that posture has much to do with weight? A woman who sits, stands and walks properly is less likely to take on tonnage because her muscles are firm and resilient. Healthy muscles won't have fat cell living on them. Through constant activity they shake them off.

A figure that moves perfectly will stay young no matter how many birthdays arrive. The slouchy young lady of 20 has an older shape than that of the middle-aged woman who has kept hers in form, whose pose is vibrant, movements graceful. Use your body with distinction and you will appear poised and queenly. Carry the chest high, shoulders and head balanced. Bear the weight on the ball of the foot. When walking walk so that anyone approaching will not see the soles of your shoes.

Stretching Routine

If you have got muscle lazy, do stretching exercises night and morning. Stand facing the wall, see how high uup you can reach. This extension of the spinal column will awaken all the fibres from your pretty neck to your little pink toes.

Stand tall, hands lifted high, swing them from side to side, swaying at the waistline. It is good for a lot of figure griefs that may be worrying you.

Don't play bridge all afternoon wearing your hat. You'll get sweat and sebaceous glands in a great stew, will ruin your finger wave and do your glorious crown an injustice.

Every night ventilate your tresses. Run your fingers across the scalp lift the hair, fluff it out. When using a brush, groom the hair the way it doesn't go when it is dressed; it gets tired of always being swept the same way.

Pick up the scalp, roll it until it feels warm. Warmth shows the blood streams are chasing each other. Do it five minutes every night and locks will have luster and life.

Quiet Church Wedding Develops Problems

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I would like a very quiet church wedding, with only the immediate families and a few friends present. Will it be necessary to have ushers, since there will be such a few present?

2—Would it be correct to write the invitations under those conditions?

3—My fiance has a brother whom I have never met. He lives a great distance from here, and couldn't possibly come to our wedding. Should I invite him and his family? If so, how?

4—I, too, have two brothers too far away to attend. Shall I invite them?

R.

1—No, it probably would not be necessary for you to have ushers when there are to be so few kuests. But perhaps you might like, just as a convenience (you needn't even call them ushers.) a cousin or a young man who is a close friend of the family, or maybe of both families, to take charge of the seating of the guests. The seating can be done very informally, and, if the young man knows both families he would know whom to seat at the right of the aisle. (The bridegroom's immediate family occupy the front pew, and the other relatives and friends in the pews directly behind; the bride's immediate family in the front pew at the left of the aisle, with her other relatives and friends in the pews directly behind.)

2—Yes the invitations for this informal wedding would properly be notes. And, properly, they had best be written by your mother, the hostess of the occasion.

3—Yes, even if it seems impossible for your fiance's brother to attend your wedding, you should make the gracious gesture of inviting him and his family. You, yourself would probably like to write this letter, beginning it if you like 'Dear Mary and John'. Tell them of your wedding plans and express your hope that a kind fate will make it possible for them and their family to be with you and their brother on this important day. Chat with them about your plans for the future. Keep in mind that they will be eager to have you tell them any news about you and your fiance.

4—Yes.

After-Luncheon Coffee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

Please give me the correct use of demi-tasse cups? Is it correct for me to use them after luncheon in the drawing-room, or does one use tea cups after luncheon?

Polly

It is quite correct to use the so-called after-dinner coffee cups when you serve after-luncheon coffee in your drawing-room. They are also correctly used when the coffee is served at table, either after dinner or after luncheon. Sometimes, when coffee is served at table after luncheon, tea cups are used, but, if one owns the demitasse cups they are more appropriate for this service.

1938 Milestones In Medical Science

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AS WE go into a new year we pause to take stock, and in science, as in business, we try to find out how much farther along we are this year than last.

In looking over the year's progress in medical science, I have the advantage of the Year Books, published annually at this time, which gather together all the significant advances in medicine, surgery, obstetrics and the basic sciences. There are 12 of these (including one on dentistry), each of about 800 pages, so it is plain that I cannot hope to recount all the advances in the space at my disposal. Anyway, most of them are so technical and of such minor technical importance that it would be impossible to make them understandable to a lay audience. So I will recount only a few of the more important triumphs.

We have been startled in the last six months of this year by the invention of a new microscope. This puts all previous ones in the shade. Our present ones seemed pretty good, but their magnification is only 6,000 times, while this new microscope magnifies 20,000 times.

On New Principle.

At the California Institute of Technology, in Pasadena, President Milliken showed me last year the enormous lens they were grinding for what is to be the world's largest telescope. I asked him how much better it will be than the largest now existing and he replied, "It will penetrate 27,000 times further into space than the telescope on the Mount Wilson observatory."

Such an instrument is our new microscope. It was designed by three Germans, Doctors von Borries, E. Ruska and H. Ruska. It is constructed on an entirely new principle in microscopy. Our present instruments magnify an object which is illuminated by sunlight or its equivalent. In the ultra-microscope, the object is illuminated by electrons passing over a magnetic field. As they do so they are deflected by a body, such as a germ and delineate it clearly.

What It Can Do

As to what can be seen with it, the most exciting thing is that it is able to see the organisms which cause such diseases as the common cold and infantile paralysis. These have been so small as not to be visible with an ordinary microscope at all, and even pass through fine porcelain filters. In fact, many bacteriologists working with them did not believe that they had any structural entity at all and called them viruses—the filterable viruses.

I do not mean to say that the germ of the common cold or of infantile paralysis has yet been seen with this ultra-microscope, but similar bodies have, including the virus of smallpox vaccine, and we may feel certain that others will be in the near future.

Germs that look like mere specks under an ordinary microscope are seen at gigantic magnifications so that there internal structures are visible.

The instrument will probably not replace our present microscopes for average routine work, but will remain for some time an instrument of research.

An Adventure in Shadowland

Shabby Shoes Look Unhappy Until Shined

By MAX TRELL

THE TWO pairs of shoes belonging to the children were standing under the chair. One pair belonged to little Dinah. That pair was nice and shiny. The other pair belonged to her brother, Frank. That pair was very shabby.

Now shoes, as you know, have tongues. That means that they can talk. Both pairs of shoes were talking early this morning as Knarf an Hanid, the shadows of the two children, were sitting in a corner of the children's room. The children themselves were still fast asleep.

"Ah! it's going to be another lovely day," one of the shiny shoes said cheerfully. "Just see how the sun is shining."

"Yes," agreed the other shiny shoe, "I'm looking forward to my walk this morning. It's very pleasant to go walking on a fine day. Our mistress always hurries along on her way to school. She's very careful to keep out of rain puddles, though."

Poor Shabby Shoes

At this the pair of shabby shoes belonging to the little boy sighed deeply. "We can't say the same for our master. He goes out of his way to splash through as many puddles as he can find. Just look at us! It's a wonder we have any shine at all."

"You haven't much," Knarf and Hanid broke in.

The shoes all looked at the two shadow-children in surprise. They didn't know that anyone was listening to them.

"Please don't say anything to our master," the pair of shabby shoes begged. "We don't want him to know that we're complaining. He might decide never to wear us again. Then we'd be put out on the rubbish heap. We'd never be able to go walking again."

"That's right," the shadows said. "We won't let him know. But he really oughtn't to treat you the way he does."

Never Polishes Them

"No. But perhaps he doesn't know how much happier we'd be if he took more care of us. And how much better he'd look, too. He never thinks of polishing us. Oh! if only he did once in a while. You can't imagine how fine and bright and new we'd look."

And the pair of shabby shoes looked so terribly unhappy that Knarf and Hanid wondered what they could do to get their master to polish them.

And a few moments later the two children woke up. Do you know what I think? I think the little boy must have dreamed about polishing his shoes. For that was what he did before he left for school that morning. And the pair of shabby shoes—but shabby no more—were so happy that they ran all the way to school, as fast as their master's legs could carry them.

How is Your Child Affected by Radio?

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

"RADIO IS not to blame for all excitable children or adults," an executive of a broadcasting company said recently before the Federal Communications commission in defending the juvenile programs aired over his network. While he is said to have admitted that certain programs justified criticisms at times, he allegedly insisted that others were not excitable or emotional.

I wonder what my readers think of the radio programs which lure children. Have you written to your favorite stations to tell them what you think, not only of the programs you condemn but also of those you heartily approve? It might be well to buy a pack of 50 or perhaps 100 post cards and have them near the radio. Then immediately after hearing a children's program you liked or disliked you could write a note about it then and there to the station.

Will Not Disagree

Perhaps not a single one of my readers would disagree with the executive that "Radio is not to be blamed for all excitable children and adults." He spoke safely. But many parents believe that certain programs can be blamed for some excitable children and adults, and that such programs contribute generously to jitters in the home. We wonder if this man has watched many children from six to 12 sit or stand like statuary by the radio with a "thriller" on, or if he has checked on the dreams and general emotional health of these children.

We wish studies of radio and children similar to those of movies and children might soon be made. In the meanwhile, one wonders why the Federal Communications commission has not called upon those experts who are supposed to know about the mental and emotional health of children, such as representatives of the American Psychological Association, the American Association of Applied Psychologists and other groups.

Deplores Gambling

A few months ago, in this column, I deplored the prevalence of gambling practices by parents and their children, especially the lure of the punch board and slot machine in almost every corner store in city, town and village; also the lotteries and raffles conducted by so many churches, civic organizations, even PTA's.

Coincidentally, since then, you probably have read the report of a very interesting national survey of the prevalence of chance- taking in the United States. It was found that on the average, every other person spent money on at least one game of chance last year; that church lotteries stood first, with the punch board second in popularity. Suppose church and religious leaders began a crusade? Are these enough non-gamblers left among church members to attract a following?

Roast Duck and Sauerkraut
Mashed Potatoes
Waldorf Salad Stewed Tomatoes
Fruit Salad
Plum Pudding Hard Sauce
Salted Nuts Coffee

FOR New Year's day or just a Sunday or guest meal, roast duck and sauerkraut combine to make a dish that is a bit different and guaranteed to please. Save these recipes if you don't use them right now. Cut them out and file.

Roast Duck and Sauerkraut — Clean duck and dress. Cut off neck. Sprinkle inside with salt, fill with rice and sausage stuffing. Do not pack too tight. Cover bottom of roasting pan with four or five pounds of sauerkraut. Rub duck with salt and pepper, place on its back on top of sauerkraut. Place strips of bacon across breast of duck and tie pieces of bason over ends of drumsticks to keep them from burning. Start roasting in hot oven until skin becomes delicately brown. Reduce temperature and roast until done. Serve on large platter surrounded with sauerkraut.

Rice and Sausage Stuffing —one cup rice, one-half pound sausage meat, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, one teaspoon poultry seasoning and two tablespoons chopped parsley are needed. Wash and cook rice in boiling salted water until almost tender. Rinse and drain. Cook sausage meat until slightly browned. Add seasonings and combine thoroughly with rice. Stuff duck.

Plum Pudding—You'll need one-half pound or one cup beef suet (chopped fine), one cup sugar, one-fourth cup molasses, three eggs, one teaspoon cinnamon, the same of ground cloves and allspice, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, one cup raisins, one cup currants, one cup mixed candied peel cut fine, one-half cup each figs and dates, one cup chopped nut meats, one cup sweet milk (cider may be substituted), flour to make a rather stiff batter. You may use one teaspoon baking soda in place of the baking powder if you prefer. Grease and flour a pudding cloth, pour batter in same, tie tightly together, drop into boiling water and boil for three hours. Or pour into steamer and steam for length of time.

Resolution Time Here

By ELEANOR ROSS

THIS should be stock-taking and resolution time for the homemaker. Too much do we go on running the household, making the best of things, when a good look from a distance, a good perspective view, would help to analyze and perhaps alter the whole situation.

It is a good thing to take a calm, unbiased look at every room in the house. Rooms tend to become cluttered up and the white elephant menagerie grows. Then often there are items that are just a little bit damaged, but remain to spoil the room, when perhaps a little job might put them in perfect condition again. So resolve to go through the house, eliminating all useless ornaments, cushions and bric-a-brac. Put such articles away pending a rummage sale. Then pick up every broken or even slightly-damaged article and have it repaired. And resolve never to allow any article not in perfect condition to remain in place until it has been repaired.

Resolve to get the house running on a routine schedule and adhere to it as much as possible. Try to run the home as efficiently as an office is run. And endeavor to make some corner your own, in reality, a sort of office. There you can sit quietly, make out orders, attend to bills and correspondence. Make the corner peculiarly your own with your favorite photographs and books. You'll find it a place of refuge, no matter how busy the household.

Resolve to entertain even if you feel tht you haven't adequate equipment. Worthwhile folk, the sort you enjoy being with are those who come to see you, not your home. The simplest refreshments, served in a pleasing manner and in a pleasant atmosphere, pleasant conversation, a game of cards or perhaps one of the modern versions of the old parlor games—these are the ingredients for a pleasant evening. After all, the average household isn't equipped to serve elaborate meals, and no one usually expects them. Good fellowship is what counts.

Homemaking is the grandest career for a woman there is, no matter how many new avenues of occupation there may be. Even the most successful career woman regards her home as her domain, and many brilliant and successful women of our acquaintance have moved from hotel apartments to do their own housekeeping in an apartment or a place in the country. There they forget medicine, law, fashions or writing, and revel in the joy of building and running a home.

SEEN ALONG FIFTH AVENUE

THERE'S a lot of gray around town these nights. A lovely gown is of misty-gray tulle over a deep rose taffeta foundation. The heart-shaped decolletage is edged with tiny rose-colored ostrich feathers. Silk duchess satin in gunmetal-gray is used for a portrait gown. The fitted bodice is draped the skirt wide. A cluster of roses and violets is posed a the centre front of a deep dust ruffle. The bodice is strapless. Gray chiffon, with yards and yards of fabric in the skirt and a soft-draped bodice, makes another dress. This one has a deep midriff section of silver thread and iridescent blue sequins.

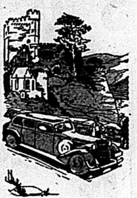
BELGIAN ARDENNES IS EUROPE'S MOST PICTURESQUE TOURIST SPOT

WELL, SOME folks certainly believe in planning well ahead of time! On my desk is a letter from a reader telling me that he is planning to take his family to Europe next year, and asking where they should go for a touring vacation after they have visited Great Britain and the continent. They want a district that is off the map so far as the average tourist is concerned, but they want creature comforts.

We have just the spot for them. It is the Belgian Ardennes, Europe's most picturesque and interesting tourist country, so far as this traveler is concerned. The scenery ranges from the pastoral to the grand and then to the mysterious. The roads are splendid, the food magnificent. We sigh as we recall the Ardennes' smoked ham, the trout caught from a stream for one's luncheon, the freshly-picked salads, and, beyond all, the charming little restaurants when one is tired of imposing hotel dining rooms.

Not All Pastoral

The Ardennes isn't entirely pastoral. There are some important towns as well. Nearly a thousand feet above sea level is Spa, a famous watering place and health resort that is set amidst lovely forests and hilly woods. It is one of the smartest health resorts in Europe and attracts a fashionable crowd. The bath houses and spring houses are magnificent and the whole thing is done in a luxurious manner. Social life revolves around the Casino, and it is a full cultural life, to Spa, with its fine airfield and golf course on the shores of the beautiful lake of Warfaaz, makes a swell headquarters for touring the Ardennes, for motor coach lines run in various directions and there is express train service to all European points.



Touring of Ardennes

Liege is another charming place. A short run out of Spa, it is worth a long visit. There is the ancient palace of the bishop-princes of Wallonia, there are architectural and art treasures, there are tree-shaded flower-filled boulevards and superb views in this spot. The view of the bishop's palace as seen through the cloisters is one of the loveliest we have ever seen. It is a picture of the past untouched, undisturbed. One can wander for hours through the Citadel and Cointe parks, and then stroll along the quays by the river Meuse. Just outside the town are the first battlefields of the World War.

Holiday Headquarters

Huy and Namur are other holiday headquarters. Between the two towns is the Marche-les-Dames, where the late King Albert of Belgium was killed a few years ago while mountain climbing. Namur is exquisite, the town rising in tiers at the junction of the rivers Meuse and Sambre. Above the junction is the citadel with its twelfth century dungeons. A wide road winds up to the old castle.

At the top of Citadel hill is a magnificent sports stadium; there is a sumptuous hotel alongside. The views from the hotel are superb, and it is really difficult to tear oneself away to make the lovely run between Namur and Dinant, a pretty, smiling little spot that climbs to the sides of sharp, bold rocks. The Grottoes of Dinant, the pre-historic caves and tower at Mont-Fort are all worth seeing, as is the Gothic church that is surmounted by a strange, bulbous steeple.

From Dinant there are lovely excursions by road or by river through magnificent scenery to old abbeys, churches, castles. Wherever one goes there is always a feeling of detachment of isolation from the worried world, with all its woes. For this reason alone a stay in the Ardennes region is worthwhile.

SHE CRIED FROM THE RUINS OF A SHATTERED LIFE...

"It's You I Want!"

WHITNEY PRENTICE had everything a girl could ask of life—beauty, wealth, social position, and an abiding, reciprocated love. But suddenly, one day, her fiance married another girl . . . and Whitney's world came tumbling down around her bewildered head.

She had loved Scott since she was fifteen . . . her universe had been built around his every whim; his hopes were her hopes, his ambitions were her ambitions. Yet he had thrown her love in the face of the winds when he rushed into impulsive marriage with a grasping blonde.

As week after week passed into the retreating months, the cadences of her tortured heart pounded out without cease its anguished message, "It's you I want." But when the way was finally made clear, Whitney—

Clothes Done Brown

By ALICE ALDEN

Get your clothes done brown if you want to look smart in mid-winter. Brown in various shades is becoming more popular all the while, and it is cited as an important hue for next spring, both for day and evening wear. There is a lot of brown tulle with gold touches around just now! Topaz jewelry shares in the favor accorded brown.

Ann Doran chooses brown and wood-green for her new outfit. The dress is of green crepe, but we are told that it comes in brown as well. It features cartridge pleats on the top front of the blouse. The hat is a combination of brown antelope and felt, and has a drop veil. The lovely necklace is of topaz-toned stones set in yellow gold, very delicate and lovely.

Caroline Chatfield Says today

Couples Who Would Start The New Year Right Have Only to Hark Back to The Days When Love Was New

Dear Miss Chatfield:

I am one of the husbands who lay their weekly envelope in the wife's lap, keeping out fifty cents or a dollar for tobacco. Believe me, it isn't a sensible thing to do. I suppose having the money makes her feel that she has the whip hand and she tries to lay the whip on my back. My work throws me in contact with a great many people of different classes and since I am naturally a friendly person I enjoy these contacts and make the most of them. Frequently I stop after office hours to pass the time of day with friends, dropping by to drink a bottle of beer with somebody (I am not a drinking man, never had too much in my life) and everytime I do it she accuses me of seeing some dame, which is ridiculous. She wants me to work and run home to her. I think a man should have a certain amount of pleasure and at least one night to himself. So far I haven't been bold enough to take the whole evening. Things are none too pleasant between us right now and seeing how you have helped others to straighten out their matrimonal tangles, I'm appealing to you to help us at the beginning of a New Year.

C. W.

Answer: Brother, according to my nation a man is entitled to any amount of innocent pleasure he wants; entitled to one evening a week, or two if he wants them. But if his wife is on her job he finds his pleasure with her and nine times out of ten doesn't want the "evening off." Now that's hard on the wife, I know. And when there's a family of babies and a slim purse it takes super-human effort on her part to fill the bill. Yet if she starts out right and follows through as she began, she can continue to be her husband's pal and playmate on to the end of the journey.

Why don't you begin the New Year by taking the old pal out for a big evening? Pick out a good restaurant, an amusing show and wind up for a bite to eat where there's music, laughter and gaiety. You'll be surprised how she'll come up under influence of the bright lights and the beau, dancing attendance.

When you have her in a good mood you can get down to the business of making a new design for your life together. First sketch a budget, see how much she needs for the house and herself, give her that amount with a little surplus pin money and quit the foolishness of laying your pay envelope in her lap. It takes a level-headed woman to handle all the money while her husband keeps out only enough change for a sack of tobacco and a bottle of beer. It's funny the way the feel of the long green in the fingers makes man or woman independent.

Second: you should know (if you don't believe it, try it) that a woman can be cajoled out of a suspicious, ugly attitude to her husband by being assured that he loves her. You are not doubt behind on your love-making, your affectionate pats, your pretty compliments. Make up this dificiency and she will respond in kind and never peep about your being a trifle late coming home in the evening. She's as scared of the imaginary dames she's conjured up as you are scared of her; and when her fears are eased, you will find yours are too.

Third: she should know (if she doesn't, you can tell her) that any woman can make her husband afraid of her, afraid to the point that he will lie about where he's been and go home and to her when he wants to be out. But if she's done that, she's also made him hate her. When he's in this frame of mind she's lost everything for there's scant satisfaction in sitting across the room from a scowling, sullen man who's mad with his wife and disgusted with himself.

It's just that simple to straighten out a matrimonal tangle when there's not a triangle or a mess of in-laws or a dirth of money or too much alcohol involved. Luck to you brother!

ORIGINAL M S S

Original manuscript copies of three sets of Stephen C. Foster's best known songs, which survived a fire last year in his shop, have been lost to the rubbish collectors, Robert E. Sherwood, New York's unorthodox bookseller, reveals. Mr. Sherwood, now 82, was a clown for twenty years with Barnum.

For thirty years he was a collector of theatre curios, old broadsides, playbills, costume plates and music scores, for which, he said, he several times was offered $75,000. A year ago he was burned out, and insurance companies paid him $46,500 and waived salvage rights.

"We found lots of things still good," Sherwood narrates. "Some of the manuscripts were so old they had no calendaring or coating on the paper, so they didn't stick together. We left them there for months to dry out, and a lot of them came out all right."

The three Foster manuscripts, "Old Black Joe," "Swanee River," and "My Old Kentucky Home," were to have been sent to Henry Ford's museum for $1,000 apiece.

"I laid them in a clothes press to dry out," he said, "but about two weeks ago the rubbish collector got them by mistake, and now they are floating out somewhere in the Atlantic. I'm through with collecting."

Bruin Powerhouse Swamps Toronto, Canadiens Continue Skid to National Loop Bottom

Boston Fires Eight Goals Past "Turk" Broda

HAWKS ADVANCE

Defeat Canadiens 4-1 to Hold Their Position Easily

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Teams of the National Hockey League, with Boston Bruins setting a searing pace, are stringing out as the end of the year and of the schedule's second month approaches. Class is telling and soon the main battle may be for the sixth and last playoff spot.

When the Bruins laced Toronto Maple Leafs 8-2 at Boston and Chicago Black Hawks took a 4-1 jump on the last-place Canadiens at Montreal last night, the leaders went 16 points ahead of the trailing club. Having gained only nine points in 19 games, Canadiens appear to have little chance of getting near the marauding Bruins before the finish. Boston has lost only three of 17 starts.

Heartened by a 3-0 upset victory over the second-place Rangers at New York Monday, the Leafs went into Boston ambitious to tear up the form-sheets entirely. They were just about as good as the home team for a period. Then young Porky Dumart began to go like the wind and Toronto was left in the ruck quickly while Bruins recorded their largest goal total of the year against Walter (Turk) Broda, whose netminding has been one of the season's sensations.

Level Only Once

It must have felt to the Leafs a little like that historic 9-1 trimming they took from Boston last winter at Toronto. Pep Kelly pulled them level less than a minute after Cooney Weiland opened the scoring for the Bruins in the first chapter, but Dumart laid down a pass for Busher Hillett in the closing seconds of the period to send the home team ahead to stay.

Two minutes had passed in the second when Roy Conacher converted an assist from Johnny Crawford. Then, with Red Horner serving a penalty, Dumart scored the first of two unassisted goals. He banged in another with the sides at full strength and a linemate, Bobby Bauer, raised the Bruin lead to 6-1 before the second ended.

Ray Getliffe kept the parade going in the third and it was halted only momentarily while Harvey Jackson closed Toronto's goal-getting on an angle shot. Conacher's second score completed the rout with five minutes to play.

Weak Display

Detroit's sixth-place Red Wings take on Chicago at Detroit Thursday and the results may determine the immediate fate of Canadiens, who would be left five points in the rear by a Wing victory. The Habitants, scrambling around with Armand Mondou and Marcel Tremblay up from their New Haven farm, gave a weak display against the Black Hawks.

Mondou, aided by Tremblay and Stew Evans, scored the lone Montreal goal after Earl Robinson and Russ Blinco had given Chicago a 2-0 advantage in the second. But the addition of the International-American League players proved to be just another attempt at finding a winning combination when the Hawk power began to tell. Paul Thompson and Bob Gracie added counters in the third as Canadiens suffered their sixth straight loss and Chicago moved into a third-place tie with New York Americans.

Toronto, Dec. 28 (CP)—The athlete of the year in Canadian sport was football's Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, who said farewell to the gridiron less than two weeks ago after 10 seasons as an outstanding halfback with Sarnia Imperials of the Ontario Rugby Football Union.

The triple-threat back, closest thing to a one-man team in the game, was named the greatest individual performer of 1938 in the seventh annual poll conducted by The Canadian Press. Thirty one sports eidtors across the country participated, casting three votes for their first choice, two for second and one for third.

On this basis Stirling received 36 points and won a nip-and-tuck battle for the honor by three points from Gordon Drillon, ace right winger of Toronto Maple Leafs and the National Hockey League's scoring champion. Bob Pearce, world champion professional sculler from Hamilton, Ont., received 24 points for third place.

First Gridiron Star

It was the first time the outstanding athlete had been drawn from the gridiron. Previous winners were Sandy Somerville golfer, in 1932; Dave Komonen, marathon runner, 1933; Harold Webster, marathon runner, 1934; Scotty Rankine, marathon runner, 1935; Phil Edwards, middle-distance runner, 1936, and Syl Apps hockey player, 1937.

The observers took note of practically every sport, from canoeing to Major-League baseball, which had three starry Canadian performers, and in the end placed Stirling at the top for leading Imperials to their eighth straight O.R.F.U. championship and heading the east's football scorers for the second successive season.

If Stirling holds to his recently-announced retirement he will have finished in a greater blaze of glory than he enjoyed in any single season during his decade on the senior football front. He was almost an unanimous choice as one of the backs on the CP's all-eastern football team.

The Bummer shined in every department. Strong and amazingly fast for his 215 pounds, he kicked, plunged and passed. When his great backfield mate, Orm Beach, died in a pre-season oil refinery explosion at Sarnia, Stirling took over much of his work and played a whale of a game on secondary defence

Still Very Fast

Stirling's 32 years hung lightly. He was still fast enough this season to follow up his own kickoff in one game and rouge the receiver. It wasn't his fault when Imperials bowed out to Toronto Argonauts in the eastern final. That was the only time he was stopped all year.

In his 10 years as a senior Stirling scored 26 touchdowns, kicked 16 field goals, 260 singles and 55 points after touchdown for a total of 493 points, far ahead of anyone in the game today.

From the first returns Drillon and Stirling had the contest to themselves. Drillon, native of Moncton, N.B., swept into the first rank of big-league hockeyists in his first full N.H.L. season. On right wing beside Apps he became the league's highest scorer during the 1937-38 campaign and continued to head Toronto sharpshooters in the Stanley Cup playdowns.

Pearce, who moved to Hamilton from his native Australia in 1930 and then cleaned up all amateur sculling titles, defended his pro championship easily during 1938 against Evans Paddon, Australian champion.

Football, with more than its usual share of thrills during the year, provided many of the nominees. Red Storey, whose great performance against Winnipeg Blue Bombers won Toronto Argonauts the National title got 10 points for fourth place. Apps was one of the few previous winners mentioned, receiving seven points.

CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

WHAT GOES UP, MUST COME DOWN

The boys will have their fun. These two aviation minded lads attend the University of California at Los Angeles and are members of the college gymnastic team, which has attained a fair measure of fame . . . as fame goes with gymnastic teams . . . in United States, for their prowess on the mat . . . and in the air. G. Tiernan is the party coming down, not the least bit ruffled, because N. Tabato, his partner, will catch him like an infield fly. He hopes!

OUT TEMPORARILY

ALEX MOTTER (above), smooth-skating centre ice star with Detroit Red Wings, turned in his best game of the season in a scoring way the last time his team played Canadiens, and won 4-1. Alex got two goals, but at the same time suffered a gash on one of his insteps and will be out of the line-up for ten days or two weeks.

PUCK TRICKLES PAST THOMPSON AS SEIBERT SCORES

There are more Detroit Red Wings in this picture than there are Chicago Black Hawks, but just the same the Hawks were getting a goal. The little black disc can be seen just sliding over the goal line past Tiny Thompson, Red Wing goalie, propelled there by Earl Seibert (left), Black Hawk defence star. The other Wings who couldn't do anything to prevent the score are Ebbie Goodfellow (5), Sid Howe (8), and Hec Kilrea 12). Seibert got two goals in this game, but it ended up a tie, 3-3.

"SEE—I JUST TAG HIM ON THE WHISKERS LIKE THIS"

Lou Nova, the rapidly rising heavyweight from California, demonstrates the blow that will slow up world's champion Joe Louis . . . if, as and when. That picture he's using as a foil of course, can't come to life, thus saving Mr. Nova some slight embarrassment. But more than one of the fight experts (or what you may choose to call them) are saying that Nova is the man to down the dusky dynamiter, if anyone can. Not now maybe, but in a year or two. Madcap Maxie Baer is being mooted as Lou's next foe.

Sports Roundup

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York Dec. 28 AP)—Perhaps that "sporting" in the 20th Century Sporting Club's monicker will sound phoney if the organization lures the venerable Jim Braddock back to the ring against young Lou Nova :... The match seems likely....Ancil Hoffman Max Baer's "brain" is speedily dickering the dancing Baer out of a Nova scrap....Braddock admits to 33, has been out of the ring for nearly a year and has only a stout heart to recommend him.

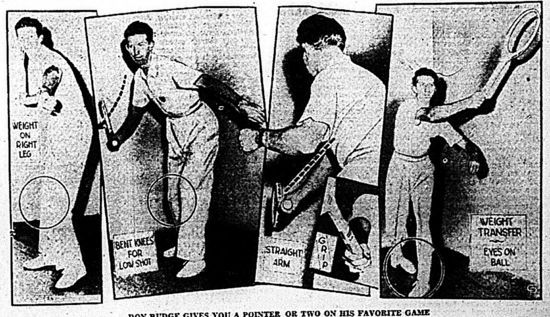
The California State Athletic Commission runs the New York Boxing Board a dead heat for comedy....The other day it ruled boxers who had lost the sight of one eye would be barred from fighting...."How about the referees?" hollered a heckler...."That's all right," shouted back a pal, "all referees are blind."....Never a dull moment.



DON BUDGE GIVES YOU A POINTER OR TWO ON HIS FAVORITE GAME

Actions speak louder than words, we've heard it said, so we won't say much about these pictures of J. Donald Budge, the world's outstanding amateur racquet-wielder for the past two years, who makes his debut as a pro in New York's Madison Square Garden on January 3. Don posed for these how-to-do-it-properly pictures the other day, and ambitious tennis players may get a tip or two from them for next summer. Or if your memory's bad, maybe you should clip them out and paste them on your tennis racquet. About all we can add is that time-worn adage that saves a player many an unexpected bump on the noggin . . . and does help his game . . . "keep your eye on the ball!"

GOLFER FINDS INDIANS' BODIES

Looks Down 250-Foot Cliff and Sees Men Lying in Dry River Bed

Hardin, Mont., Dec. 28 (AP)— A golfer who looked down a 250-foot cliff and saw the bodies of three Crow Indians lying in the dry river bed below was one of the witnesses called today to an inquest in the deaths.

The victims were Fred Old Horn, 50; Anna Door, 26, and Pete Charges Strong, 45. They had been drinking, the Sheriff said.

Cy Copeland, of Hardin, discovered the bodies Saturday while playing on the Fort Custer golf course at the top of the cliff. The perpendicular cliff above the Big Horn River was one of several in Montana once used by Indians as a "Buffalo Falls." The Indians would stampede bison over the "Buffalo Falls," then shoot the helpless and wounded animals with bows and arrows.

Blood stains on sage brush at the top of the cliff indicated there had been a fight Sheriff Henry Ulrich said but nothing was found to or was pushed over the cliff.

The Indians' automobile was show whether the tria fell, jumped found parked 100 yards away. Sheriff Ulrich said he was investigating a report another automobile was at the top of the cliff about the time hte three died Friday night.

SEVEN KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE EXPLODES IN MID-AIR

Here is part of the shattered wreckage of the giant twin-engined army transport-bomber which exploded in mid-air near Uniontown, Ala. All seven occupants of the plane, army men who were on a routine flight and looked forward to Yule celebrations with families and friends, were instantly killed. The cause of the explosion which shattered the plane has not yet been determined.

NEW BOMBER BUILT FOR GREAT BRITAIN IN U.S.

First of 200 fighting machines for service in the Royal Air Force of Great Britain, a sleek twin-motored reconnaissance bombing plane was unveiled at the Lockheed plant, at Burbank, Calif. In the foreground, Squadron Leader James Adams, of the British Air Ministry (LEFT) congratulates C. L. Jones, Lockheed engineer, on the craft. The plane is a low-wing, all-metal Lockheed 14. Rapid-firing guns and mammoth bomb doors cover the fuselage. Four men will man the craft, said to be among the fastest bombers in the world. The engines are American-made Wrights.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Dec. 28th.—(Special)— A wind of hurricane proportions that sprang up at midday on Tuesday brought grief to motorists and to residents of outlying districts of the town, when it sent blinding clouds of snow across paths of cars, already travelling at snail's paces, owing to the ice, and did minor damage to windows and roofs of homes lying in open places where the wind got a good chance to sweep along. Cars were at a minimum on streets and highways, yet in the open country highways were comparatively not bad. Country roads would almost certainly have been blocked by the following morning had the snow not abated, and as it was the ice and snow combined with the wind, made driving a hardship and walking almost an impossibility.

Of the storm of the previous night many tales were told locally, one man reporting that as he came back from Toronto to Trenton by a late bus on Monday he saw twenty cars in the ditch from Oshawa down. A Picton driver reports seeing a serious accident on the Picton-Belleville highway, and a Trenton-bound man said that snow drove so thickly at his car as he left Belleville late Monday evening, that he had to stop several times to forcibly clear his windshield, when wipers failed.

A Quiet Christas

Christmas passed quietly in Trenton with few persons in evidence either on Christmas day or the Monday following. Indeed most families celebrated the day on Monday and gatherings were common as old friends and neighbors collected at each others' firesides. Special Christmas messages were delivered at all local churches, and in the larger ones special Yuletide music was given by choirs.

Police report that the Christmas eve preceding the celebrated day was almost the quietest and least eventful in local history, and indeed only one charge was laid during the afternoon and evening of Saturday when one man was picked up for vagrancy. He reportedly was "panhandling" along local streets, and told one woman, when she refused him money: "Believe me, somebody is going to come across with some dough or somebody's going to get shot!" The woman became alarmed and reported the matter to police who removed the man to a cell.

Praise for the action of the Ontario Liquor Control Board was sounded by every officer of the force, as they commended the early closing of beverage rooms, which undoubtedly saved lives all over the province.

However, the early closing resulted in a specially busy time at the liquor store on Front Street, where five or six harassed employees rushed to fill orders pouring at them right and left. It was easy to see that a merry Christmas was in the offing for many who walked out with arms loaded with various purchases.

Fish Shanties Plentiful

Bay News—The two fish shanties that appeared on the Bay of Quinte at the river's mouth some days ago have now become many . . . eight or ten or twelve are there; and already the fishermen may be seen tramping out each afternoon to keep vigil..... Boys had fun on Sunday afternoon skating in clear places along the river and on the bay shore . . . near the Air Station one group of almost forty were seen, along with an iceboat, which someone had brought and moored, while an impromptu hockey game was played. This is the first skate of the year for most of them. Members of the local O. H. A. Juniors got in a couple of good practices over the week-end, the "arena" in this case being merely a cleared portion near the railroad bridge. It looks like the final freeze-up of the year this time, after three previous coats of ice on the Trent . . . and the skaters are regretting the coming of snow so soon.

Three Transients Fed

Only three transients graced the local police "festive board" on Christmas Day, and these three, according to accustomed custom, were taken by the officers to a local cafe and fed. Chief Bain explains that at Christmas most of the wanderers head for the larger cities, where they are fed more sumptuously, often, by courtesy of some group or society who attempt to provide turkey and goose dinners for any transients. Incidentally the present transient toll for the year numbers a bit over two thousand though the number of night lodgers will be heavy for some weeks now.

STOWAWAYS

..——When the Normandie pushed her nose, recently, into the French port of Havre, she had on board 14 stowaways — 11 Americans, two Estonians, one Mexican. Their capital, in American dollars, French francs, Estonian kroons and Spanish pesetas totalled $17.85. French line officials, disturbed by the incident, said the number of stowaways set an Atlantic crossing record.—New York Times.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were out in front of my house talking and arguing, and ma called me in for supper and I went back in the dining room and she said, Now will you tell me how 4 or 5 boys can make so much noise just apparently having a conversation? My goodness such a pandemonian. Cant you talk softly and express just as much for land sakes? she said

Well holey smokes ma, not when we're talking about something important, I said and pop said, thats a good point, mother. Benny is at the expansive age, rather than the age of repression. When we are Benny's age it is the influence of Latin, rather than our Saxon ancestry, wich predominates in the largeness of our gestures and the volume of our speaking tones. When the Saxon, or Englishman, grows up, his face, even in the heat of emotion remains masklike and his voice remains low and controlled and his gestures remain in his trousers pockets, while the Latin, or Frenchman for example, expostulates loudly and freely, though not necessarily unmusically, when he is aroused, and his gestures are so urgent that his arms alone cannot take care of them so he calls in his shoulders and eyebrows. And children of all lands, when vital questions crop up, are Latin in their reactions, pop said.

Well I'd just like to hear what this vital question was, ma said. Judging by the sounds it must of concerned the future of the human race, she said, and I said, Well I'll tell you, ma, we were talking about that it's a sign of it you chew chewing gum after the taste wears out and whether it's a sign that you're economical or just a sign that you're waisting your time.

Yee gods eat your supper pop said.

Wich I did.

When Muriel Came

By FLORENCE MELLISH

"Do you mean that you aren't coming here any more Marion?"

There was a blank, non-understanding look on Judith Searle's aging face as she looked up at her tall, handsome, well groomed, resolute daughter.

Marion Harkness met the look, and answered quietly, "If you wish it, mother, we will exchange the usual hospitalities at Thanksgiving and Christmas and if you are sick or in serious trouble, if you really need me at any time, do not hesitate to send for me. I will come to you at once, and Herbert will, also."

"And will that be all Marion?"

"I think that is enough mother. When I come here I always go away feeling unhappy, and I do not think you are the happier for my coming."

Judith looked down at her hemstitching. Her sight was blurred a little and her lips trembled as she answered. "I suppose I do get waspish in the spring of the year, but I'm your mother, Marion."

Marion fastened the last button of her glove.

"Certainly, mother. We will never forget that. In any time of real need we will not fail you."

Judith Searle looked steadily at her work. A tear fell upon the cambric.

"I don't think I shall need you. Good-by, Marion."

"Good-by, mother."

"You don't think you were too severe, Marion?" Herbert said with his little troubled frown. "Your mother is getting on in years."

"I don't think I was. At present we are both happier apart."

"Still, she is your mother, Marion."

"I don't see that that counts for so much—just the relationship — when two persons can't be together without constant friction. It is really no use talking, Herbert."

The spring passed and the summons from Mrs. Searle and they had not met. But Marion heard through Phoebe Cole, who did a little fitting for Mrs. Searle. She was as usual. Her aged canary had died, and she had a new Persian kitten.

It was early fall now, and Marion lay white and large-eyed among her pillows, one arm lovingly clasping a pink flannel bundle. Second Cousin Emily came in like a fresh breeze.

"Why, Cousin mily! I didn't know you were home yet."

"We got in last night and I just had to come over this morning. I stopped at Maple street on the way."

"Oh, did you? How is mother?"

"Much better. She was sitting up in an easy chair, and she expecig to get out by Wednesday."

"But I didn't know she was sick." Marion's voice was troubled.

"Perhaps they didn't want to worry you. They were afraid of pneumonia, but she has turned the corner safely. She has a fine nurse. Now don't you worry a bit, Marion."

Second Cousin Emily was turning down the coverlet and tenderly unwrapping the pink bundle.

"It's a beautiful child, Marion."

"Her name is Muriel," said Marion proudly.

"You waren't disappointed not to have a boy?"

"Of course not. The idea! What could be more perfect than a little daughter."

"She is going to look like you, Marion. I wish she'd wake up so that I could see her eyes. I never thought you favored your mother, but when you looked down at little Muriel, just as I've seen her look down at you, you were her breathing image. My! wasn't she full of plans for you!"

"And she carried out most of them," said Marion, gently. "How hard she worked! Poor mother!"

"But she would do it all again, Marion. My, won't she be crazy when she sees this baby? I think she can come by Friday."

She came Wednesday. The two women greeted each other affectionately but with a touch of constraint. But all constraint vanished with Grandmother Searle's first sight of Muriel asleep in her tassinet, with her fuzzy little head, her wrinkled, mottled features, her clenched and dimpled little fists.

"A perfect little beauty!" Judith Searle pronounced, after a moment of silent rapture. "She looks just as you did when you came to town—if only she has your eyes! Have you begun to make plans for her already, Marion?"

"Oh, so many! You can't imagine!"

"I dont need to. I know.

"Yes, you do know!" Marion's eyes were filled with tenderness and self-reproach. "How you planned and toiled and sacrificed yourself! How ungrateful I have been! And how cruel! If Muriel should ever speak to me as I did to you that morning, I couldnt bear it."

She hid her face in the folds of Judith's gray blouse. "Oh, mother, mother, forgive me. I didn't know."

SHANNONVILLE HIT BY STORM

Wind Assumes Gale-Like Proportions and Snow Fall is Heavy

Shannonville, Dec. 28 (Special)—A terrific windstorm that assumed gale-like proportions at times held the village and district in its throes on Tuesday. During the latter part of the forenoon, snow, of a light nature, fell for about two hours followed by the windstorm that assumed such a terrific velocity at times that it whipped up the snow flakes and the whole district literally became a solid white mass. Pedestrians experienced considerable difficulty when walking even when proceeding with the wind due to the fact that local streets were covered with ice, and when the wind blew hard it gave pedestrians a helping hand and as a result spills were very common. Local residents declare that they cannot recall when the wind was ever so fierce. To make matters worse the temperature began to drop rapidly at sunset.

Northern roads which bere badly cut up when the snow partially melted and formed a slush-life nature and which later froze are very rough today although they are open for travel. Motorists proceeding on these roads are cautioned to drive very carefully.

Hitch-Hikes Many Miles To Cut Timber

Orillia, Ont., Dec. 28— (CP) — Bearing a newspaper clipping which told of the plight of James Gooderich of Orillia who claimed he could not find a single man here who was willing to aid in cutting 3,000 cords of standing timber, a 30-year-old man who said he would take the job. The work seeker would not divulge his name.

Heavy snows and gales of the past few days, however, have blocked the road leading to the timber stand at Coulson, 10 miles west of here, and the way will not be cleared for some days. In the meantime Chief Constable Carson obtained several snow-shovelling jobs for the hitch hiker who said he could continue on to Sudbury and try his luck there.

He said he was the father of several small children He had never been on relief.

Germans Assert Lima Conference Is Failure

Berlin, ec. 28 (AP)—The German foreign office mouthpiece, Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, today asserted the United States failed at the Pan-American Conference in Lima.

"Considering the violent campaign by the United States to persuade Latin America of the existence of a menace from authoritarian states," Korespondenz said, "one can hardly regard the Lima resolution (for defence against foreign aggregation) as success for these efforts.

COMMUNITIES

enter the Niagara River. Thousands of tons of earth filler deposited on the park site were swept away as the river waters rose suddenly submerging a new retaining wall.

Temperatures Dipped.

Temperatures dipped during the night to two degrees above zero at Ottawa and four above at Kingston. Toronto's low point was 12 above, with similar temperatures reported from many Western Ontario centres. But the weatherman forecast a "little milder" weather for tomorrow after scattered snowflurries predicted for later today have blown themselves out.

Here are today's reports from various areas:

Owen Sound—Highways throughout district all remain blocked. Railways maintained service with the aid of snow plows. Reports continued to drift in about motorists abandoning their cars during the storm and seeking shelter at farm houses.

St. Catharines—Snowfall was only two inches but strong winds caused damage, blowing in windows and felling trees. Roads are icy but passable.

Galt — Highways are open but many country roads are blocked by snow drifts.

Chatham—Chatham and district enjoyed relief after gale blew itself out during night. Roads are open.

Kitchener—With exception of two main provincial highways, all roads in Waterloo County are blocked. Expected to take two days before all roads are cleared for traffic. Drifts reported as high as five feet in some sections. Several towns in the county were without doctors, many of whom were stranded in rural sections.

Kingston—Traffic conditions generally reported as good. Sun shining brightly today with heavy wind gone and temperature only a few degrees below the freezing point.

The storm, bearing blinding clouds of snow, gathered force over the great lakes early yesterday, then burst over the province in a mighty gust that tore down communication and power lines, blocked entire communities from the outside world and disrupted post-Christmas business. Holidaying motorists were delayed and even forced to stop overnight as the wind's fury made driving next to impossible.

The gale was hardest on persons returning home from Christmas visits. Many were forced to abandon their automobiles in snowdrifts for the night. There were scores of accidents reported, though few were serious.

Thirteen Injured

At Niagara Falls, Ont., three trucks, a motor car and a passenger bus were involved late yesterday in an accident that injured thirteen persons two critically. Blinding snow was held responsible.

Eleven passengers in a Gray Coach Lines bus were marooned for four hours near Fergus until a service truck reached them at midnight. Their main hardship while they waited for aid was hunger, for the motor was kept running and the heating system kept them warm. A snowplow which tried to go to their aid skidded into a ditch and efforts to carry food to them failed.

Industries Closed

Harry M. Broadbent, 58, and Stephen Mantel, 68 dropped dead on London streets and in each case physicians said exertion from fighting high winds resulted in heart failure. Miss Ida Roppel is believed to have suffered a broken back in a head-on automobile collision at Mitchell which was among the communities hardest hit.

Industries at Owen Sound and Goderich were forced to close when Hydro-Electric Power lines were blown down. At Goderich, where vessels wintering in the harbor were lashed by high waves, residents had to do without electric light all day yesterday and last night.

Building Carried Away

The brunt of the storm was believed to have been borne by communities in a line with Goderich and the Niagara district. The Niagara river raged all day and carried away one small frame dwelling, starting to subside only about midnight.

The village of Exeter, midway between London and Goderich, was cut off from all communication except by telephone. Roads were snowbound and telegraph wires snapped in the gale. The busy St. Mary's Stratford section of No. 7 highway was blocked by drifts some seven feet deep. There wasn't a chance of getting through sideroads and, because motorists could see only about ten feet through the snow, there were numerous accidents in the district.

Trains Delayed

Railway trains ran far behind schedule and bus trips in the area north of London were cancelled. Intermittent breaks in the Hydro-Electric power service at Kincardine were blamed for a $25,000 fire in a business block. The wind handicapped firemen in fighting the blaze.

Hockey games had to be called off all over Western Ontario and the Penetanguishene team was snowbound on its way to Owen Sound for a game. A provincial government snowplow was unable to get through to the players.

Reports of storm damage and communication breaks came from all parts of the province. More snow, colder weather and strong northwest gales were predicted for Sault Ste. Marie. Business was cut almost to a minimum as snow swirled about Toronto streets. Waves mounted in Toronto harbor and the roof was blown from a factory building.

A shortage of bread and milk was reported by storekeepers in the Orangeville district. Fergus district farmers said many motorists had abandoned their cars and stopped at farmhouses overnight.

1938 IS REGARDED

ished at Munich, and its strength was reaffirmed when Chancellor Hitler came to Italy after anschluss and was greeted as a conquering hero.

Chamberlain's Visit.

How it will flourish in the current Italo-French difficulties remains to be seen, although observers feel that the full weight of its influence will be brought to bear on Prime Minister Chamberlain when he comes here some ten days hence to strengthen the ties reestablished by the Anglo-Italian accord.

In the midst of these dramatic events abroad Italian domestic policy has continued along the lines laid down by Il Duce. The only domestic surprise of the year was anti-Jewish legislation.

Linked with these measures was the growing friction between the Vatican and the Italian government, since Pope Pius XI took a firm stand against them. He regards the Italian ban on certain mixed marriages as contrary to church doctrine and a violation of the lateran accord by which Il Duce made his peace with Roman Catholicism.

'Pure' Italian Race Proclaimed.

The anti-Semitic measures followed a formal statement by a body of Fascist medical men and scientists who proclaimed a "pure" Italian race. They have taken the usual course. Jews were ousted from universities, schools, the professions and dispossessed. A special census revealed 70,000 "non-Aryans" in Italy.

Franco-Italian relations, never more strained, and the Spanish civil war are Italy's outstanding foreign preoccupations at the year's end. These questions promise to dominate foreign affairs not only as regards Italy but also Europe during the coming months.

Treated For Shock.

Several other miners working near the 2,700-foot level were treated for shock following the air explosion and were sent to their homes. The blast shook the entire community, rattling dishes on tables and knocking open doors.

Temperature was 20 below zero and a west wind was blowing at gale force when day workers descended into the mine this morning to take over rescue work from the night shift.

The largest gold producer in Canada the Lake Shore Mine covers more than 287 acres of Teck Township in which Kirkland Lake is situated.

Two Vertical Shafts

The mine has been developed by two vertical shafts, No. 1 and No. 3 shafts, with levels at each 200 feet to the 2,200-foot level and at each 125 feet from that point to the 4,450-foot level. No. 2 is a short incline shaft.

No. 1 is a three-compartment shaft reaching to a depth of 4,500 feet in two stages, the first from the surface to 2,200 feet and the second offset at the 2,200 level where a hoist is located.

The No. 2 incline shaft extends to the 200-foot level from a point of land on the north side of the mine and is used to handle timber and other supplies.

No. 3, the main shaft, handling all supplies and men at change of shift, extends to 4,000 feet in a single stage. It is the principal ore-hoisting shaft.

A main crosscut joins the two vertical shafts on all levels. Opening into the crosscuts are the ore passes and sand passes.

At noon mine officials said the rescue workers were about 40 feet from the point where the miners are believed trapped.

ORGAN FIRM HEAD DIES AT ST. HYACINTHE

St. Hyacinthe, Que., December 28—Aristide Casavant, president of the internationally known firm of organ manufacturers, Casavant Freres, died at his home here Monday after a lengthy illness.

Son of the co-founder, and last male representative of his family in the firm whose products are to be found on four continents of the globe, Mr. Casavant was 49 years of age. He was unmarried.

Aristide Casavant was born in St. Hyacinthe and was privately educated here. His connection with the company that his father, the late Samuel Casavant, together with his brother Clavert, founded in 1880, dates back some 30 years. He became president of the firm in 1933, upon the death of his uncle.

In several churches in Belleville there are Casavant organs made by this famous firm.

FAMOUS ANATOMIST DIES

Cleveland, Dec. 28.— (AP)—Dr T. Wingate Todd, 53, internationally known anatomist died today.

Dr. Todd was director of the Brush Foundation and was one of several foundation scientists who announced this month they had found women could determine periods of fertility by keeping daily temperature charts. The group conducted an eight-year study, with 200 couples co-operating at the foundation endowed by Charles F Brush, inventor of the Arc light.

MINISTER INJURED DURING FUNERAL

Rev. Dr Graham Struck by Car While Cortege is Being Formed

London, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Arrested after a car struck and seriously injured a minister as he stood beside a hearse while a funeral procession was forming up north of Glencoe, Anthony Mitacek, 34, of R. R. No. 1 Walkers was held in the county jail today on a drunk driving charge.

Victim of the crash, Rev. Dr. Angus Graham, 27, Minister of Glencoe United Church, is resting at his home. Officials said his condition was "none too good."

Mitacek appeared before County Magistrate C. W. Hawkshaw and was remanded a week.

Dr. Graham was standing in front of Burn's Church, Kilmartin, seven miles north of Glencoe, as a casket containing the body of Daniel Munro was being placed in the hearse following a service in the church.

Minister Rendered Unconscious

The car which struck him knocked him about 10 feet and his head hit against the bumper on the mourner's car directly behind the hearse. He was carried unconscious into the parsonage and after medical treatment, was taken to his home in Glencoe.

Provincial Constable W. A. Markle of Glencoe said that the car which struck Dr. Graham hit two other parked cars, went across a ditch, and into a field, coming to rest nearly a mile south of the crash.

CAR SKIDS INTO COLLACUTT BUS

Mrs. Alice W. Jones of Gananoque Taken to Hospital

Mrs. Alice W. Jones, middle-aged Gananoque resident was rushed to Belleville General Hospital shortly after one o'clock today suffering from shock and injuries thought to include broken ribs following an accident near the "Devil's Elbow" on Dundas Street West when the car in which she was riding skidded on the icy highway and collided with an eastbound Toronto-Gananoque bus driven by George Childs.

Joseph McMaster, Toronto, driver of the car, his wife and son and daughter, sixteen and nine years of age respectively, other passengers were shaken up but otherwise uninjured.

In a statement to investigating Police Constable Harold Taylor, McMaster said that a few seconds previous to rounding the turn at the "Devil's Elbow" he noticed a horse-drawn milk or bread wagon parked on the travelled part of the highway on the north side. He did not attempt to turn out, he stated, as he saw the heavy bus approaching.

He applied his brakes as he drew near the parked wagon. This he said caused his car to skid on the icy highway directly in the path of the bus, which had pulled out on the south side of the "Elbow". The bus was slightly damaged, a bumper being put out of position and a fog lamp broken. The rear part of the body of the McMaster car was damaged with a window being broken.

Mrs. Jones was taken to the hospital in McMaster's car and Dr. R. A. Flynn attended her. An X-ray examination will be necessary to ascertain the full extent of her injuries, Dr. Flynn stated this afternoon.

No charges will be laid police stated due to the fact that the affair was of a purely accidental nature.

Scientific Career Ended by Drowning

Ottawa, Dec. 28—(CP)—Untimely death of R. J. O. Bray, 28-year old ornithologist drowned in Foxe Channel near Igloolik, closed a career which had already added much scientific knowledge of bird life in the Arctic. He was well known in Ottawa where he returned at intervals to lay information he had gathered before scientists of the National Museum of Canada.

"Mr. Bray was particularly interested in the study of geese", said P. A. Taverner, museum ornithologist. "He studied the distribution of the various types of geese, and the relationships between the blue and snow geese and also the habits of the Canada Geese".

Cobra Venom Mental Tonic

Richmond, Va., Dec. 28 (AP)—Cobra venom is a mental tonic.

This discovery, made while using small injections of the venom as a substitute for morphine, was reported to the American Association for the Advancement of Science today by David Macht and Moses Macht, of Baltimore.

The venom is injected into the muscles, once a day or less. Its effects are slower than morphine, but last longer and are not habit forming.

The mental results were reported to Mr. Macht by physicians who have tried the pain-killing venom on seven diseases.

County Qualifications

With reports from the various far-flung municipalities of Hastings County slowly filtering in, prospects for spirited elections in many parts of the county look exceedingly bright. A number of reeves have received acclamations, but in many municipalities where nominations have been a purely annual procedure, some of the heads of the village and rural municipality councils are finding themselves with election battles on their hands.

Electors of the county go to the polls on Monday, January 2nd., and while a number of county council veterans are practically assured of another term, upsets may provide new faces for the county body next year.

Madoc Township

In Madoc Township, Reeve James Nickle, who has carried the municipal flag for the past four years, and who has received acclamations over that period of time, is faced with what is said to be a stiff battle. Opposing him in the fight for the reeveship is Benjamin Miller. Six councillors have announced their intention of contesting the four seats that surround the council table. These include, Messrs. Fred Sager, Fred Moorcroft, John Gawley, John McCoy, Albert Caskey, John Chambers.

Frankford Village

Frankford village municipal heads all received acclamations. Reeve George N. Spencer was given his second consecutive term while Messrs. Joseph A. Carr, G. W. Dickson, J. S. Stickle, and George G. Montgomery will form the council for the coming year. School Trustees George W. Arnott, W. F. Ketcheson, Harvey Patrick and Russell Embury also received acclamation.

Stirling

Residents of Stirling are agog with excitement in preparation for one of the keenest election fights in years. Opposing Reeve Thomas Cranston, in the fight for the reeveship is the veteran county councillor and ex-warden of the county W. C. West. Reeve Cranston who has headed the village fathers for the past two years is rallying his forces for a stern fight. Ex-Reeve West has served five years as reeve of the village before being elected warden of the county three years ago.

Seeking election to the village council are C. B. Rollins, Frank Stapley, E. G. Bailey, Gilbert Thompson and Fred Elgie. The first two are ex-councillors of last year's body. Roy Eggleton was given the hydro-commissionership by acclamation while Dr. E. A. Carleton and Messrs. Ewart Bailey and R. B. Duffin also received the positions of school trustees without benefit of an election.

Ottawa Engineers Require More Information on River

Take Interest in Cross Section Above Corbyville

ASSISTANCE ASKED

Dominion Government engineers at Ottawa need more information than the voluminous correspondence, maps and complete charts that have already been presented by city engineer C. A. Mott and the city on the Moira River in order to advise the best method of future flood control.

In a letter received this morning from D. W. McLachlan, Engineer, Design and Capital Construction branch of the Dominion Department of Public Works, it is pointed out by him that considerable time has been spent since the last visit of the local delegation to Ottawa, in analysing the ice situation in Belleville, "I find the matter more complicated than I thought it would be," he reports, adding that further data is required.

This concerns the dates on which water overflowed the streets in Belleville, and receded therefrom during March, 1936; January 1887, and March of the years 1918, 1914, 1913, 1910 and 1894. Records of flooding, if any, during the years 1927, 1928, and 1917.

"I would like someone to go along the river from Thrasher's Corners to Corbyville and ask the farmers who live close by the river whether or not the ice melts in place, or goes out in a mass with the rise of stage in nature.

Interest in Cross-Section

"I am forced to take an interest in the cross sectional area of the river above Corbyville because studies indicate floods such as that which occurred in January, 1886 are due to an early winter breakup, followed by a long spell of cold weather during which the river runs open for some weeks. So far as I can see, about 22,000,000 cubic feet of ice must have been deposited at the entrance to the harbor in January 1886, and this must have been brought about by the river running open for ten days for nine miles above Belleville. If we are going to stop floods in Belleville we will have to see to it that such a thing could not occur again, and therefore we must know something about the cross sectional area of the river between Corbyville and Foxboro, and between Foxboro and Thrasher's Corners," writes Mr. McLachlan.

Any information that can be given by residents along the river north of the city, which may assist the office of the city engineer in the compilation of more facts for the department will be gladly received, and will be taken personally upon receipt of a phone call or a card giving the resident's address, it was stated by city engineer Mott.

Few Men Know Wives' Finances Says Court

London, Ont., Dec. 28 (CP)—Without commenting upon whether or not it was a proper state of affairs, County Magistrate Hawkshaw conceded, from the bench today that few men know much about their wives' finances.

Russell McNamara of Talbot street, London, just fined $25 and costs on a speeding charge stood before the bench asking the court to accept his wife's cheque for the fine.

"Has your wife any money in the bank," asked the court.

"Yes."

"How much?'

McNamara didn't know.

"I guess you wouldn't know," said the court. "Men don't get to know much about their wives' business."

(Formerly of Madoc)

Madoc, Dec. 28. (Special)— At Fort Worth, Texas, on Tuesday, Dec. 27th., John Thompson, a former resident of Madoc, died instantly as the result of a heart attack. The announcement of his sudden passing was a great shock to his many friends and acquaintances in this village and district.

The late John Thompson was born sixty years ago in Madoc Township, his parents being Mrs. Thompson and the late Archie Thompson. When a young man he taught school for a time and in the year 1906 he went to Winnipeg where he entered the real estate business. About six weeks ago he was in Madoc to attend the funeral of his brother, the late Charles Thompson, and at that time he was apparently in excellent health.

Surviving him are his widow; one adopted daughter, Betty Joy; his mother, Mrs. Archie Thompson, Madoc; two brothers, Mr. Stanley Thompson of Fort Worth, Texas; and Mr. Percy Thompson of Edmonton, Alberta; two sisters, Mrs. Simeon (Ida) Ashley, Madoc, and Mrs. (Rev.) Harry M. Broadbent, 58; Stephen Mantel, 68, and Miss Julia Carroll, 64, died on London streets of heart seizures brought on by the exertion of fighting high winds. At St. Marys, George Yardley, church caretaker, died of a heart attack also attributed to exertion in the gale.

WEDDING IS DENIED

Miami, Fla. Dec. 28—(AP) — report that Barbara Guggenheim Wettach had married her former chauffeur, Henri Obre, was denied today by Fred Wettach, her former husband.

The marriage was reported yesterday by the Miami Daily News which obtained its information from friends of Mrs. Wettach who said they learned of it indirectly. No marriage licence was issued here.

ROBS BANK BY THREATENING TO BLOW IT UP

A woman who said her name was Mrs. Mary McCollum, 36, and then charged her name to Bess Carney, and who says she is a fiction writer unable to sell her stories lately, rivaled any plot she might conceive when she walked into the Drexel State Bank, in Chicago's south side, and threatened to blow the place up with TNT unless she received $5,000. She got the cash, but was trapped before she could leave with it. The two bottles which she carried and which she threatened to use in blowing the bank up proved to contain water, instead of TNT. The woman is shown here, also the bottles which served as her weapons.

THE TERROR OF AN AIR RAID!

So perfectly did this Tokyo family enact the roles of air raid bombardment victims that we find it difficult to believe the picture was made during an air raid drill. All residents of Tokyo, the Japanese capital, took part in the week-long drills which included every conceivable type of manoeuvre for protection in a possible raid. Bombing planes whizzed overhead dropping smoke bombs as smoke flares added to the reality. Gas masks and oiled silk gas-proof shelters received a stern test.

SOMETHING THE GENERAL DID NOTSEE

When General Viscount Gort, Chief of the British Imperial General Staff, inspected the gentlemen cadets of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich recently, here's something he didn't see. While the great man was at the other end of the line of gentlemen soldiers, the cadet at the end, overcome by stage fright, staged an old-fashioned swoon. The other well-trained gentleman never batted an eye, leaving it to the end man to haul away the swooner before General Gort would have to step over him.

Allegedly implicated in the distribution of "secret leaflets" protesting against the "royal dictatorship" in Roumania, Premier Julius Maniu, above, leader of the National Peasant party, is reported under arrest. Premier Maniu is noted as an inveterate foe of Mme. Magda Lupescu, titian-haired friend of King Carol, who is credited with wielding powerful influence on the king's policies.

HITLER'S PAWN

Considerable speculation is rife in White Russian circles in Paris as to the reason for the Christmas visit of Grand Duke Vladimir, above, pretender to the throne of all the Russias, to Berlin. The grand duke announced that his visit has no political significance . . . and that he is merely visiting his sister, Grand Duchess Kyra, who married Prince Louis Ferdinand of Germany early this year. But astute observers believe it within the bounds of possibility that Vladimir may be offered the throne of a new Ukrainian nation. Such an independent (?) nation, hacked partly from Poland and partly from Russia, is said to be a part—an important part—of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's plans for "drang nach oster" (drive to the east).

NEW WPA CHIEF?

olonel F. C. Harrington, above. assistant WPA administrator and chief engineer, is expected to succeed Harry L. Hopkins if Hopkins is chosen as secretary of commerce by President Roosevelt, according to word in Washington. Colonel Harrington, an army engineer, is a close friend of Hopkins.

APPLIED PRECEDENT

Because of Nazi restrictions which would not permit the transfer of legacies to American heirs of German estates, Judge Raymond MacNeille, of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, refused to allow part of a $91,258 trust fund to go to claimants in Germany. As a result of his action, Washington officials have been notified by the German government that the ban against American heirs removing legacies from Germany has been lifted.

GUARDIANS OF MOST NORTHERN OUTPOST PLANNED CHRISTMAS CELEBRATION

Constable L. B. Fyfe, RIGHT, and Lance-Corporal R. W. Hamilton, LOWER LEFT, R.C.M.P. officers stationed at Canada's most northerly outpost, Craig Harbor, Ellesmere Island, plan a large and appetizing Christmas dinner for themselves and their four Eskimo companions. Ptarmigan will replace turkey on the menu and all Christmas greetings have to arrive by radio because there will be no mail at Craig Harbor until next summer, when the supply boat arrives. The two police officers and four Eskimos, shown ABOVE, are the sole occupants of the lonely outpost, but a plentiful supply of cigars, cigarettes and candy, left at the post last summer, will provide Christmas treats for the policemen and their Eskimo companions.

WEARY REFUGEE

She originally came from a family in Vienna, but she is now just "Refugee No. 247." A tragic picture made at Harwich, England, as 400 refugee children, the first batch of 2,000 refugee Jewish children to leave Vienna, arrived at Harwich, England.

SIGNED POLISH PACT

Anastas I. Mikoyan, ABOVE, Soviet foreign trade commissar, negotiated and signed the trade treaty between Russia and Poland, which has forged a new link of diplomatic friendship. Observers say the treaty is a formidable barrier to Hitler's drive to the East, into the Ukraine.

HAD FRANCO PLANS

Harold Goodman, British vic consul, shown at San Sebastian, Spain, was as much surprised as were Franco officials when plans for the Franco Spanish offensive were found in his diplomatic pouch during a trip from San Sebastian to St. Jean de Luz. Franco postponed the drive as he battled revolt within his own ranks, according to reports. Loyalist spies had obtained plans of drive.

SCIENTIST SAYS WOMEN'S AND MEN'S DREAMS ARE DIFFERENT

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29 (AP)—Dreams of men and women are different. There is more beauty and more of the fantastic in women's dreams and more of the practical side in men's dreams, Dr. Charles Disrens of the University of Cincinnati reported today to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Women, he said, dream of hearing music more often, see colors more often and have more nightmares. Men have less anxious dreams, more that are embarrassing and more that they are thirsty. Both sexes tend to dream in the latter part of the night.

A shallow low is moving eastward across Northern Ontario and deep disturbances are centred north of Hudson Bay and on the Labrador coast, with high pressure covering the greater part of the northwest portion of the continent.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Wind and weather! Everyone wants to know of signs in the sky that will tell of coming weather. Unfortunately there are none, that is, no infallible ones. The wind, its direction or change in direction and its speed, is a fairly good sign. When the wind changes from northwest or west with increased speed to more southerly points, then a cold front is probably on the way. When the cold front passes, the wind will veer from south or southwest to northwest or north. This veering will occur quite suddenly and with a drop in temperature which is often sharp. The accuracy of forecasts made from these wind signs is increased if attended by a fall of the barometer.

Attorney-General Favors Less Restraint on Sunday

LORD'S DAY ACT WEIGHS HEAVILY ON POOR—CONANT

Well-to-do Have Many Things for Sunday Recreation is Claim

OUTLINES PLANS

Assures Deputation Laws Will be Enforced Impartially

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP)—Spectator games and public amusements on Sundays in Ontario were discussed yesterday when Attorney-General Gordon Conant received a Lord's Day Alliance deputation.

"It is far better that our people should have an opportunity for some recreation and amusement than that they should be compelled to pass the whole day under the restraint that now exists," said Mr. Conant.

The Attorney-General said the province had the right under the Lord's Day Act to permit games and performances on Sundays. If they were permitted, perhaps after two or three o'clock in the afternoon, the good accomplished would outweigh the harm done, he thought.

It was Mr. Conant's opinion the present law bore more heavily on the poor than on the well-to-do. The rich man had his golf club, his trout stream, his yacht and other things for Sunday recreation. The poor man had none of these. He stayed at home or perhaps broke the law by doing something the law says he can't do on Sundays.

COLD WAVE NOW SWEEPING U. S.

No Indication of Warmer Weather for Balance of Week

Chicago, Dec. 29—(AP)— Another severe cold wave, more frigid than the first this week, rolled into the Northwest United States from Canada today.

The bitter chill was felt today in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Idaho, Montana, The Dakotas, Kansas, and Western Wisconsin. Weather observers said the Arctic blasts would reach the Eastern States by tonight or tomorrow.

Forecaster J. R. Lloyd at Chicago said the new wave was really a "second section" of the first and that there was no indication of warmer weather for the balance of the week. The new wave, he said, would be more intense because the first has already cooled the atmosphere.

Shippers were told to prepare for temperatures of zero to 25 below in the Northwest, zero to 15 below in the West and North, and zero to 10 above in the East and South.

Snow was predicted for most of the New England States, New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, New Jersey, Virginia, Tennessee, West Virginia, Kentucky and the District of Columbia.

At least 28 persons were victims of exposure or accidents attributed to weather conditions.

Heavy snowfall was general over Idaho—two feet at Bonner's Ferry. Some mountain roads in Oregon were closed.

An airplane pilot dropped food Wednesday to three crewmen on a boat locked since Monday in the ice of Copper River near Cordova, Alask. A coast guard rescue boat was held back by a wind-storm.

TOWNS AND VILLAGES ISOLATED AS BLIZZARD SWEEPS ONTARIO

Paralyzing entire parts of the province, Ontario was swept by the worst blizzard to hit the eastern province in many years. Scores were injured as the result of automobile accidents attributed to the blinding snow. Many towns, villages and hamlets were completely isolated and grave fears were felt for some sections as food shortage loomed. With automobiles snowed in, ABOVE, all available horses and sleighs were pressed into action as the only means of transportation.

WILL NOT REACH TWO TRAPPED MEN BEFORE TONIGHT

Second Small Explosion Hampers Work of Rescue

BELIEVED DEAD

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Dec 29 (CP)—Weary rescue workers emerging from the depths of the Lake Shore Gold Mine said today there was "little chance" two men entombed behind huge piles of fallen rock 2,400 feet underground would be brought out alive.

Four crews of drillers worked frantically in what was admitted to be an almost hopeless battle to rescue John Holubec, 33, and Vito Vlaisevgevich, 40, imprisoned since midnight Tuesday night when an air blast caused the collapse of three mine stopes. No sound has been heard from the trapped men.

A number of miners working near Holubec and Vlaisevgevich suffered shock as the blast, felt all over the Northern Ontario mining town, left huge piles of rock blocking the men's escape. A second, small explosion hampered rescue work last night and progress was slow.

Like Pile of Coal.

"It's just like a big pile of coal piled up in a large cave nearly 300 feet high," was the way one driller described the scene half-a-mile underground as he came off shift early today. "We take a shovel full off the bottom of the pile and two more fall down."

The driller said the rescue crews had been able to get through only a few feet of the rock since 11 o'clock halted momentarily by the second air blast. Little damage was caused by the second explosion though it was heard on the surface where medical crews have maintained an

Heavily Guarded U. S. Mint Raided By Two 15-Year-Old Boys for Fun

San Francisco, Dec. 29 (AP)—The new armor-plated and heavily guarded United States mint was raided last night by two 15-year-old boys who got in by scaling a wall and raising an unlocked window.

Police Inspector Max Reznik identified the boys as Paul Francis and William Gallagher, residents of an orphanage at San Rafael. They were held for juvenile authorities.

"We wanted to see if we could do it," officers quoted the boys.

Bedlam broke out in the huge fortress of granite and steel—supposedly impregnable—when a guard saw two prowlers in the copper store room and turned in an alarm.

Lights went on, bells sounded and angry-voiced men with machine-guns appeared.

Inspector Reznik said the boys had tossed out of a window a big sheet of copper from the room where pennies were made.

George Maher, captain of the mint guard, asked the two orphans how they managed to enter the building, protected by great walls, by impenetrable steel, tear gas equipment, heavy bars, numerous burglar alarms and a large force of guards.

"We went around to the Octavia street side of the building, climbed up a pipe to the second storey and crept around a ledge until we found a window partly open," police quoted them. "We just pushed the window in further and dropped down inside. That was all there was to it. It was easy. We didn't mean any harm. It was all in fun."

Derrick Man Killed By Falling Timber

Calgary, Dec. 29 (CP)—Harold (Hal) Hunt, about 26, derrick man on the Twin Dome test well at Gladys Ridge, 22 miles southwest of Calgary, was killed last night when struck on the head by a piece of falling derrick timber at the well.

In an undetermined manner, the timber came loose and fell 100 feet before striking Hunt. His head was crushed.

An ambulance made a rush trip from Calgary to the scene, but the man was dead upon its arrival.

FIREMEN WENT TO WRONG PLACE

Confusion in Names of Street Causes $5,000 Fire Loss

Toronto, Dec. 29—(CP)—A fire which caused an estimated $5,000 damage to a York Township home, gained headway last night when firemen were sent to a wrong address.

Confusion in the names Strathearn Rd., in York Township and Strathearn Blvd., in Forest Hill, caused the confusion, according to Chief Ernest Woods of York Township.

The fire occurred at the home of W. A. Newcombe, Strathearn Rd., and was seen by a neighbor who telephoned an alarm. The Newcombe family was out.

The alarm was sent in to the Forest Hill and Toronto Fire Departments giving the name of Strathearn Blvd. Both departments rushed equipment to the address but could find no fire.

After an interval, the York Township fire department was notified and rushed to the correct address.

The floor of the living room collapsed and furniture tumbled into the basement. Walls in upstairs rooms were ruined by the fire which ate into the attic. Heavy damage was confined to the living room and basement.

Amend Charge to Reckless Driving

Madoc, Dec. 29 (Special)— In police court at Madoc this morning a charge of criminal negligence arising out of an accident which occurred on November 22nd last was amended to one of reckless driving against Wellington Munroe, Madoc. Found guilty on the lesser charge Munroe was sentenced to a fine of $50 and costs, and the suspension of his driving permit for the period of one year.

The accident resulted in a compound fracture of the left leg of Mrs. Arthur Parks, also of Madoc when she was struck by a car and knocked to the ground. She was confined to the Belleville General Hospital for some time after.

GLACIAL AREA IS HALF MELTED SAYS GEOLOGIST

If Remaining Ice Melts, Ocean Levels Will be Raised

FAR-AWAY EVENT

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—A futuristic picture of a deserted New York, its streets under water and even its skyscrapers partly inundated, was drawn for the Geological Society of America at its semi-centennial meeting today.

Such a thing might happen, said Dr. Arthur P. Coleman of the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, but it's nothing to worry about now.

Dr. Coleman explained that glaciers everywhere were in retreat, suggesting the world was slowly emerging from the Pleistocene ice age which began about 1,000,000 years ago. Only about half the area covered by ice, he added, has so far been set free.

Ocean Level May Rise.

If and when the remaining 6,000,000 square miles of ice are melted, he said, the level of the ocean will be raised about 150 feet.

"With a little imagination," he mused, "one can picture Oslo or Rio Janeiro, seaports with high ground in the rear to which to retreat, as sending palatial holiday cruisers to see New York's deserted skyscrapers rising as steep walled rocks from a shallow sea."

"But the possibility of this taking place is so far in the future," he added, "that real estate owners need not begin to worry in our generation."

On Another Ice Age.

Dr. Coleman painted another picture:

"It is not impossible that once more ice may gather in Labrador and slowly spread over Northeastern America, finally halting at Long Island to pile up moraines or stone heaps. Then New York harbor may once more be covered with ice floes, where seals and walrus are at home and white bears prowl for their prey as they did along the Atlantic coast 25,000 or 30,000 years ago."

But this, he hastened to explain, is still farther in the future than the "big flood".

WARTIME GOVERNOR DIES

London, Dec. 29—(CP Cable)—Sir Edward Merewether, 80, wartime governor of the Leeward Islands, died yesterday.

While en route to take up his West Indian post in 1915 he was taken prisoner by a German sea raider but later was sent to the United States and released. Before the war Sir Edward served as Governor of Sierre Leone and in the Straits Settlements civil service.

CITIZENS HELP POLICE TO HOLD ALLEGED GUNMEN

Hectic Chase in Toronto Follows Holdup of Cigar Shop

ONE MAN ESCAPES

Two Guns Allegedly Used by Bandits Found by Police

Toronto, Dec. 29 (CP) — John Brown, alias John Russell, and Walter (Honey) Huen, captured by citizens last night following the armed holdup of a cigar store will be placed in a police lineup today as suspected members of a gang that has been terrorizing the illicit liquor traffic in downtown Toronto the past few months.

Huen and Brown appeared before Magistrate Brown in men's police court today and were remanded to January 5. Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden announced there would be no bail. Three joint charges of armed robbery were read against the pair.

Disregarding the advice of his counsel, Brown declared that he wanted to lodge a complaint against the police.

"When I was arrested last night they beat me over the head with blackjacks," he said. Nobody appeared to pay any attention to his remarks.

They are charged with robbing John Ittas of about $50, with robbing Nathan Davis of about $3 and with robbing Bert Rosen of about $100. They entered no plea to any of the charges.

Both are charged with robbery armed in connection with the cigar store holdup and Brown is also charged with threatening to shoot a police officer. A third man escaped after the robbery of the cigar shop in which more than $150 was taken by three armed bandits who forced five occupants of the store to lie on the floor.

Earlier in the night, three gunmen entered a private home, allegedly a bootlegging establishment, and departed with $28 and some clothing after searching the house for a larger amount of money they claimed to be there.

Threatened to "Burn" One.

Two men and a girl were in the house when the gunmen entered. They threatened to "burn" one of the men if he did not reveal the hiding place of the money, but after taking him for a ride around the block in their automobile, they released him.

GERMANY WARNS SOUTH AMERICANS THEY MAY LOSE TRADE

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP) — Rudolf Brinkmann, Secretary of State in the German Economics Ministry, today warned South American countries to stick close to Germany economically or they might find themselves without a lucrative market.

He gave the implied threat of switching German business to southeastern Europe should Latin American states "succumb to the machinations" directed against Germany.

Italy Apparently Balked In Winning Territory, Duce Turns to New Plan

Chamberlain, While Visiting in Rome, Unlikely to Discuss Difficulty

FRANCE TO ACT ALONE

Duce May be Warned Not to Count on British Neutrality

Paris, Dec. 29 (AP)—Italy was reported in diplomatic circles today to have indicated she will seek to internationalize Tunisia to remove the territory from strict French control.

Apparently balked in any idea of winning territory for Italy by the rising tide of French defensive measures Premier Mussolini was reported in usually well-informed circles to have formulated a new plan for presentation to Prime Minister Chamberlain when the latter visits Rome next month.

Sources close to the foreign office said simultaneously that Mr. Chamberlain had promised to keep the French-Italian fight over Djibouti off the agenda when he visits Rome. He also was said to have promised to back up a French stand against transferring any territory to Italy. Nevertheless, it was foreseen he would have a difficult time avoiding discussion on the status of Tunisia, bound up with any discussion of Mediterranean problems

Abuse of Mandate To Be Claim.

The French think Premier Mussolini's approach to Mr. Chamberlain will be based on the thesis that Tunisia is legally an independent country under French protection and that the Bey of Tunis is the independent sovereign.

The Italian argument might be that France has received an international mandate to protect Tunisia and that she has abused that international duty. Italy could ask that she and Germany, as well as Great Britain and perhaps other countries, be given equal control over the Tunisian government with France. Tunisia would thus become a sort of Tangier (internationalized zone in Morocco under British, French, Italian and Spanish administration.)

What This Condition Means.

Under such a condition, Italy could ask the right to send an additional 100,000 immigrants into Tunisia. Indications are France would refuse to accept such an argument, holding that her historic position in Tunisia gives her the inalienable right to remain the dominant power in the territory.

The French, meanwhile, made an open show of firmness and readiness. Two warships are on their way to Djibouti, French Somaliland, and fresh Senegalese troops are assembled at Marseille ready to sail.

The opposition press accused Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of hiding the facts of the quarrel. It said a foreign office communique issued Tuesday concerning Italian occupation of land on the French side of the Somaliland frontier was inaccurate. This communique said Italian military posts had been established in a "contested zone" to which the French government "has decided to send a geographic committee" to determine the exact boundary.

Life for Wry-Faced Stan Laurel One Sleepless Night After Another

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP)—Life with wry-faced Stan Laurel was just one sleepless night after another, with his two former wives disturbing her slumbers at "ungodly hours", blond Illiana Laurel charged today.

The Russian dancer, who married the motion picture comedian three times during 1938, demanded $1,500 monthly in a separate maintenance suit.

Climaxing a hectic marital life which began last New Year's day with an elopement to Yuma, Ariz., continued with frequent tiffs and as many reconciliations, including solemnization of the two extra marriages, Illiana's suit asked ejection of the comic from his Canoga Park home, title to all community property and $25,000 attorneys' fees.

She claimed that "by reason of his attitude toward his former wives" they annoyed her by having police and firemen visit the house and by causing persons to write her anonymous letters.

Ignored and Repulsed.

Laurel, she said, refrained from "demonstrations" of love, and added that he "ignored and repulsed" her attempts to show affection. She said he often became intoxicated, on such occasions using "vile and loathsome" language. The separation, she set forth, occurred Nov. 18.

Almost as tangled as his marital affairs are Laurel's finances. At present he's out of a job, having been deemed by Producer Hal Roach to have broken his contract. Harry Langdon has replaced him as the comedy mate of rotund Oliver Hardy.

A Recapitulation.

Here, as far as the records show, is a recapitulation of his married life and the settlements of the three wives and another who claimed to be a common-law wife:

Mae Laurel, the comedian's vaudeville partner for six years, who said she became his common-law wife in New York in 1919 and sued for $1,000 monthly separate maintenance, but dropped the action for a cash settlement.

Lois Laurel, whom Laurel married in 1926 and who divorced him in 1933, last April was denied $1,355 a month for support of a daughter, Lois, 10, when she admitted in court she possessed $274,000 in cash and property, most from a property agreement at the time of the divorce.

Virginia Ruth Laurel, whom he married in Mexico in 1934, was granted five per cent of his income when she won an interlocutory decree Dec. 24, 1936.

Ten Million Dollar Welcome to 1939 In New York City

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—The Manhattan merry-go-round whirled faster today toward its annual madcap climax on New Year's Eve, with advance reservations heralding a $10,000,000 dusk-to-dawn celebration as '38 clicks over into '39.

The larger hotels were swamped.

Night club proprietors in the "fabulous fifties" mournfully turned away late-comers eager to plank down anywhere from $15 to $30 a couple.

Prices were about the same as last year, with a noticeable restriction of the give-away gadgets such as noisemakers, favors and free bottles of champagne to lure patronage—indicating that dollars are easier, both come and go.

Broadway theatres shared heavily in the seasonal prosperity. Yesterday was the biggest matinee day in the Times Square belt since 1929. Ten shows played to standees and others received near-capacity patronage.

Laws of Chance More Accurate Than Human Guess

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29.—(AP)—The human mind is not nearly so accurate as the simple laws of chance at making correct guesses. The reason is that men, women, boys and girls all misuse the laws of chance, without realizing it, when they try to predict.

These findings were explained to the American Association for the advancement of science here today. If a coin is flipped mechanically the probability of heads or tails is 50-50.

But, said Dr. Louis D. Goodfellow of Northwestern University, when humans guess the flip of a coin the chances are from 76 to 79 per cent they will call heads. On the second call they will still call heads oftener than the laws of chance allow, in an excess of seven per cent. Then on third call humans will average too low, 44 per cent in favor of heads.

The reasons, Dr. Goodfellow said are probably sub-conscious. They may be due merely to the construction of the phrase "heads-tails" used to describe this little game. Heads is always spoken first Therefore, without knowing it, people call heads too often.

Rides Blind Baggage, Hands, Arms, Face Badly Frozen

Ottawa, Dec. 29 (CP)—His hands, arms and face badly frozen, John Moran, 32, of Ottawa was in hospital today in a serious condition. He was found early today at Arnprior, 41 miles west of here, riding between two sleeping cars of a Canadian Pacific passenger train.

Moran told train officials he had been on the train since it left Montreal and he was headed west in search of work. When found, he was huddled against the rear of one car with his feet braced against the front of the next and was hanging on with both arms which were so badly stiffened he could not release them from around the rods without help.

He had been travelling without mitts or gloves.

ROSE BUSHES BLOOM IN VICTORIA, B. C.

Victoria, Dec. 29—(CP)—While most of Canada shivered in the grip of a below-zero cold spell yesterday, many Victorians tended the flowers in their gardens and didn't even bother with overcoats.

Scores of rose bushes were in bloom and dinner tables were decorated with freshly-picked flowers.

BROCKVILLE MAN HEADS ELIGIBLE LIST

John William McKay, overseas active service, Brockville, heads the eligible list of the Civil Service Commission for the post of inspector of electricity and gas at Belleville for the Department of Trade and Commerce.

ORCHARDS UNHARMED BY RECENT WEATHER

Apple orchards and fruit trees of the section are believed to have come through the storm this week unharmed by officials of the local fruit inspection offices. In spite of a spotty coating of ice which covers many of the trees, little, if any damage, is believed caused, due to the fact that extremely low temperatures were not experienced such as resulted in thousands of dollars loss in this district a few years ago.

FOUR CROWS SEEN

Residents of the city's south ward this morning were surprised by the appearance of four crows which were seen in the vicinity of the garbage dump where they made their presence known by loud and raucous cawing. The birds, after a survey of the location, later flew north over the city.

DISCARDED CHRISTMAS TREES FORM BULKY LOAD FOR COLLECTORS

Garbage collectors of the city have started their first work of picking up the discarded Christmas trees, annually a bulky load. The majority of the trees are finding their way to the city dump from which ultimately they will become firewood, or markers for the commercial ice men of the city, used to mark off respective cutting plots on the bay.

OPENING OF THE HUME ARENA SET FOR TODAY

Skaters of the city and district will come into their own this afternoon at the Hume Arena when the official opening of Hastings County's favorite skating surface is scheduled to take place.

Postponed one day because of weather conditions being conducive to the formation of a better base for the skating surface, the opening will lack none of the color and glamor usually connected with the inauguration of the skating season.

Saturday morning will be free for the kiddies, when in all probability the youth of the city will flock in all its winter exuberance to take part in their favorite pastime.

PERMIT ISSUED FOR STORE ALTERATIONS

A permit has been issued by the office of the building inspector to the local S. S. Kresge Company for alterations of the business block at 260-262-264 Front Street necessitated through expansion of the store.

Local firms understood to be bidding on the work include the Patterson Construction Company; H. S. Parry; E. F. Rutherford and Hubert Strong, Trenton.

WINS SPECIAL GIFT

Neatly boxed in Christmas wrappings, the special gift of a Hudson Bay Point blanket was received today by ex-Mayor Geo. A. Reid, from the head office of the Great West Life Assurance Company. An enclosed car read: "Congratulations upon winning the December contest for representatives of the Company in new business secured during the month of December."

POST OFFICE QUIET AFTER CHRISTMAS RUSH

In contrast to the hectic, busy scene of but a few days ago when citizens of all ages struggled with stubborn stamps and balky parcels on the specially provided tables of the lobby, the halls and portals of the post office this morning presented a scene of unusual quiet and calm.

"The New Year's rush hasn't started yet, but the first of the mail will be along in a day or so, for second slight rush. Then things will taper off to normal again," it was stated by employees.

Only a few belated parcels and cards have been cleared through the office lately.

WARDENSHIP MAY BE CONTESTED BY FOUR REEVES

While nothing of a definite nature has been announced reports from an authoritative source reveal the fact, that one of the most spirited battles for the wardenship of the County of Hastings will be fought before the new warden officially takes his seat in the forthcoming January session of that body.

Information linked with rumor, has it that at least four reeves of county municipalities will throw down the gauntlet into the wardenship ring, by the time election caucuses roll around.

Last-minute opposition to potential candidates for the wardenship, that suddenly appeared in municipal nominations held this week, may have an indirect bearing on the number of candidates, who have a secret yen for the highest position the county can offer. A defeat at the polls next Monday would not only ruin chances for continuation of municipal services, but would likewise spoil ambitions for the wardenship.

The inaugural 1939 session of the County Council will open on January 17th in Shire Hall, when Warden Henry Larkin, reeve of Tyendinaga, will officially hand over the reins of wardenship to his successor. While practically all veteran councillors have been returned to office in their municipalities, a number of new faces will grace the county board when that body is called to order.

Many old friends in Belleville of Charles A. Schuster, will regret to learn of his death which occurred suddenly in Pittsburg Pa., on Tuesday, Dec. 27th.

The late Charles A. Schuster was the son of the late Rev. Anson Schuster and Mrs. Schuster, who for many years were engaged in religious and charitable work in Belleville. The City Mission on Dundas Street was founded by them with the assistance of coworkers and generous citizens. Belleville Meets Queen's in Playoffs Playoffs for the championship of the Senior Van Horne hockey series will start in Kingston on Monday, according to announcement made in the Limestone City today.

The four teams to figure in the playoffs were decided last week. On Monday, Jan. 2nd., Belleville Redmen, who won a convincing victory over their ancient enemies, the R.C.A.F. Flyers in Kingston last night by a 2-1 score, will meet the strong Queen's University sextette in a sudden death game, while Kingston City and Garrison will meet in a single game to decide the other semi-finalist on Wednesday, Jan. 4th.

Winners of the two semi-finals sudden death affairs will meet in a two-out of three game series for the championship.

In the junior series, Perth and Kingston Granites will open the finals for the championship next Monday.

Police Blotter

It may be the fact, that the boys are resting after a more or less hectic Christmas holiday or are merely conserving their festive spirit for the approaching New Year but the fact remains that police station circles are quieter than a morgue at midnight.

Not a single inebriate woke the echoes last night with maudlin song or undue noises. Not a complaint burned the wires to Chief of Police Alex Kidd's desk, and the boys on the beat reported, that the city presented a peaceful scene.

It may be the lull before the New Year's storm, but the officers of the law are having a well-earned respite from making arrests.

respite from arrests if only a temporary one.

Sentenced to Jail On Drunk Driving Charge at Kingston

Kingston, Ont., Dec. 29 (CP)—Charles Harpell, convicted of being intoxicated while driving a car on Dec. 8, was sentenced today by Magistrate Ambrose Shea to fourteen days in jail. A second charge against Harpell, that of being intoxicated while driving a car Dec. 24, resulted in the accused pleading guilty.

He was remanded until Jan. 5 for sentence on the second charge.

Magistrate Shea issued an order impounding Harpell's car for three months.

Harpell, while on remand on the drunk driving charge of Dec. 8, was arrested on Dec. 24, after his car went over a curb, into a field and struck a boy sitting on a sleigh. The lad is in the Kingston General Hospital.

Freighter Bombed Crew Takes to Boats

London, Dec. 29 (AP) — Lloyd's agent at Gibraltar reported today that an SOS had been received from the 4,239-ton British freighter Marionga, which read:

"Bombed. Crew took to boats."

The vessel's message gave its position as 39.12 north Latitude, 1.7 east Longitude, between Castellon, on Spain's eastern coast, and the Balearic Islands. (Palma, on Mallorca, largest of the Balearics, is a Spanish Insurgent base.)

The Marionga apparently was bombed on the high seas where such an attack is deemed "piracy" by the British government.

The owners said the ship was carrying a general cargo to Barcelona and had a non-intervention observer aboard.

Ancient 'Pestilences' Abroad in World

Madras, India, Dec. 29 (AP) — John R. Mott, President of the International Missionary Conference here, appealed today at its concluding session for Christians to work for justice in the world where "ancient pestilences which destroyed mankind are aboard with unparalleled virulence."

"We call upon fellow Christians throughout the world to join us in a new dedication," said Dr. Mott, President of the World's Alliance of the Young Men's Christian Association. "We must labor for the establishment of justice among all people..

"In every country the fact of war or the fear of it casts its paralyzing shadow over human hope. Race hatred—the ugly parent of persecution—has been set up as a national idol in many a market place and increasingly becomes a household god."

OSHAWA CITIZEN ASKS FIREMEN TO FLOOD RINK

IT'S YOU I WANT!

Thrilling romantic serial by Allene Corliss

By half closing his eyes and thinking hard, Tod could bring her into the room with him.

CHAPTER I

The last dance of the season was in full swing at the Marblehead Neck Country Club. Upstairs an orchestra from Boston played "Night and Day." It was a new tune that fall and the dancers couldn't get enough of it. They begged for more. They clapped and stamped their feet and cheered. They got more. They got a fourth encore. The boys in the band sliding into it softly, dragging it, wailing it, letting it moan and waver, letting it die a moment into a muted whisper. Couples who had danced together all summer and couples who had danced together for years and couples who would never dance together again clung and circled and bumped into each other and didn't mind because it was the last dance and the music was perfect and there was a swell crowd.

Down in the men's lounge, Todhunter Prentice Jarvis decided to go home. He wasn't having a good time. He hadn't expected to have a good time but, nevertheless, he was a little hurt to think he had been right about it. Tonight was simply the final flat period to the dull, uninspired sentence that had been the summer. A summer that had been totally without accent. That had been just a long three months. Absurd, of course, to let Whitney's being in Europe have washed up everything so completely. But it had. He had known that it would. Yet she wasn't his girl. Never had been. She was Scot's.

Where the devil was Scott? He hadn't seen him for hours. Not since he and Olivia Paul had been doing a tango together with everyone watching and applauding from the sidelines. That had been the first part of the evening. That had been about eleven o'clock. Nice kid, Olivia. She'd looked breathtaking in that white satin dress. And she certainly could dance. But someone ought to tell her that Scott belonged to Whitney. She obviously didn't know it and it wasn't quite fair. A guy like Scott ought to go around labeled ...... "hands off....I'm spoken for" .... or something. He was too darn good-looking. Too attractive. A completely swell guy. Tod had adored him for years. Not just because they happened to be second cousins and had been brought up pretty closely and gone to the same schools and all that....but because there was no one quite like Scott. He was a little more everything than anyone else. A little better looking, a little better company, a little better informed about what went on and where. A lot quicker on his feet. There was no one quite like Scott. Unless, of course, it was Whitney. No one could touch Whitney. Not even Scott.

Tod tipped back his close-cropped brown head and half closed his eyes and there she was. He could always do that. Anywhere, any time, he could bring her right into the room with him. He'd done it for years....when he'd been a gangling kid at Groton and lonely as nobody's business because even then he hadn't had that trick of making friends easily the way Scott had. That happy faculty of throwing himself into any environment and dominating it. Absolutely. No matter where Scott went he took his own good time along with him. He set the pace and the others followed. It was a matter, really, of living intensely in the moment at hand, squeezing it dry of every pleasant possibility. Being, as it were, sufficient unto himself. Always, Scott didn't need Whitney around to make things come out even.

But Tod did. He had during his short life spent countless hours in her company which she never knew about. Like tonight, for instance. Tonight she was really on her way home from Europe on board an ocean liner. Yet, by half closing his eyes and thinking hard, he could bring her into this room with him. He liked to think of her best in sports clothes....a pink linen tennis dress, white canvas shoes, a black ribbon tied around her crisp dark hair. He thought of her that way tonight. And was suddenly filled with a terrific loneliness. It was as if the whole summer pushed itself into one slow, painful heartbeat and became mixed up somehow with the music upstairs and the wind howling around the clubhouse windows.

Funny how Scott could go on. He hadn't seemed to mind too much. Whit's being away. He'd had a fairly good summer. He'd been asked everywhere. That was natural, of course. An unattached man. It wasn't as if he and Whit were formally engaged. They weren't. Someday they'd get married, of course. Everyone took that for granted. The family, for instance. Uncle Adam, with whom he'd lived up to two years ago. Aunt Claire who was Scott's mother and sort of a washout. Aunt Hester who had brought Whit up because her father and mother had both caught the flu and died within a week of each other in nineteen-eighteen right after the war. That was the family. That was all there was. There wasn't any more. Just Uncle Adam, who was his father's uncle really, and Aunt Claire and Aunt Hester. Aunt Hester was Uncle Adam's sister. She was pretty old. Sixty-five or seventy. It had been rather swell of her to take Whit on like that. Because everyone knew that Whit really wasn't closely related to any of them. A Prentice of course. But not the direct line. Like Scott and himself.

Scott's father and his had been cousins. And Scott's father had died in the war and his had gone down on the Titanic. But he'd had a tougher break than Scott because he'd lost his mother at the same time. Still Uncle Adam had been a prince. Tod had hated to let him down, leaving college a year ago to take this newspaper job. But he'd never been sorry ... even if Scott had thought he was a fool at the time. Of course, it was different with Scott. He was all set. Always had been. He'd finished at Harvard Law School and now he was with Ferguson and Randall, Attorneys at Law, with swell offices on State Street. And that was just as it should be. The Prentice men had always either been State Street lawyers or gentlemen-farmers like Uncle Adam. He was the one who was out of step....with his newspaper job. Still, a fellow had to decide for himself. Uncle Adam had seen that and been decent about it. He'd even been decent about taking rooms of his own on Charles Street. In return Tod had spent as much time as he could out at the farm this summer. Even though he missed Whit more there than he did in town.

Funny, how Scott hadn't seemed to miss her at all. When she was home he never looked at another girl. But when she wasn't he got along all right. Not that Tod blamed him for going around with other girls. He didn't. Only he couldn't see what percentage there was in it for Scott. He honestly couldn't. Olivia Paul, for instance. Scott had been giving her a lot of time recently. She was pretty enough. Beautiful, really, with her narrow, classic face and that fair hair swirled around her head. But not in Whitney's class. A nice kid, without doubt, and lots of money. They said she had one of the biggest fortunes in the Middle West ....Tod thought it was Cleveland, or maybe it was Toledo. Anyway, she was visiting Kay Reynolds. And she had smooth clothes and knew how to wear them. Tod had to hand her that. And she certainly had fallen hard for Scott ....someone ought to tell her.

CHAPTER II

Someone ought to tell Olivia that in less than a week Whitney would be home, and that after that she wouldn't have a chance. Scott wouldn't know she even existed. Because it was like that with Scott. He really loved Whitney. You had only to see them together to know that. There was something about them together that caught you. They were so right, somehow. Tall and straight and sure of themselves. And acting as if they were having such a good time. So much better time than anyone else. They even looked a little alike, a faint family resemblance. Yet that, was silly, because they were only distantly related. Fourth or fifth cousins or something like that. But anyhow, they looked nice together. As if they belonged. Tod had always felt outside, someway. Even when they were kids. It wasn't anything they were to blame for. They'd both always been swell to him. It was simply that neither of them really needed him and he had always needed both of them. Funny, how he'd got to thinking about it like this tonight....probably because it was the last dance of the season and Whit was coming home and....where the devil was Scott, anyway?

Tod shoved to his feet and started for the stairs. He'd dance with Olivia once and then go home. It was one o'clock and he had to work tomorrow.

But when he looked around upstairs for Olivia he couldn't find her. Neither did Scott seem to be anywhere in sight.

For a long time now they had been driving steadily west. They must be nearly to the Connecticut line. The motor made a smooth humming sound that was drowned out most of the time by the wind. Olivia sat very straight, her eyes frightened beneath the brim of her hat. She was breathing lightly. It was an awful chance. Rushing into things like this. Leaving a dance. Getting into other clothes. Packing a bag. But she loved him so terribly. And in three days Whitney Prentice would be home. She'd never seen her, of course. But she'd heard about her. All summer she'd heard about Whitney Prentice. How good-looking she was. How well she did things. How crazy Scott was about her. And she hated her. Because she loved Scott so much. And all was fair in love and war. Anyway, they weren't engaged. It would have been different if they had been. But they weren't. She had even asked Scott about it. Once, weeks ago when she had first met him. Before there had been anything serious between them. Since she had know that she was in love with him, she hadn't mentioned Whitney's name. But that once she had. She had said: "What about Whitney Prentice, Scott? Everyone acts as though you and she were .... well, you know, engaged or something."

Scott had been evasive. He hadn't said straight out that they weren't. But neither had he said that they were. He had dismissed it someway without being too definite. But she couldn't help seeing, of course, that Whitney was important to him. That was pretty obvious. She had thought: "There is some sort of an understanding between them but she's in Europe and I'm here and he isn't spoiling anything...."

Well, that had been all right with her. She hadn't known then how fast things would move. She hadn't known then that in less than three weeks she would be so desperately in love with Scott Prentice that she would have to have him....not for just a few weeks during the summer, but forever. Neither had she known that she could convince Scott that he felt the same way about her. When she did discover these things, Whitney didn't matter. But she didn't mention her name again. Somehow she was afraid to. And it was because she was still afraid that she was driving furiously through this autumn night with Scott toward Connecticut. Afraid of what? Afraid of what might happen if she waited until a boat docked four days later in Boston Harbor?

Kay Reynolds had said a week ago: "Better make the most of the next few days, darling. The morning Whit Prentice's boat docks your sun will go down."

She had been furious at Kay but she had managed not to say anything.

She had wanted to say: "You're wrong. You're all wrong. Scott has forgotten she exists. He loves me. I'll prove it to you all....you wait and see."

But she had been wise and said nothing. And now she was going to prove it to them. Her eyes clung to that unwinding ribbon of white concrete....and they were frightened and triumphant and wistful. It was all so different from what she had always imagined it would be like. She had always wanted a wedding. An enormous wedding. A church wedding with twelve bridesmaids and a maid of honor and engraved invitations and a wedding march and an elaborate reception afterward at a hotel. She'd wanted to go to Paris on her wedding trip. And to go to New York first for her trousseau. She'd planned a marvelous trousseau. She had a friend, Marjorie Pierce, in Cleveland, who had spent a month buying just her lingerie and shoes....

Instead, she was going away with one small overnight case. She would be married in a dress she had worn all summer and hat she had never liked much. Still it was worth it. It was worth the trousseau she would never have, the wedding march she would never walk down the aisle to, the wedding trip to Paris she would never take, to be marrying Scott Prentice before a girl with the same last name got back from Europe.

She shivered suddenly and Scott leaned toward her.

"Cold, sweet?"

In the darkness, against the swift rush of wind, his voice was consoling. When he spoke to her, when he touched her, she was reassured. It was when they were apart or he was too long silent that fear clutched at her.

She shook her head. She was. But with nerves.

"Happy?"

"Of course."

CHAPTER III

Olivia turned and looked at Scott. He was lighting a cigarette. In the brief flame of the lighter she saw his face quite clearly. She caught her breath swiftly. He was good-looking. The best looking young blond man she had ever seen. He had the gayest smile. The bluest eyes. The most ardent, dramatic mouth. It would be fun being married to him. Being Mrs. Scott Prentice. If only she weren't so terribly in love with him....that was what was so frightening. It gave him such an advantage. And if anything should happen....

Her life at home, since her father had married again, was not pleasant. Her stepmother was young and horribly jealous. It made things difficult. And anyway, she didn't like the Middle West. Since she had come East to school, she had always wanted to live in Boston. Near Kay and the other girls. And now she was going to. She had money of her own. From her mother's estate. Plenty of money. More than Scott even suspected. They could live extravagantly. In one of those new apartment hotels. If only nothing happened to spoil it all. But nothing must. Nothing.

She said: "Faster, darling...."

And Scott Prentice slid an arm about her shoulders, drew her close to him and drove faster.

It is October and an ocean liner is being piloted slowly into Boston Harbor. A girl is standing at the ship's rail. Her name is Whitney Prentice. It is the fall of nineteen-thirty-two. And she was born the fall Woodrow Wilson was elected President. So she is twenty. She has been graduated from one of the best schools in the country, so she is wearing a soft English tweed suit and a thin wool pullover and low-heeled brown shoes and a casual green sports hat. The wind is blowing, so she is clutching the brim of her hat with one hand and the ship's rail with the other. She is excited at being home again, so her eyes are happy and she is smiling faintly. At her shoulder a dark young man watches her profile and not Boston Harbor.

He is disinterested in Boston Harbor. In all harbors for that matter. He has travelled far and wide. Too far and too wide. He has sailed in and out of harbors for years and found them all very much alike. But he has never seen a profile—except, perhaps, one —that he liked any better than this one upon which he is now looking. And yet he has at one time or another looked upon quite as many profiles as he has harbors. If not more. The young man is twenty-seven. He is very rich. For a long time he has been very bored. But for the past two weeks he has not been bored at all. It is a new and novel experience. He is enjoying it. He is even enjoying the fact that whenever he has tried to make love to this girl she has laughed at him. Has remained friendly and gay and unstirred when he would have had her respond quite differently.

He has enjoyed it because ever since he can remember things have come easily to him and it is rather nice to have something refused him, at least temporarily. Perhaps not to be able to have it at all. For some time now, ever since his mother had been astute enough to leave the chorus of an American revue playing in London and marry an oilman from Wilson County, Oklahoma, he has been able to have practically everything he wants. And recently there has been so little to want. Now there is Whitney Prentice. It was as if he had suddenly discovered a reason for living....

He slipped his hand through her arm and pressed it lightly. "Do you remember," he inquired pleasantly, "what I told you last night?"

"Yes," said Whitney, "I remember perfectly." Her voice was quite as cheerful as his and her eyes laughed at him. "Last night and the night before that and the night...."

"Before that," finished Jay Nowell promptly. "Six nights on board this ship to say nothing of all those nights in London...."

"To say nothing of the night we flew across the Channel...."

"Exactly. Well, I still do. I love you, Whitney Prentice. What are you going to do about it?"

"Nothing, Jay Nowell. Except hope that once we leave this boat you will have sense enough to forget all about me."

"Why? Why are you so sure that given time I wouldn't be able to...."

"Because," interrupted Whitney, leaning against the rail, looking at him directly, "as I have tried to make clear to you so many times already, once, a long time ago, when I was about fifteen years old, I fell in love with someone else. I am still in love with him. When I get around to it, I am going to marry him."

"Are you trying to tell me that there has never been anyone else? That all your life since you were fifteen years old you have loved one person?"

"Yes," said Whitney, frowning, "does it seem so strange to you? To me it seems quite natural."

Jay Nowell considered all this thoughtfully. Giving it a sort of detached, impartial attention. Finally he said: "It seems to me a rather unique experience and possibly a dangerous one. However, you seem to have found it ultimately satisfactory. Tell me something about him, Whitney, this young man you have loved so long and so faithfully. Is he so very handsome? So much handsomer than I, for instance?"

He grinned down at her impudently, a faintly amused challenge in his insolent dark eyes. He was very sure of himself and slightly spoiled where women were concerned. Being to blame for this themselves, most of them liked it.

Whitney liked it. She had found him diverting company during the four weeks she had known him. The four weeks since the day her cousin, Helena Bruce, had introduced them to each other at a cocktail tea in her apartment in Paris. She had said: "This is Jay Nowell, Whit. He's supposed to be an American but you're more apt to find him over here. If he likes you, he'll make love to you adequately and spend money on you insanely. If he doesn't you're just out of luck."

CHAPTER IV

Jay had liked Whitney so much that he had followed her to England where she was to meet Mrs. Endicott Dane, a friend of Aunt Hester's, with whom she was to return to Boston. Of course, neither she nor Aunt Hester had any way of knowing that Mrs. Dane would be confined to the stateroom during the entire trip with mal de mer. That had been a break for Jay Nowell. Because he had come along too. Not from any desire to visit Boston, which he had honored with his presence twice and then briefly to attend two football games, but because it was unthinkable that she should say good-by to Whitney in London having just discovered her, so to speak, in Paris.

She considered him now gravely. "No," she decided quite honestly. "Scott isn't really more handsome than you. You are very handsome, Jay. But of course you know that. Scott is handsome, too. But in quite a different way. He's blond.. extraordinarily so. And his shoulders are wider...."

"And," she might have added, "his eyes are less brooding and much happier and his smile is something to live for....and when he makes love to you you know why you were born and that life is lovely...."

She contented herself with saying: "He is the gayest person I have ever known."

"Well," admitted Jay Nowell reasonably, "no one could call me gay, I suppose. Still I have other attributes."

"Of course you have. You dance divinely....like nothing human."

"Why not? Didn't I tell you that my mother was a dancer? And that my father was an aviator. Both require a nice sense of balance."

"I suppose you fly, too?"

"Yes, of course. Sometime I'll take you up. Teach you how to handle the controls. You should get a great kick out of that. If my mother," he concluded, grinning casually, "ever succeeds in running through Tom Thayer's money, I may have a chance to fulfill my destiny yet."

"As a dancer....or a flyer?"

Jay shrugged. "Who knows? In the meantime I cling to my amateur standing in both."

"Funny," said Whitney slowly, her eyes frowning slightly, "the different backgrounds people have. Takes yours, for instance."

WINTER'S RUDER TOUCH

Winter gave rather a rude touch since Christmas which came within range of becoming the unusual green Christmas. The storm caught returning holidayers before they could reach home and marooned many in far-away places, and then unleashed its full fury with cold. Snow was frozen and the wind attained gale velocity.

The sudden firming up of the weather is all too apparent on rough sidewalks.

Rough as some spots are, it is to be wondered that so much was accomplished in the few hours which the residents had to remove the snow before the wet mass became frozen.

In the southern parts of Central Ontario the snowfall was not heavy but the tie-up was serious owing to the fact that the roads froze over before the snow had become packed, the result being very rough roads with ruts of ice. In the north the deeper snow caused a more serious situation.

The first part of December was mild generally, though the mercury did descend to a few degrees above zero. Even in the latest cold spell there has not been zero weather yet this winter, as compared with the December of 1937 which had a number of days of zero temperature, the lowest being 13 below.

SAFEGUARDS FOR ALL THE AMERICAS

Secretary of State Hull, head of the U.S. delegation to the Pan-American Conference at Lima, Peru, has been highly praised on his work at the conference. It is to him largely that credit has been given that the twenty-one nations of the American continents have been brought into unity of view on the attitude of defence and mutual protection against all foreign aggression, of whatever kind, whether militarist, or economic, or ideological, even if some of the nations believed they were closer to Europe than to the United States. What plan will be followed in case of outside aggression against the peace and security of an American nation is not worked out but there is a united opinion expressed that any attack on one of these nations would menace the rest of the American countries. This will probably crystallize in consultations towards an undivided front against the aggressor in case of attack.

The declaration adopted at the conference did not express fear of military and naval aggression from Europe and there was nothing said to irritate any nation. However there has been during the past year enough indicated to make American nations see possible danger in the invasion of foreign political and economic ideals. Enough has been done to indicate that American nations must be left alone by outsiders who might cause mischief and that there must be no interference with the democracies of the Western world. There is agreement on these vital fundamental principles.

That the European countries have been watching the Lima conference is to be shown by the inferences the Italians and Germans draw—saying that it is a setback for the American policy of Pan-Americanism, and a failure but such comment shows that these nations see that there is an undertone against such "isms" as those of Italy and Germany which have caused so much unrest. Neither Hitler nor Mussolini ought to be able to find much ground for patting themselves or one another on the back after studying the declaration. American nations have repudiated force, and believe in adjustment of disputes and difficulties on a broad principle of justice and fairness. No one would go quite that far in praise of what Italy and Germany have done in any year, particularly in the last year.

A "LOST" CONTINENT

There is a lost continent under the United States, which was high above the earth half a billion years ago. That land has now been named Appalachia. The American Association for the Advancement of Science was told this this week. Seismograph clues made the discovery. The structure of this old continent is now sunken and lies deep under other rocks which were later formed and under soil. It used to run under what are now the cities of New York, Philadelphia and Washington. The buried ridge or mountain range is so massive that the force of gravitation above it is slightly high, but not sufficient to be noticeable on scales.

In the sinking of this vast ridge, it was fractured and some pieces evidently far out from what is now the Atlantic coast were completely broken off. It was a matter of only 60,000,000 years ago or 540,000,000 years after the old continent was formed, that mud and sediments formed over the sinking range and became pressed into solid rock over a period of millions of years by its own weight.

The outline of the continent is said to have reached into Labrador, with a border to the west on the Blue Ridge Mountains, and to have curved south of them westward in the neighborhood of Georgia. Florida is outside the range of the Appalachian continent.

There was a "lost" island or continent according to the ancients, near the Straits of Gibraltar, which was said to be the home of a great nation and was finally swallowed up by the sea. There are two views of this—one that the tradition is fundamentally true and the other that it is the outgrowth of some early discovery of America. There are also stories of cities under the waters of the ocean.

AUTUMN LEAF

An elegy
Of all grief
Autumn writes
On every leaf.

Reluctantly,
Each leaf, a flame,
Gutters back
To where it came.

In spite of death,
Of snow and frost,
Loveliness
Is never lost.

For the gray rain
With a low sound
Stitches color
Into the ground.

Leaf by leaf,
Autumn goes
To inaugurate
Again the rose. . . .

FOUR HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILES IN FOUR DAYS OF MOTOR CAR DRIVING, in very bad weather, and worse roads, constituted a record in 1910, and still stands as a real record considering the circumstances. A Windsor man advertised a used car for sale, and a man in Odessa saw the advertisement and determined to own that car. Negotiations began, continued and culminated in the man from Odessa becoming the owner of the car at Windsor and determining to drive it home over the country roads. He had never driven a car but a few lessons in Windsor convinced him that he could lick any motor car that dared rise up agin' him. Rain, hail, sleet and mud failed to daunt the man from Odessa and he pushed that car through and over every obstacle, 450 miles in four days, driving mostly in daylight for the dangers of night driving in those days were not to be lightly taken. Arriving home the Man from Odessa said, "I am now home without one mishap, and my dreadful experience will be of inestimable value to me now that I am home and can rest out and become tranquil once more. Four hundred and fifty miles of continuous driving for four days to an inexperienced driver was simply too much for me and when I reached home I was exhausted both physically and mentally. The Man from Odessa was P. A. Mabee, now a resident of Bloomfield.

OUR FRIEND "MINNIE" HAS DEPARTED FOR THE HAPPY HUNTING GROUND. "Minnie" has been featured in this column before as one of the best drivers in this part of the country some years ago—in the horse and buggy days—friend and confidant of William Clarke, of Belleville, cattle buyer. Minnie never sulked and never refused a brush on the road, seldom having to take dust. Minnie became a familiar figure in all parts of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties and right royally did she contribute her share to the fortunes of William Clarke, afterwards doing a bit of driving for sons Ted and Jack Clarke as they grew to man's estate. For some time now Minnie has been retired to the pasture in the summer and a nice warm box stall in the winter, but at thirty-six she harkened to the call and closed her eyes in the sleep that knows no waking, after a lifetime of service and devotion, honored in death as in life, not as a servant, but as a friend. Just another link with the Horse and Buggy Days severed.

"WRONG WAY" CORRIGAN has been cleaning up at Hollywood. He has accumulated $75,000 in three months as a movie actor and author. But that lad Corrigan is nobody's fool—Hollywood has not dazzled the wits out of him entirely, for knows that Corrigan is only a nine or ninety days wonder, and after that will be worth a dime a dozen or thereabouts. Hence Corrigan is living soberly and modestly, living in a low-priced hotel room, coming to work at the studio in a bus and lunching on a nickle ice-cream bar. Corrigan is a freak to Hollywood the sophisticated which is all for glitter, shine, and show, and throws its money around like a whole crew of drunken sailors. But, as one studio executive said about Corrigan: "The little guy has the guts to say no".

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PARKING FINES IN ONE DAY—that's some record, even for New York, but it resulted from a drive to show that the parking by-laws had teeth in them. As a result 5,086 were haled before the various courts and fined to make them remember how to park in future. An average of three cases a minute were run off and the fine money kept up a continuous merry jingle as it dropped in the public coffers, the average fine being two dollars.

When a student at Princeton University, Woodrow Wilson was fond of telling of an encounter betwee his father, who was a Presbyterian minister, and one of his father's parishioners in North Carolina.

"How come, Preacher Wilson," asked the parishioner, "that you have such a sleek horse and you're so skinny yourself?"

"Well," answered the Reverend Mr. Wilson, "you see I feed the horse—but the congregation feeds me."

That Body Of Yours

Treatment of Varicose Veins

It would be safe to say that at least two of every five adults has varicose veins to some degree—thighs, legs, ankles, lower bowel (hemorrhoids or piles), scrotum (varicocele) and elsewhere. Fortunately most cases require no treatment as no symptoms are present. There are a great number of cases of varicose veins in the legs, sometimes accompanied by varicose ulcers difficult to heal. Just what should or should not be done is often a problem to these patients.

As a guide to patients and physicians in the treatment of varicose veins, Drs. Howard R. Mahorner and Alton Oschner, New Orleans, offer some suggestions in Annals of Surgery. They recommend the use of a tight band or tourniquet across different levels of the thigh—upper third, the mid-thigh, and the lower third. When the patient walks with the tourniquet applied, the varicosities—swollen, twisted parts of veins—do not stand out as much as when standing still or walking without the tourniquet, but in certain instances there are different degrees of improvement with the tourniquet at different levels' By noting these 'improvements' at the different levels, the physician is enabled to select the proper treatment for the individual case.

Treatment—by injection or operation—is not recommended in advanced age, lowered vitality, pregnancy, tumors, or inflammation of veins (phlebitis).

The 'active" treatment consists of injecting the veins with a 'hardening substance which causes them to dry up, or removing portions of the veins by operation.

Cases chosen for the injection method are:

1—Early cases with small varicose veins of the calf or lower leg in which the deep veins will return the blood to the heart when the varicose veins are destroyed.

2—Certain cases which refuse operation.

2—Cases where patients dislike idea of operation but are willing to undergo injection treatment at present time.

The combined injection and surgical treatment is used in cases with moderate or severe varicosities where there are no conditions present which would prevent good and safe results.

Where the condition of the varicose veins is not considered severe enough to require injection or operation, rest, keeping legs up on chair or higher as much as possible, and the use of elastic stockings and bandages is recommended.

EARLY HEROES

Tom Sawyer, hero of Mark Twain's immortal masterpiece, has fired the imagination of 'teen-age boys throughout the world in much the same way as he fired the imagination of a Sudbury 14-year-old last week. The boy emulated the boy-hero of the Mississippi for 56 hours when he ran away to dwell alone in a vacant summer cottage at Trout Lake. Remorse and anything but a pleasant environment, reconciled him and brought him back, perhaps a little more appreciative of his home.

But if Tom Sawyer, and R. L. Stevenson's Jim Hawkins of "Treasure Island," and David Balfour of "Kidnapped," have set boys dreaming, they have at least been wholesome adventures. What of the blood-and-thunder stories, flung carelessly from irresponsible typewriters? What of the "pulp" heroes, the convicts, gangsters and bad men who troop across contemporary pages? Are these 10-cent heroes wholesome? Does a dime-novel hero who eludes the law and robs 10 banks in as many days, inspire a lad to take a harmless jaunt in the country?

Tom Sawyer, Jim Hawkins and David Balfour, and other classical heroes, are just as capable of firing the imagination of one boy as another. The problem is rather to distinguish between the wholesome and the unwholesome. The one inspires a harmless adventure; the other a petty theft. The one has a reunion at home; the other, juvenile court.

A boy's imagination will cull scenes from his environment. Fill it with trash from some contemporary literary weakling, and the boy is headed for juvenile delinquency; but fill it with wholesome literature from the best minds in the world, and you will have boyhood at its best.—Sudbury Star.

Smoking Might Relax Them

Neither Hitler nor Mussolini smokes. That may explain a good deal of their excitable humorless characteristics. It may open the door to a lot of scientific and quasi-scientific argument for and against smoking; but the world in general is secretly convinced in its non-scientific way which usually proves right, that the man who has learned to use tobacco without abusing it, is more likely to be a congenial companion than he who despises my lady nicotine. There are, of course, plenty of exceptions to the general rule. It is not always easy to distinguish between those whose smoking is the act of a devotee and those with whom it is a mere pose or uncontrollable habit. Nevertheless there is something soothing and sociable about smoking.

There are some who parade non-smoking as a virtue. Smokers do not mind and protest only — and then good naturedly — when their pleasure is stigmatized as a vice. There are some who frankly admit they do not care for smoking or even that it makes them queasy; those are to be admired for not smoking just in order to be like the majority. There are excessive smokers who know it and cannot stop and they admit a weakness, and are to be pitied like those who ruin their digestions with too much candy and fattening foods. But those are not of the majority of moderate and discriminating smokers who are all the more tolerant because they have discovered one of the secrets of relaxation. The calls upon the nerves of most people today are heavy and a little solace, if they desire, per pipe, cigarette or cigar is surely their due.

One hesitates to call either Hitler or Mussolini tolerant. One likes to give even dictators the benefit of the doubt and would willingly — if possible — credit them with sincerity when they assure the world that it hurts their paternal hearts more than it hurts their victims' persons and pockets when they become rough. It just is not possible, however. Those who smoke and ponder cannot help feeling that there would be more evidence of humanity in these leaders if they too lit up and listened, talked less and inhaled more. And if they will take a tip, there is some excellent tobacco grown in Canada, guaranteed to bring peace to harassed souls and to reduce the risk of flying off the handle. — Saint John Telegraph-Journal.

Doukhobors Go Modern

Dissension among the Doukhobors in British Columbia over leadership of this strange sect has again brought to the attention of the general public the peculiar characteristics of this intensely peculiar folk.

Schooled to a discipline that few others could submit to, these exiles from Russia have until recently, kept their traditional beliefs seemingly intact despite their association with those living in a totally different mental and physical atmosphere.

While at various times small, rebellious minorities in Alberta and British Columbia have broken away from the main body and have given the authorities some cause for anxiety, these queer people have in the main been law abiding and not troublesome.

Their religious beliefs may be of little consequence to Canadians, since the majority of them are now considered to be inoffensive people, thrifty, honest and patient, opposed to strife of any sort and suffering personal and community wrongs rather than appealing to force or the courts for redress.

Medieval in thought and beliefs the older Doukhobors were unique in the midst of an ever changing people, but it would appear that the leaven of change is insinuating itself into their midst, for word comes from the West that the newer generation, the younger element in the colonies is throwing off the shackles of ancient customs, the observance of which was rigidly insisted upon by Peter Veregin, the Elder, "the Moses who led his people out of the wilderness" (Russia) into "the land of promise" (Canada), and is going modern with respect to habits, dress and pleasures.

Today the Doukhobors do not hold their leaders in the same reverence they did in their early days of settlement on the prairies. They still esteem their spiritual head and look up to him but he does not guide their material fortunes to the same extent as formerly.

In another generation the Doukhobors may all become assimilated with modernity. If they do there is nothing surer that they will keep abreast of the times, notwithstanding their peculiarities, for when all is said and done, the average "Douk" is a splendid settler, a capable farmer, and eventually may become the very best sort of Canadian citizen.—Chatham News.

Dance Given by Women's Auxiliary of the Hospital Enjoyed by Large Crowd

"There was a sound of revelry by night" and Belleville's best in one of the most colorful social events of the season marked their loyalty to their hospital when last night the usually austere halls and corridors of the Belleville Collegiate Institute rang to the sounds of merriment, mirth and music as four hundred and fifty people enjoyed to the full the ball given by the Women's Auxiliary of the Belleville General Hospital.

The distinct aloofness, or clannish gathering of small groups usually associated with such affairs was missing. A distinct air of camaraderie pervaded the gaily-dressed crowds from the time "Bud" Haines orchestra opened the dance until the National Anthem rang through the corridors at an early hour this morning.

Color and more color was the predominating keynote of the affair. Under suffused lights that shone down from above the gymnasium used for dancing, couples moved in a kaleidoscopic parade of flashing colors, that were brought out in their full beauty by the shades of moving spotlights in the dimly shaded balconies.

Moving against a background of gaily festooned Christmas trees, over which drooping streamers of colored paper were hung, with small editions of evergreen, balloon-decorated that ornamented the edge of the balconies and dance-floors, the gay dresses of the ladies contrasting with the conventional black and white of the gentlemen made a colorful picture. Evergreens in the balconies decorated the sitting out corners and the refreshment stand.

In the library where number of tables of bridge were in play Yuletide favors formed the decorative scheme with more balloon-festooned Christmas trees adding a colorful touch. Prize winners at bridge were Mrs. W. R. McCreary, first Mrs. G. W. Proctor, second; Mr. W. R. McCreary, Jr., first; and Mr. Chas. Hyde, second.

In the cafeteria where a delightful lunch was served shortly after midnight deep blue and silver formed the color scheme. Tables grouped about a silver-trimmed tree, were centred with blue crepe paper studded with stars and silver candle-holders containing matching tapers. Uniquely designed silver and blue wall plaques carried an artistic effect.

Novelty dances were introduced by a thoughtful dance-committee at intermittent parts of the dance-program. As the night drew on the fun became faster, hilarity increased and the entire gathering entered into the spirit of the affair with increasing enjoyment. One of the highlights of the affair was the mass-introduction to Belleville of the latest English dance sensation, the "Lambeth Walk". With the dance floor filled with pirouetting dancers, with musical tempo rising as the dance progressed, it was a scene of hilarious fun, with some of the dancers adding to the general enjoyment with their elementary knowledge of the various steps. Dancers of all ages went through the few simple steps of the "Walk" with a zest of enjoyment, that brooked no slowing-up. It was a grand party, one that will stand out as one of the most successful events of its nature ever staged in this city. Novelty dance winners included, Mrs. Gerald A. Morton, Mr. Bill Rodbourne, and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Proctor.

Not one of the least outstanding features of the affair was the delightful music played by "Bud" Haines and his Commodores. On a beautifully decorated dais in the main gymnasium, this talented group of musicians dispensed rhythms that could not help but please the most fastidious dancer. Another enjoyable highlight of the evening was a splendid exhibition of tap dancing given by Mary Forster. Vociferous applause greeted Belleville's talented dancer as she finished her number.

Patrons and patronesses included, Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, chairman of the Board of Governors and Mrs. Robertson; Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Mikel; Miss Ruth Thompson, director of Training School for Nurses; Dr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Stobie, the latter president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary; Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Flynn and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. A. Cameron.

The Dance Committee included, Convener, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Mrs. J. H. Forrester, Mrs. R. G. Stafford, Mrs J. D. O'Flynn, Mrs. J. W. Imlah, Mrs. R. H. Martin, Mrs. R. Hamilton, Mrs. E. J. Bernstein, Mrs. MacKenzie Robertson, and Messrs. F. H. Deacon, Charles Dolan and A. H. Ketcheson. The committee in charge of supper, in the Cafeteria included, Miss N. Burke, Mrs. R. G. Stafford, Mrs. Gerald A. Morton and Mrs. R. Hamilton. Included in the committee in charge of refreshments served on the balcony were Mrs. J. D. O'Flynn, Mrs. R. H. Martin. Mrs. J. W. Imlah was in charge of the bridge with Miss Eileen Ashe in charge of decorations.

Private Dance Class Members Honor Mrs. Albert Johnstone

Honoring a sincere and gracious friend, Mrs. Albert Johnstone, members of the Private Class Dance, an exclusive institution of Johnston's Academy for many years, planned an interesting surprise on Monday evening.

The Private Class Dance, originating years ago through the Eastern Star and held twice monthly, with added membership, had its last meeting on Monday. The deep regret felt at the severing of close associations and the appreciation in all hearts for the charming hospitality of Mrs. Johnstone prompted arrangements for the party which came as a complete surprise to the guest of honor.

About seventy couples were present, former members attending in large numbers. At the close of the dance, Mrs. Arthur Nayler, who with Mr. Nayler had planned the party expressed the sentiments of the gathering in a beautifully phrased address and on behalf of the gathering, Mr. Nayler presented a purse of money. A copy of the address and a roll of seventy-five names of contributors were also presented to Mrs. Johnstone.

At the same time, her daughter, Mrs. Stanley Lennox was presented with a silver cake basket by Mrs. Alex. McGlashon, Mr. Wessells, in a brief speech referring to her interest in the members and her share in making the Private Dance Class a successful social enterprise.

The recipients, who were taken completely by surprise, thanked their friends for their thoughtful remembrance and for the sentiments expressed in the addresses of the evening. Lunch was served at the close of the dance.

The address to Mrs. Johnstone follows:

Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Johnstone,

Your friends have assigned us a very pleasant duty in trying to express to you the sincere appreciation of the friends of this Class dance which has come down through the years. We have learned with much regret that you have to sever your connections with this Academy which we feel has really been your life work, a work that has meant much to you and which has brought much happiness to others along life's road. We have come here many times feeling perhaps somewhat weary in ourselves but we were always met by your cheery smile, your kindly word, and your outstretched hand which meant so much to us and made us forget our own feelings.

We have met many lovely people at this Class dance and formed many friendships for we knew, Mrs. Johnstone, the high standard which you have set for this hall and here we felt secure in forming friendships one with another. Friendship is a wonderful thing; it cannot be purchased with silver or gold. It is a golden chain that will bind all friends together. If no one ever breaks a link of this chain then we'll all be friends forever.

While we have come almost to the moment of farewell in this hall of friendship wherein we have danced hand in hand together some years have meant sunshine and some have brought shadows, but we trust, Mrs. Johnstone, that these years have brought to you as they have to us, memories, that will never fade nor we cannot find a truer wish nor a fonder one to caress you. We thank you and may the God of Love bless you.

Signed by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Nayler on behalf of the members of the Private Class Dance.

Weddings

McAULEY—WHITMORE

APSLEY, Dec. 29—A quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Whitmore on Wednesday, when Doris Thelma, their second daughter, was united in marriage to Sidney McAuley by Mr. E. Whitmore of Coe Hill. They left on a wedding trip to Belleville and other points. On their return they will reside in Apsley.

SHARPE—WILSON

Campbellford, Dec. 29—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's United church parsonage on Saturday by the Rev. Harold B. Neal when Jean Margaret, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wilson of Percy Township, became the bride of William Robert Sharpe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sharpe of Hoard's Station.

The bride wore a robin's egg blue alpaca crepe dress with brown hat and accessories. She was attended by Miss Louise Brooks, wearing wine velvet with matching accessories. Stanley Wilson, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where a dinner was served to the immediate relatives. Later the couple left amid showers of confetti for a honeymoon trip to Toronto and on their return they will reside near Frankford.

Candle Lighting Service Held At Stirling

Christmas Services in St. Paul's Church, Stirling were of an exceptionally beautiful character. In the morning the subject of the sermon was The Christmas Glory"—the Glory which the coming of Christ the Saviour as a little child has given to childhood and to the commonplace and to the simplicities of life.

The message of the sermon was finely supported by two special Christmas numbers by the choir and a solo by Miss Ruby Stapley.

In the evening a unique candle-light service attracted a capacity congregation. This commenced with a Processional led by the minister and the Choir with lighted candles who came in by the main entrance and proceeding to the front stopped beneath and in front of the pulpit,—the Choir dividing on either side of the minister. Here the symbolism of the service was briefly explained. The inseparable association of the Manger and the Cross, the Light of the Star and the Light of the Cross—these were referred to. And then to the sweet strains of "Silent Night! Holy Night! the older boys and girls of the Sunday School came in, each carrying an unlighted candle. Proceeding to the front they lighted their candles from those held by the choir. When all were lighted the minister proceeded within the altar rail to the Cross made of shining metal upon which he placed the lighted candles passed up from hand to hand by the choir and school. When the Cross with its burning tapers was formed, all the other lights used were turned out and only the light from a beautiful blue-white star at the peak of the organ and the flaming light from the cross, remained. Standing by the lighted cross the minister spoke of the method by which light is transmitted and reflected as from the Sun by the Moon and a million stars—so the light of God must be reflected by a million of his children who thus become the medium of His Way and Will for all mankind.

To the strains of the Communion Hymn played softly by the organist the choir proceeded to their places and the children were seated in the front pews reserved for them. Upon reaching the pulpit this part of the service concluded with a few moments of silent prayer and then prayer by the Minister. The rest of the service was devoted to the singing of carols and the reading of the old, old story of the Nativity of Our Lord.

The choir under Mr. Clute rendered two special carols and the minister, Rev. W. J. Scott, S.T.M., conducted the service throughout.

Tabernacle Mission Circle Elects Officers

Last evening Tabernacle Mission Circle met at the home of Mrs. Wes. Moore, 110 Catherine Street.

The opening hymn was "Silent Night" followed by the devotional topic conducted by Lou Dougherty.

Jessie Smith gave a reading "Christmas Hymns and Carols" telling of the origin of the text and tunes of "Silent Night" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem".

A short article describing a typical Christmas Day in a pioneer hospital by Miss Elsie Hunt, Reg. N., of Cold Lake, Alberta, formerly from this district was read by Mae Edmondson.

The study book for this year "The World in Canada" was introduced by Edith Stanton, after which an interesting discussion took place regarding our attitude towards the New Canadians.

Following the regular business the election of officers was held with the following results:

President—Rachel Fox
Vice President—Myra Irvine
Recording Secretary — Emma Dafoe
Treasurer—Lou Dougherty
Corresponding Secretary—Thelma Hodges

Better Join a Gym Class If Shoulders Don't Qualify

NAN GREY
Her pretty shoulders get regular care, too.

By HELEN FOLLETT

IT IS a grand thing to have lovely shoulders. Do you ever give a thought to yours?

Reaching and stretching movements are good. Swimming is an excellent exercise, not only to make the shoulders strong and of graceful contour, but to develop the breasts and strengthen the muscles of the back.

Shoulders are on display at evening parties where scant gowns drop away in graceful lines. If yours do not qualify, join a gym class.

Chin yourself on the horizontal bar. That is a marvelous means of making arms lovely, giving fulness to the chest and strengthening the fibres of the torso from neck to waistline.

Mothers of little blonde daughters had better start the fair-haired darling along the beauty way. Golden crowns must have special attention. It's no fun when they get tarnished later in life, silken shafts going brown at the roots, looking colorless and dingy.

The soap must be of the blandest. A harsh soap can play the dickens with blonde hair. Even the best of soaps must be thoroughly rinsed away after the shampoo; any sign of soap scum will dim the glimmer of the hair.

Oily preparations are likely to darken golden halos. Home-made tonics are a menace. Brushing is highly recommended because it makes the growth vigorous and healthy.

A weekly shampoo is necessary, especially for white hair which darkens with dust in a few days. The hair should be thoroughly dried before the comb or brush is used. Friction of the scalp before and after the washing is an important part of the ritual.

We must warn mothers against the use of bleaching rinses. When one has arrived at adult years, that's a different matter. But the young fry should not be subjected to artifice in any form. Mothers should remember that.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

(Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"Shall We Call Her 'Stepmother'?"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

When I was four years old, my mother died. My aunt took care of me and my sister who was only two years of age when my mother died. A few years later my father married my aunt, and we lived with them until we were married. She taught us to address her as "Aunt Mary" for she wasn't our mother although she treated us like her own. The problem is, we don't know whether to refer to her as "Aunt Mary" or our stepmother, when we speak of her to someone.

What is she to us, and to our children? We have always gotten along beautifully.

W.

What a wonderful woman your aunt must be, and what a fine ideal of human relationships she must have! From every point of view she has the right to be called by the endearing name "Aunt Mary", rather than to be referred to as your stepmother.

If I were you, I should always introduce acquaintances to her as "Aunt Mary", not as "stepmother". I am sure that she will like this better. To your children, too, she should be Aunt Mary, for such a woman would, of course extend her ample supply of devotion to them too.

Really, of course, there should be no cloud over the word 'stepmother' or 'step'-anything, for we know that there are many such relationships that have every special devotion. But actually, in every day speech, it is easier to capture warmth of tone in a more endearing name, to indicate our devotion. And the name "Aunt Mary" is ready-made for your use.

Should She Have Left Card?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—I attended a large reception given for the niece of a friend, at the friend's home. It was a post-nuptial reception. Should I have left cards, or is this practice quite out, or, at least, optional?

2—Should I have called on the bride when she took up housekeeping which she did immediately? Although a year has passed I have not heard from the bride. Should I call on her now, or should she call on me? The latter, of course, she could scarcely do, as I left no cards. She does know my address, however, through her aunt.

A. B.

1—The leaving of cards is actively abided by in some communities, and more or less "out" in others. We usually conform to the customs of the community in which we live. When we are in doubt, as you are now, the only thing to do is to take cards with us to a reception; if we see that other guests are leaving cards, we can leave ours, one for the hostess and one for the guest of honor.

2—You do not say whether or not you know the bride . . . that is whether you knew her before the reception given in her honor. If you do know her, even rather well the proper and gracious thing is for you to call on her.

How to Address a Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I live in a small town and have recently been having some treatments from a city doctor. It is necessary for me to write to him, rather than make a special trip to the city.

How should I address him, and how should I close the letter?

G.

Your letter would begin
Dear Doctor Bryant, and the complimentary close of your letter would be Very sincerely yours
Ruth Graham Brown

Americans Abroad

Christmas sailings of the big liners took home the last of my thousand new friends, writes "Hotel Reporter" in London Daily Express.

They are the holidaying Americans I talked to this year. Though I met most of them only once, I count them friends because they won't let me do anything else. They have no time for mere acquaintances. You are a friend or nothing.

About half have invited me to go and stay with them "back home," took the trouble to write down addresses and telephone numbers. Lots of the others sent embarrassing enthusiastic letters thanking me for "kindness." Goodness knows what that means. I only listened to what they had to say.

Maybe it is all just politeness; somehow I think not.

Some were extremely rich, stayed in ten-guinea-a-day suites; others called themselves "just ordinary Americans." But friendliness seems a national characteristic. There was not a snub in a thousand opportunities.

x x x

It was easy listening. They talk well and more readily than the people of any other country I know. They show a grand pride, too, in having done something and no false modesty in telling me. I don't call that bragging.

Favourite road to riches seems to start from a newsboy's stand. Joseph P. Kennedy, American ambassador in London, was proud to tell me that he earned his first pay-packet as a newsboy in Boston. I know men in this country who would have forgotten that long ago. Kennedy is just one exiled American going home to his Christmas turkey.

x x x

Americans have a refreshingly childish fondness for anything "biggest in the world."

Wealthy investment broker Leon L. Roos waxed really lyrical about the "largest man-made island in the world" in San Francisco Bay, of the "two longest bridges in the world" that span it.

New York's big-store chief, Percy Strauss, was just as enthusiastic about next year's World's Fair, because it will cover "the greatest area of any fairground in the world."

Cotton - broker Myron Herrick asserted only recently that Ribbentrop's peace agreement with Bonnet was "the greatest hoax in the world."

To get even I made a point of telling every American that I work for the newspaper with the largest daily sale in the world.

I like their punctuality. Being only five minutes late brought profuse apologies and explanations. They value time.

I am not quite so enthusiastic about their early start to the day. The majority thought 8.30 or 9 o'clock in the morning a good time for a talk.

They could not convert me to their habit of smoking a large after-breakfast cigar. They did convince me that ice in whisky makes a good summer drink.

Some of their words and phrases are apt to stick. I find myself saying "gotten," am apt to be going "some place else."

x x x

Most popular talking point was home politics. Mr. Roosevelt is either the greatest man in his country or the worst. I know the arguments of both sides. European politics ran a close second, and a few days on the Continent seemed sufficient to acquire complete understanding of international affairs.

Admiration for what they called our "poker-face" in those anxious September days was sincere. Commander Edward Elwell Spafford summed up America's appreciation of Mr. Chamberlain's peace efforts:

"Talking for one million American ex-servicemen, I would like you to know that we think he did the greatest job that has been done for humanity in our life-time." Many more said as much.

x x x

Lots of them cancelled trips to Germany, preferring to "spend good American dollars with our friends."

Most popular sport was ancestor hunting. Ireland was an easy favorite, but a tremendous number claimed both Scots and Irish forebears. I have met a descendant of the Welsh kings, of Macbeth, and just about all the progeny of Mayflower's passenger list.

Magnet that brought many over was to see the old home for the first time. They told me the stories their mothers had told them, of quiet English villages and the grey stone church down the lane. And the hard-boiled king-pins of industry were the most sentimental of all.

x x x

I am quite used to the incredible. When James Henry Phelan, of Phelan's grocery store, Beaumont, Texas, mentioned casually that he had sold out for $48,000,000 (£9,600,000) cash I didn't bat an eyelid. It was quite true—the second largest cash deal in the history of United States business.

Thing that pleased them most about this country was what they called our "civility." That liftmen say "Goodmorning, sir, instead of "Howdy, boss?" that taxi-drivers say "Yessir," and not "O.K., brother," was a constant source of wonder.

Thing that amused the first-time-overs about me was my neatly rolled umbrella; they could not understand why I was faithful to it even when sunshine looked set for the day. But I often laughed last.

Windsor Castle wins easily as most-want-to-see of our famous "sights."

x x x

I like the American woman of fifty because she never looks it, takes such care of herself, is so smart and self - possessed. Those I met were mostly successful business women, ran anything from hat shops to electricity undertakings. Also, they had solved the marriage and career problem — to their own satisfaction, at any rate.

Schoolgirl daughters talk more intelligently than girls of the same age here, and, strangely, do not appear precocious — yet they seem a bit young for lipstick.

Pleasantest fiction was the airy way in which so many of these good-natured people claimed personal friendship with Lord Beaverbrook. They called him "Max" transparent casualness how delighted they had been to "have him stop with us."

If Lord Beaverbrook has stayed with half the people who say he has, then he will have slept in more beds than Queen Elizabeth.

International Bridge to Connect Rotary District

Belleville Rotarians celebrated Christmas at a special luncheon meeting Wednesday noon as the guests of the Hotel Quinte, a turkey menu being served with all the Yuletide trimmings. The program was in charge of the Music Committee and consisted of Christmas Carols by the Belleville Octette, vocal solos by Rotarian Jack Deacon, and violin solos by Rotarian Dr. Locke. Harry Moorman had charge of the program and was assisted by Leo Riggs and Sandy Burrows.

The Belleville Octette, composed of Gardiner Duff, Alfred Evans, Bert Houston, Bill Norris, Harold Howard, J. Arnold Thomson, James Bankier, Harry Moorman, contributed several selections in a very pleasing manner.

In the absence of President Mav Haig who is spending some days in Northern Ontario, Director Bill Morrison presided. Season's greetings were received and read from Jack Lill, of Baltimore, formerly of Belleville.

Christmas Cheer Committee reported having delivered twenty-seven baskets to families where Santa Claus had not brought a very bountiful Christmas. Morley Duff, Lloyd Hicks and Fred Douglas supervised the distribution.

Appreciation of the hospitality of Gerald Jenkins, manager of Hotel Quinte, in entertaining the members as his guest was expressed, and a as his guest was expressed, and a message of sympathy and good wishes sent to Mrs. J. V. Jenkins, mother of the manager. Appreciation was also voiced by the entire membership to Rotarian Blake Ives for his Christmas gift to each member of a case of thirst quencher in Jamaica Ginger Ale.

Discussion took place on the question of Belleville Rotary Club being placed in a new district. At the last meeting it was decided to express approval of being placed in an all-Canadian district which extended as far north as Englehart in Northern Ontario and Val d'Or in Northern Quebec. This resolution was rescinded and a mjority of members voted for affiliation with an international district to include Belleville, Trenton, Campbellford, other Eastern Ontario Clubs and Montreal Quebec, also clubs in Northern New York easily reached over the new international bridge.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was trying to make his cigar lighter work and ma said, Well, Willyum, a bran new year has practically rolled around.

If I knew of any way to stop it I'd gladly present my discovery free of charge to a grateful world, pop said, and ma said, What I started to say was, I haven't heard a single peep bout your yerly breakable resolution to stop smoking, and I'm just waiting with my tongue in my other cheek for the great annual announcement.

Then you're in for a great surprise this year, pop said, and ma said, My goodness for land sakes you dont mean to say you're going to keep rite on merrily smoking in 1939 without even making a resolution not to?

TRYING TO MAKE IT WORK

I wont commit myself so far as to say that, pop said. In previous years I have always made a resolution to stop smoking and then heroically broken it in spite of your taunts and jibes. But this year it's going to be diffrent, he said, and ma said, Why Willyum, you're going to swear off and actually keep your resolution?

I cant answer that without spoiling the idea, pop said. The idea is that I'm not going to tell you whether I made a resolution or not, so then when you see me smoking you wont know whether I'm breaking my resolution of just naturally keeping on smoking, so you'll never know whether your taunts and jibes are striking home or falling on barren ground, he said, and ma said, Willyum Potts that would be the lowest trick that a mean man ever played on a mortal woman, and what's so funny?

Pop just laughing some more instead of telling her.

SOCIAL HOUR

The Boston Circle met Thursday with Otie Box for an afternoon session, as she did not have her quilt ready for the all-day meeting. We voted for the Secretary to leave the money due for the present bought by the club to replace the one she did not receive from her peanut friend at Baker's store, for he to get. It was voted to go back to the fomer method of entertainment. Adjournment was made for the social hour during which Daisy Tabler changed words into the naes of trees perfectly. Mrs. Box put the most rings on the clown's face but Inez Blair dropped the most beans left-handed into a jar on the top of her head. Mesdames Steelman, Bouser Orahood and Bishop received presents from peanut friends.—Lamar (Mo.) Democrat.

Two Weight-Lifting Records For Canada Broken and One Equalled by Tommy Pedder

In 160 Pound Class He Lifted 165 Pounds and in 165 Class a 170

ALSO ACTED AS COACH

Pedder Also Equalled Mark by Throwing 210 Pounds Over Head

Two Canadian weight-lifting records went crashing by the boards, and another one was equalled, in the local Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night, as Tommy Pedder, Belleville's gift to this phase of sport, and North American champion in the 123 pound division gave a sterling exhibition before a large crowd of fans in a display, that left no doubts in the minds of the spectators as to how he won the blue ribbon from a host of competitors in his class.

Not only did this one hundred and twenty-three pound youth, rated as being the most perfect physical specimen of his size this side of the Atlantic, give his audience a sterling exhibition of how this particular sport is carried out, but he demonstrated his ability on the "rings" that convinced the audience and likewise officials of the "Y" that he is one of the most outstanding young athletes this Quinte City has ever produced.

Shatters Own Mark

"Tommy," as he is familiarly known among his more intimate friends, bettered his own mark 160 pounds in his own particular division by hoisting the bar at 165. Again he shattered the 165 pound mark by lifting the bar 170. In the heavy division the youthful athlete, to the cheers of his audience tossed the weight over his head at 210 pounds, equalling the Canadian record in this division.

Pedder who, gracefully volunteered his services as coach to embryonic weight-lifters of the Y.M.C.A. acted as judge in the various contests, and evidence of his knowledge of his favorite sport was seen in the splendid displays given by local participants.

Five Classes Contested

Five classes of weights were provided by entrants with three lifts of each type, the press, the snatch, and the clear-and-jerk, being featured. Winners were decided by an aggregate score of their best lifts, and exciting tests resulted as the various participants warmed up to the contests.

In the 112 3-4 class, Leon Shortt showed a clean pair of heels to two opponents finishing with a score of 430 pounds to win over A. Shortt with 248 pounds and A. Eaves who finished in third place with a score of 200.

Vic Mason, 132 1-4 pound exponent, showed his wares to B. McMurter with an aggregate showing of 470 pounds, with the latter running him close with a final count of 460.

P. McQuaid's score of 490 in the 148 3-4 pound class brought him victory over J. Edmonds who aggregated a score of 460 to win second place over G. Yerwood, who tabled 450 pounds at the scorers desk.

Stepped Out of Class

Jim Pepper stepped out of his class to complete the 165 1-4 card to win handsomely over G. Woods with a score of 485, while his lone opponent gathered 315 pounds. L. Hogan dropped out of the running after completing one lift.

In the heavyweight division of the show, the 181 3-4 class J. Cooper showed fine ability with the weights to annex victory over P. Sunderland with an aggregate of 630 pounds. Sunderland garnered 560 points.

Judges in the contests were Eddy Sunderland and Herb Mowat, while a fine job of announcing was done by Homer "Red" Townsend. The contest was held under the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and conformed to Olympic athletic standards.

The athletes and officials were introduced by Secretary Joe Shortt, of the local Y.M.C.A.

BOSTON REINFORCEMENT

With his two ace centres, Milt Schmidt, of the "Sauerkraut line," and Bill Cowley of the Sands-Cowley-Getliffe trio, on the sidelines with injuries, Art Ross, of Boston's all-conquering Bruins, is calling up reinforcements to help keep his team on top of the N.H.L. heap. From Boston's International-American League farm team, Hershey, Harry Frost, ABOVE, a right wing was brought up. Frost opened the season with the Bruins.

Baker Staking Diamond Chips On Three Hurlers

Seattle, Dec. 29 (AP)—Del Baker is staking all his diamond chips on three righthanders—a $50,000 rookie a grownup schoolboy on the comeback trail and a frail but dependable money hurler—to pitch his Detroit Tigers into the running in the American League this year.

Freddie Hutchinson, Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges are the blue chips, Baker, Detroit manager, admitted while here this week to sign Hutchinson to a Detroit contract.

"We're banking heavily on Hutchinson in our pitching plans for 1939, and from what I have seen of the boy, he impresses me as being determined to go places in the fastest baseball there is," Baker said.

"Smart baseball men have told me Hutch is the best prospect to come out of the west since Joe DiMaggio. I was in the Pacific Coast league long enough to know that a pitcher must have plenty to win 25 games. When he hits over .300 and drives in almost a run a game in addition to his hurling, then he has to have plenty."

Won 25 Games

Hutchinson won 25 games and lost 7 for Seattle in the Pacific Coast League last year, and his earned run average of 2.48 was the lowest. He hit .313.

Neither Baker nor Hutchinson would disclose the figures in Hutch's contract, but the young pitcher said terms were "highly satisfactory." Detroit bought him for $50,000 and four players.

"Schoolboy Rowe and Tommy Bridges, two of the greatest pitchers in baseball a few years ago, are my hopes for the return of pitching for the Tigers," Baker continued. "I talked to both of them a few days ago and they're feeling fit. If they go, we'll be up there."

Rowe had a successful season in the Texas League last year, where he was shunted when an ailing arm dented his effectiveness . Bridges, the frail righthander, won 13 and lost 9.

GOODYEARS WIN FROM SAILORS 8-1 IN CLASSY TUSSLE

Toronto Team Unbeaten Since the Season Opened

OSHAWA G-MEN WIN

Blank Niagara Falls and Consolidate Second Position

(By The Canadian Press)

The point under discussion today in Senior "A" circles of the Ontario Hockey Association was whether Toronto Goodyears were a super-team or whether they were of average senior calibre and the opposition was not.

Unbeatable in the six-team circuit this season, Goodyears added to their prowess in Toronto last night by scuppering Port Colborne Sailors 8-1 while Oshawa was blanking Niagara Falls 4-0 at Oshawa.

It was Goodyears' eighth win in nine starts and left them five points ahead of the second-place Oshawans in the standings. Oshawa tied Toronto in a game three weeks ago and since then have won four straight to climb into the second stall from fourth position.

The Goodyear powerhouse, augmented in recent games by a dazzling power play, has scored 56 times against the opposition. Only 12 tallies have found their way into the Toronto nets in nine games.

Seven Without Reply

Goodyears shot seven goals against the Sailors before the visitors scored on a sortie by Lloyd Fitzgerald in the third period. Johnny O'Flaherty and Eddie King each scored twice, with Don Metz, Hank Goldup, George Imlach and Frankie O'Brien counting one each. Imlach also drew two assists.

Three Toronto goals came while Port Colborne were short-handed through penalties. Another was registered when Toronto had a player in penitence. Two of the goals were separated by only eight seconds.

Lex Chisholm, clever centre, was the hero as Oshawa outplayed the Falls. Chisholm one of the league's leading scorers, scored three times, twice on solo efforts. The other goal was scored by Carl Maundrell late in the opening period.

Fast and Rugged

The game was fast and rugged and 14 minor penalties were issued. George Grigor of Niagara Falls and Doug Maundrell of Oshawa each drew three trips to the penitence pew in the first period.

Losses left Port Colborne in fourth place in the standing with eight points and the Cataract City club in fifth position with six.

Three games are scheduled for tomorrow with Goodyears travelling to Niagara Falls; Brantford at Port Colborne, and Oshawa at St. Catharines.

TWO BIG NAMES IN UNCLE SAM'S ROSE BOWL GAME

When the annual "bowl madness" descends over the land of our neighbors to the south on January 2, much of the interest will be centred on this pair, co-captains and keystones in the plans of Duke University, opponents of Southern California in the biggest of the bowl games, the Rose Bowl affair at Los Angeles. Dan Hill, as you might guess from his position, is snapback with the unbeaten, untied and unscored on Duke squad, while back there receiving the ball is Eric Tipton, right halfback and proclaimed just about the best hoofer in college circles. The Trojans' jobs will be to stop these lads performing in their usually masterly style.

REDMEN DEFEAT R.C.A.F. FLYERS AT KINGSTON 2-1

Cy Barriage and Clayton Jackson Were the Marksmen

PLAYOFFS TO START

Redmen Play Sudden Death Game With Queens on Monday

The Belleville "Redmen" continued their winning ways in the Van Horne series when they defeated their ancient rivals, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" by a score of 2 to 1 in the final game of the loop series to elevate themselves into a tie with the Garrison "Soldiers" for the leadership last night at the Jock Harty arena in Kingston. In victory the "Redmen" not only defeated their ice enemies, but they assured themselves of a top-notch play-off berth.

Augmented with the services of "Larry" Goyer, former Belleville puckster, the "Redmen" adopted the style of play of their adversaries to score at the most advantageous points. Flashing the style of hockey for which he was noted, Goyer, coupled with the superb work of the Jackson brothers, materially assisted the winning efforts of the "Redmen." For the "Airmen" McNeeley, Lecompte and Baldwin looked the best. The Belleville squad was led at all times on the offensive by the Jackson-Barriage attacks with Bentley and St. Louis carrying the bulk of the rear-guard work. The star of the pastime, was Ken Watt, the Belleville net custodian, whose work at times bordered on the sensational.

Cy Barriage with uncanny stickhandling ability, weaved his way through a forest of "Air Force" sticks to score the initial and only goal of the first period. The "Flyers" evened the count early in the middle section, when Legris rammed home Lecompte's passout early in the frame. Heavy checking marked the period until the Jackson kids broke away at the last minutes and combined to score what proved the winning goal and put the "Redmen" into a tie for first place.

The game was exceedingly clean only one penalty being handed out during the pastime.

1st period:

Wrestling Last Night

PLAYING A STANDOUT GAME

Frank Brimsek, sensational rookie with Boston Bruins, has been catching most of the goal-minding headlines so far this hockey season, but another party who's turning in all-star performances is Walter (Turk) Broda (ABOVE), cage custodian with Toronto Maple Leafs. Other than Brimsek, the Turk is the only goalie with an average of less than two goals per game counted against him, and is but one behind his Boston rival in the matter of shutouts, the count being five to six. Last night (Tuesday) the Maple Leafs lost to Boston Bruins by the score of 8-2.

Sports Roundup

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Is this the old Malarkey or is Dan Hill, Duke's centre and co-captain, really hurt?....If he is, Southern Cal's chances are that much better in the Rose Bowl for Dan'l can play a lot of centre....Turk Broda, the Toronto Maple Leaf's goalie, staging a real comeback....Turk has turned in five shutouts, a fact generally overlooked in the hoopla over Frankie Brimsek's inspired net minding .... Tommy Farr who trained for every other American fight in the healthy and expensive air of Pompton Lakes, N. J., is training for his meeting with Red Burman at Stillman's gym which is as private as a park bench.

The Yankees have three prospects—in addition to outfielder Tom Henrich—For Lou Gehrig's first base post, when and if the great man knocks off..One is Eddie Levy who is to play first at Newark, another is Johnny Sturm going to Kansas City to replace Harry Davis, who is on the market, and the third is Fred Collins, a converted left handed pitcher....If tradition means anything Collins should be the best bet.

Gehrig and the great George Sisler were left handed hurlers before they went straight....Archie San Romani, who aims to win back his position as one of America's great milers this winter, is getting plenty of help from his six-months-old daughter Amelia .... She hits the hay at 7 p.m. and plays shuteye till 6 a.m. which gives pop plenty of rest, too.

Latest story on Zeke Bonura, New York Giants' new first baseman, is that Zeke, after a tryout with Cleveland, wanted to take some presents home for his kid brother.. Charles Davis, the Indians' trainer, suggested balloons.... "How'm I gonna get 'em in a suitcase," inquired Zeke....Cincinnati Reds, who fostered night baseball in the Majors, will make no effort to increase their quota of night games ....On the theory under which restaurants recommend their patrons do not eat too much grub, as the results aren't as satisfactory as when the delectables are taken in the proper quantities.

Vinnie Richards, the old "boy wonder" of the tennis courts doesn't think Don Budge will be able to lick Elly Vines consistently if "Vines really wants to play tennis"....He even thinks Vines is better than Tilden when the lanky Californian is at the top of his game.

THE AD. DEPT.

We have been too busy the past several weeks to take time to concoct the usual amount of effusions which usually appear each week in this column. Even at that we believe if some of our regular advertisers had not thrown us down by holding back their copy.

The Stop 'n' Shop procastinated to the extent that we were seriously handicapped this week, making it necessary for us to travel breakneck speed in order to get the paper to our readers at the usual time. Although his advertisement in this particular issue is not very large, Socrates Scearce had to lag behind, which in a proportinate way added to our troubles. By the way, can it be possible we have finally got that bird's goat? — The Roman (Montana) Pioneer.

BOSS BILL TERRY OF N. Y. GIANTS A REAL GAMBLER

Many Changes in Personnel of Team Engineered by Terry

DEPEND ON HURLERS

Hubble and Schumacher Relied on to Give Impetus to Team

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—A great number of uncomplimentary things have been said and written about boss Bill Terry of the baseball Giants but from here on no man will ever accuse Bill of not being a gambler. At least, it will have to be admitted Terry is willing to play them high wide and handsome as long as another man supplies the blue chips.

Charles Stoneham, youthful President of the Giants, is buying the chips, and he has good reason to believe in Terry's judgment. Still, after looking over the list of 30 players who have been mailed 1939 contracts by the Giants, here's one bet that Stoneham is more uneasy than he looks.

If Terry has guessed wrong, and unless he gets more breaks than the law allows, the Giants are likely as not to tumble as far down as fifth place in the next National League race. They have no margin of safety.

Hurlers Must Come Through

First, Terry is staking the works on the recovery of his two key pitchers, Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher, from operations on their salary arms last fall. There is no guarantee that either will be back with anything like his former ability, and the odds are prohibitive against both making the grade.

That leaves Terry with one topnotch starting pitcher, Cliff Melton, and Cliff was no ball of fire last year. The mound staff has only one new man, Manuel Salvo, who won 22 games for San Diego last season. He can't be counted upon to do that in the National League.

Whitehead Relied On

Next, Terry is counting on Burgess Whitehead to return after a year's convalescence from an operation and play second base like he used to. Maybe he will, but many baseball men doubt it. If he doesn't Alex Kampouris will have to take over the job, and Alex couldn't satisfy Terry last year.

The biggest gamble of all is on Zeke Bonura's ability to play first base acceptably. The Giants got the big New Orleans boy, from Washington after he had been waved out of the American League. It seems impossible that eight American League managers could have been completely mistaken.

Terry is counting upon Bonura to drive in a wagon-load of runs, which he doubtless will, but men who have been playing with and against him vow that Zeke will let an equal number of runs on balls that go whizzing past him. Zeke simply covers a minimum of territory.

Gamble on Demaree

In his three-cornered deal with the Cubs, Terry got Frank Demaree to play centrefield, gambling that the Californian will get his legs back in shape and shake off the slump that gripped him last season. To get him, Terry had to turn loose Hank Leiber, who for years has been the apple of President Stoneham's eye. There may be some strained relations next summer if Demaree should flop and Leiber begin pounding the ball like he did in 1935.

At third base Terry is putting his trust in George Myatt, who is a great base runner, but can't hit a lick and has difficulty throwing as far as first base. With Bonura on first, this latter failing will be pretty serious.

Outside of all that, Terry won't really have a thing to worry about. He has good men in catcher Harry Danning, shortstop Bill Jurges and outfielders Mel Ott and Joe Moore.

ON THE GRIDDLE

Since the first scoring records of the season were issued some weeks ago by the National League the constant leader has been the veteran Chicago Black Hawk stickhandling ace, Johnny Gottselig. (ABOVE). Johnny still heads the circuit's marksmen, but he may be in for a bit of trouble with the league governors after pushing around Referee Campbell in the Christmas night game against the Americans in New York. Campbell is reported to be taking the case up with league president Frank Calder.

NO RELIEF FROM COLD PROMISED

Forecaster Says Weather in West Will be "Very Cold"

Winnipeg, Dec. 29—(CP)—Bitter Arctic winds spread across the Prairies today, fifth day of the current cold wave. No relief was forecast.

Far below zero temperatures were recorded as the icy winds whipped in from the north. And from the previous 24-hour forecast of "decidedly cold" the weather forecaster changed to "very cold" his prediction for today.

Storm deaths totalled two, both men who died in the Christmas eve blizzard, the start of the present cold snap. The storm claimed the life of J. O. Johnson, found dead near Hanley, Sask. W. H. Fraser, died near Nanton, Alta. His body was found in a snowdrift Christmas Day.

Edmonton, which held the all-Canada record of an official 44 below zero and an unofficial reading of minus 55 yesterday, was "a bit warmer". The official temperature was 32 below in Alberta's capital last night. The Winnipeg minimum was 24 and Prince Albert in Saskatchewan's cold spot at 42.

It was cold in British Columbia as highway workers sought to keep roadways open after a heavy snow and sleet storm. At Prince George the low reading was 38 below.

PRACTICALLY ALL ROADS NOW OPEN

Cutters and Sleighs Used to Traverse County Roads

(By The Canadian Press)

Cutters and sleighs traversed county roads today and provincial highways department snow equipment cleared the last of the heavy drifts on main traffic arteries as Ontario emerged from beneath the effects of its worst blizzard in years.

Villages in Western Ontario, cut off from principal food supplies after many feet of snow came piling down on Tuesday, were supplied with milk and bread by sleigh today. Only n the Owen Sound and Durham district were main highways still blocked. Villagers in the neighborhood of Orangeville said they were content to await snowploughs after bread, milk and other necessities were brought through by sleigh yesterday.

Death Toll of Five

A death toll of five, and possibly six, was counted in Ontario after the storm. Two men died at London of heart attacks suffered as high winds swept the streets and another at Toronto of injuries suffered when he fell on a city street.

Near Lucknow, 20 miles northeast of Goderich and in the heart of one of the most seriously affected areas, an unidentified man was found frozen to death on a sideroad. Fifteen miles south at Clinton, Henry J. Fremlin, 68, was reported missing after the storm but his description did not tally with that of the man whose body was found near Lucknow.

It was feared Fremlin, a church caretaker, might have become lost in the blinding snow and been buried in a snowdrift. At St. Mary's another church caretaker, George Yardley, died of a heart attack, attributed to exertion in the gale.

Drug Addicts Make Worst Class of Thieves

Detroit, Dec. 29 (CP)—Insanity decreased during depression times but the number of persons committing suicide increased, Dean Ernest R. Mowrer of Northwestern University has discovered. He informed the criminology section of the American Sociological Society in session here today of recent studies of the by-products of depressions.

Professor Edward O. Jandy of Wayne University reported drug addicts make up the worst class of thieves. He said the 500 criminal drug addicts in Detroit steal $2,500 a day to help buy $3,000 worth of drugs they need a day.

The University of California has a new flea laboratory, where fleas will enjoy air conditioning while scientists study the flea's role in carrying sylvatic plague.

CINEMA STAR IS SUICIDE VICTIM

Florence Lawrence Born in Hamilton, Takes Poison in Her Home

Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 29 — (AP)—Florence Lawrence, 52, the original "Biograph Girl" of the early day screen, was listed as a suicide in police records today.

Unable to regain her health, the Canadian born actress said in a farewell note, she swallowed poison yesterday at her Westbourne Drive home.

Her passing followed by a few hours the funeral of Harry Myers, once a top comedian, who died of pneumonia Christmas Day.

"I'm tired," Miss Lawrence wrote. "Hope this works. They can't cure me, so let it go at that. Lovingly, Florence."

A postscript to "Bob", a studio worker who, with his sister, shared the actress' home, said: "You've all been swell guys. Everything is yours."

D. Lester Laurian said he had been treating her for 18 months for a bone disease which produces anaemia and depression.

31 Years in Pictures

In was in 1907, 31 years ago, that Miss Lawrence entered motion pictures. She had made her stage debut at the age of six as "Baby Flo, the Child Wonder."

She was born in Hamilton, Ont., just 40 miles from the Toronto birthplace of Mary Pickford, who succeeded her as the "Biograph Girl."

At Carle Laemmle, Sr.'s Pioneer Imp studio she starred in many celluloid dramas, later working for him again at Universal Studios with Miss Pickford, Lillian and Dorothy Gish and other celebrities of the era.

Accident Blights Career

In 1915 an accident blighted her career. She was playing in a fire scene with Matt Moore when the flames got out of hand. She could have escaped easily but she stopped to help Moore who had been overcome by smoke. A prop stairway collapsed and Miss Lawrence suffered a fractured spine as well as burns which scarred her face

When she returned to the screen, D. W. Griffith's invention of the closeup reduced her to "bit" parts.

58 Applications For Presentation At Court Refused

London, Dec. 29 (AP)—The dreams of nearly three score young women of being presented at Court in 1939 were reported dashed today—because they, in effect, tried to "buy their way in."

The Lord Chamberlain, The Daily Mail said, has decided to reject 58 applications for presentation on the grounds the applicants paid hard-pressed Peeresses to sponsor them.

The entire procedure for presentation is being changed radically because of what has been described as "presentation for private gain." More than a few purse-poor Peeresses sponsor London seasons for socially ambitious women in return for cash. Titled women run "blind" want ads in London papers almost daily in quest of someone to sponsor.

In an effort to stamp out this practice, the Lord Chamberlain's office this year has made an unusually rigid investigation of applications—resulting in the prospective wholesale refusals.

No applications for presentations at 1939 Courts will be considered after next Monday. A number of Peeresses then will be informed their applications have been rejected—but the letters will be politely phrased and will contain no slurs.

No dates have been set yet for the 1939 Courts. Two probably will be held in the spring before the King and Queen visit Canada and two others during the summer after their return.

BRITAIN PROTSTS SEIZURE

London, Dec. 29 (CP Cable)— A protest was sent by the British government today to the Spanish Insurgent refime regarding the detention of the Greek steamship Atlas at Palma, Mallorca.

Part of the vessel's 10,000-pound petroleum cargo is owned by British interests and most of it is insured in this country. The ship, said to be out of Batum, Russia, and bound for London, was seized in the Mediterranean yesterday.

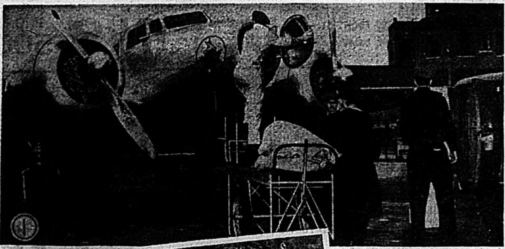
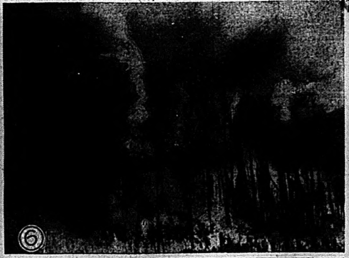
Larsen, his wife, daughter and crew of 17 were taken from the doomed vessel in the nick of time and brought to New York.

ELEVEN PERSONS INJURED AS BLIZZARDS BLOCK ONTARIO HIGHWAYS

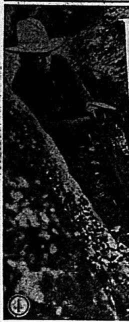
Eleven persons were injured, five of them seriously, when two automobiles, three trucks and a bus were involved in one of the worst accidents of the Niagara peninsula, during a blinding snow storm. The accident occurred five miles west of Niagara Falls, Ont., when an oil company's truck skidded on the icy pavement and nose-dived into the ditch, leaving the tanker spread across the highway. Coming along shortly afterwards a truck pulled up just behind the tanker only to be struck by two automobiles, followed closely by another oil tanker. An eight-ton Detroit bound bus swerved into the six-foot ditch to avoid running over passengers of the two automobiles who were hurled to the pavement following the crash. The 21 passengers aboard the bus received minor cuts and bruises and were loud in their praise for the bus driver, who averted a much more serious accident by swerving into the ditch.

Canadian Headlines Of 1938 In Pictures





News stories originating in eastern, western and northern Canada have combined to make 1938 one of the greatest news years in the history of Canada. Some of the events, interesting and affecting a large majority of Canadian people, are depicted, ABOVE, in pictorial form. 1.—Aviation in Canada made great strides in 1938 with the opening of regular airmail service between Montreal and Winnipeg via Trans-Canada Airlines, and the awarding of contracts ,to Canadian airplane manufacturers, for the manufacture of bombing planes for the Royal Air Force, by the British Government. 2.—With the resignation of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Canada lost one of her ablest statesmen. 3.—The Conservative Party acquired a new leader when Dr. R. J. Mamon was elected to fill the vacancy created by Mr. Bennett's retirement. 4.—The death of Daniel G. Dodge, young heir to part of the Dodge automobile fortune and bridegroom of thirteen days, who died following an explosion of dynamite at his summer home, Gore Bay, Ontario. 5.—This picture of Prime Minister King and Premier Hepburn of Ontario was taken before the open warfare between the two Liberal Party leaders turned them into bitter enemies. Charges that Premier Hepburn and Premier Duplessis, of Quebec, conspired to oust Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King from the Federal leadership of the Liberal Party caused an open split between Provincial and Federal Liberals. 6.—Devastating forest fires, sweeping the Thunder Bay area in the vicinity of Fort Frances, made scores of settlers homeless and caused millions of dollars worth of damage to valuable timber lands. 7.—Another bond of friendship between Canada and the United States was forged, when Prime Minister King and President Roosevelt officiated at the opening of the Thousand Islands bridge, linking Ivy Lea, Ontario, with Collins Landing, N.Y.



The activities of miners, churchmen, aviators and statesmen provided Canada with some of its most colorful news stories during 1938. 1.—The Yellowknife gold strike attracted Dominion-wide interest and sent scores of prospectors scurrying into the remote corners of Canada's great northwest. 2.—The First International Eucharistic Congress ever to be held in Canada attracted more than 100,000 persons to the picturesque and historic old city of Quebec. 3.—Fire which swept the Sacred Heart College at St. Hyacinthe, Que., taking a toll of 46 lives, will go down as one of the great disasters to mar 1938. 4.—The landing of the Mercury, upper half of the composite flying boat Maia, at Montreal after a flight from Foynes, Ireland, marked one of the year's greatest aviation feats. 5. and 6.—Twenty miners lost their lives at a mine disaster at the Princess Colliery, Sydney Mines, N.S., when a haulage cable broke and allowed a "man-rake" to hurtle down a mile-and-a-quarter incline with 250 miners aboard. 7.—The famous Niagara Falls honeymoon bridge fell victim to ice jams and was completely wrecked by gigantic blocks. 8.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King was greeted by United States Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, when he arrived in Washington for the signing of the new United States-Canadian trade pact.

IT MUST HAVE BEEN A GOOD ONE

It is to be hoped that the joke isn't on the taxpayer as U.S. Vice-President John Nance Garner (LEFT), and William Bankhead, Speaker of the House of Representatives, get together for an informal pow-wow in the vice-president's office. In any event Speaker Bankhead apparently gets the point of the story.

GAINS HIGHER ALIMONY

ALMA ALDERMAN, 26-year-old first wife of Myrl Alderman, now married to blues singer Ruth Etting, was granted an alimony increase from $30 to $65 a month for support of her 14-months-old baby. She told the Los Angeles court she had pawned her watch and engagement ring so the baby could have a Christmas.

GERMAN NEWSPAPERMEN ABSENT AS CHAMBERLAIN CASTIGATED GERMAN PRESS

A few striking poses of Premier Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain as he delivered his famous speech at the annual dinner of the Foreign Press Association in London, during which he castigated the German government-controlled press for its abuse of British statesmen. The Premier also warned the Reich that Britain had the arms and the money to give a good account of herself if necessary. The dinner was shunned by German press correspondents, believed to have received their orders direct from Berlin.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—Services were held on Christmas Day in St. Mark's Church at 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m., both services being conducted by the rector, Canon W. G. Swayne. At the evening service many carols and Christmas hymns were sung and the choir rendered the anthem "The first Christmas morn." Both services were well attended. The church was beautifully decorated. The cut flowers on the altar were a gift from the Womens' Auxiliary.

A splendid school concert was given by the pupils of School Section No. 5 under the direction of Miss Leola Pollock, teacher, in the school house here on Wednesday evening last. There was a good attendanct and the various numbers were heartily applauded. Santa Claus appeared on the scene near the end of the program and distributed gifts from the Christmas tree to all the pupils. Trustee M. R. Neal acted as chairman. The school house was decorated with evergreens and Christmas decorations and looked beautiful. The proceeds amounted to over $10.00.

Ancient Greeks and Romans made safety pins with point protectors.

"BOUNCING" BERTHA

BERTHA SYBERT, 9, appeared as her own sweet self, unbothered by "spirits", when this photograph was taken in her home at St. Charles, Va. No sooner does her head touch a pillow, however, than do the reputed "spirits" get to work, and for some unknown reason keep Bertha "bouncing" around in her bed the long night through. Her father believes his daughter bewitched, as do the townsfolk, and especially two 190-pound farmers, who claim that the 'spirit" bounced them right off Bertha's bed.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 29 (AP)—Buyers climbed aboard aircrafts and rails in today's stock market and leading issues extended Wednesday's rally by fractions to more than two points, a number hitting new highs for the year.

Steels, motors and utilities, after a hesitant start, came to the fore near the final hour. Profit taking occasionally chipped down top marks but at the approach of the closing period favorites were around best levels of the day. The turnover was about 1,800,000 shares.

TWO TRUCKS AND CAR CONSIDERABLY DAM AGED

Two trucks and a car were considerably damaged at the corner of Catherine and Coleman Streets shortly after noon today when the latter driven by Robert Chesher, of the O.S.D. skidded on the icy pavement striking a truck driven by Charles Knight, Foxboro, the force of the impact throwing the rear of the car in the path of an approaching truck owned by C. E. Bishop and Son, Front Street.

While the Chesher car received the brunt of the damage, both trucks received considerable "injury" through the accident.

Plainclothesman Fred Isard investigated the affair.

MURDER ATTEMPT CHARGE IS LAID

"Ike" Neal of Marmora is Alleged to Have Assaulted Chinaman

Upon instructions from County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., today, County Constable Percy Grey of Marmora, preferred a charge of attempted murder against 57-year-old Isaac "Ike" Neal, Marmora resident, who is now being held in the county jail on a charge of criminal assault. Neal was arrested on Dec. 10th, following an attack on Lem Lung, Chinese proprietor of the Glossy Cafe, in Marmora during which police say Neal struck Lem Lung over the head several times with a hammer.

Neal was arrested in his boarding house shortly after the restaurant-keeper had staggered to the street bleeding profusely from seven wounds and lacerations of the head following the alleged attack. Blood-stained clothes are said to have been found in Neal's private room.

Yesterday the blood - stained clothes of Lem Lung and also those of the accused Neal, along with the hammer, which police say was used in the attack, were all given into the custody of Dr. Frankish, Provincial Medico-legal expert, for professional examination looking into the blood stains.

Marmora police stated at the time of the attack, that Lem Lung said Neal had come into his restaurant and ordered food. It was while Lung was preparing the meal in the kitchen, that Neal is said to have attacked him with the hammer. Yesterday Lem Lung was released from the hospital, his head and face outwardly displaying several nasty wounds and scars.

Neal has been held in custody on a charge of criminal assault since the time of the crime, but after consulting with authorities yesterday, Crown Attorney Donnan ordered the charge elevated to that of attempted murder. Neal is being held without bail.

ITALY BALKED

ciated Press reported last night persons close to the government had indicated that when Prime Minister Chamberlain goes to Rome Jan. 11 he will ask Premier Mussolini to withdraw additional Italian troops from Spain and inform him he can not count on British neutrality in case of serious trouble with France in Africa.

The sudden and effective reappearance of Italian Blackshirts in the van of Insurgent General Franco's Catalonian offensive, and glorification of their exploits by the controlled Italian press have annoyed British officials, The Associated Press added.

Therefore, informed quarters were quoted as saying the Prime Minister will tell Il Duce that these events, together with his recent agitation in the Mediterranean, are contrary to the letter and spirit of both the European agreement for non-intervention in Spain and the Anglo-Italian accord on Mediterranean and Spanish questions which came into force Nov. 16.

Chamberlain Not to Intervene

London, Dec. 29 (CP-Havas) — Newspapers here agreed today that there was no question of Prime Minister Chamberlain offering, or agreeing, to intervene in the Italo-French conflict when he calls on Premier Mussolini at Rome next month.

"It will not be Mr. Chamberlain's purpose to bargain with Italy on behalf of France," wrote The Financial Times (Independent). "The situation in Spain will be reviewed at some length. The question of continued Italian intervention will be raised in the hope that Mussolini will agree to more effective enforcement of the non-intervention plan."

France Requires No Assistance

The diplomatic correspondent of The Daily Herald (Labor) wrote:

"Any question of British mediation in the dispute between France and Italy over Tunis, Corsica and —most important of all—Djibouti has been abandoned.

"Premier Mussolini, it is known, would like Mr. Chamberlain to assume the role of arbitrator during his visit to Rome. His reasoning is clearly that once Mr. Chamberlain is manoeuvred into the position of mediator he must suggest some contribution by France towards settlement of the problem. That in itself would drive a wedge into Anglo-French relations.

"The French government, however, has made it clear that it requires no assistance in its dealings with Italy. . . .

"As a result of this firm attitude of France Mr. Chamberlain has decided not to permit the Franco-Italian situation into his talks with Mussolini."

NO PEACE FORESEEN FOR ORIENT IN 1939

(Copyright 1938 by the Havas News Agency)

Shanghai, Dec. 29—(CP—Havas) —There has been no peace in the Far East in 1938 and there is likely to be none in 1939, observers here say in comment on events of the past 12 months.

After slow and costly campaigns stretching over 18 months, Japan today counts as conquered China's coasts, its railways, its chief ports and cities and its major river valleys.

Driven into a shrinking hinterland, China is still fighting for its existence, while in the occupied territories roving armies of guerrillas challenge the invader's rule.

Butter, Egg Prices Firm

Toronto, Dec. 29.—A slightly firmer tone was displayed by both butter and eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Cheese showed little change.

While buying was not heavy on the butter market, the steady demand for small lots was sufficient to keep the light offerings fairly well cleared. One car of the western product was reported sold for shipment early in the session at 21¼c, but another bid at this figure was rejected and holders were asking 21½c. Ontario creamery solids firmed to 21¼c for No. 1 grades.

Fresh receipts arrived in lighter volume on the egg market as a result of the present weather conditions. Demand was fair for all grades, with the possible exception of grade A-large, and offerings were clearing more readily at the unchanged prices. Graded shipments sold for 31c for grade A-large, 28c for medium, 27c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C grades.

Butter Steady.

Montreal, Dec. 28 (CP)—Butter prices were steady with limited offerings, and cheese, eggs and potatoes quiet on Montreal open produce markets, according to Dominion Bureau of Agriculture reports.

Creamery butter prints to retailers were 22¼c to 23c and solids 21¾c to 22½c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33 cents a dozen for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 27c for A-pullets, 24c for B-large, 23c for B-medium and 22c for C.

BODY FOUND ON ROAD

Brantford, Ont., Dec. 29 (CP)—Believed victim of a hit-and-run motorist, the body of an unidentified youth was found today on the Oakland-Wilsonville section of highway No. 24 (Brantford to Port Dover). There is a possibility that he is from Boston.

The body was taken to Scotland, in Brant County, but will be removed to Simcoe, the accident having taken place in Norfolk County.

BLOWN TO SEA IN FOLDING BOAT

R. J. O. Bray Meets Death in Channel—Companion Tells Story

(The following despatch was written for The Canadian Press by Patrick Baird, young British Scientist, who was with R. J. O. Bray when the 28-year-old Ornithologist was drowned in Foxe Channel last September.)

(By Patrick Baird. Copyright, 1938, By The Canadian Press)

Repulse Bay, N.W.T., Dec. 29 — (Via Transport Department Radio) —R. J. O. Bray, my companion investigator of Arctic bird life, was blown to sea in a folding boat and disappeared 200 miles north of here on Sept. 14 last.

The accident occurred about 40 miles south of Igloolik, on the northern tip of Melville Peninsula, 200 miles within the Arctic Circle.

Rescue Attempt Fails

Bray and I were alone at the time. He was carried out to sea. I had stayed on shore. When I saw his predicament, I attempted to go to his rescue in a whale boat but was too late. He was swept out to sea and vanished.

I went at once north to Igloolik with some Eskimos and then sledged south with them to here, where I had the first opportunity to radio news of Bray's disappearance.

Word of Bray's mishap was first relayed from Churchill, Man., Tuesday night. It was then reported Bray and Baird had been thrown into the icy waters of Foxe Channel, 850 miles north of Churchill, when their 29-foot boat was crushed by shifting ice. The accident was reported as occurring at Igloolik.

First report also credited an unnamed Eskimo with making the long, difficult trip from Igloolik to Repulse Bay alone to bring news of young Bray's disappearance. Baird reports he also made the trip.

'Peaceful New Year' Is Message Of Chamberlain

London, Dec. 29 (CP-Havas)—"I hope everybody will have a peaceful and happy New Year," Prime Minister Chamberlain declared today when he was asked by newspapermen for a New Year message.

The Prime Minister delivered his brief message as he and Mrs. Chamberlain left Downing street for Harrogate where they will spend the New Year holiday and most of next week as guests of Viscount Swinton, former Air Secretary, and Viscountess Swinton.

Earlier today Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain arrived at 10 Downing street after passing Christmas at Chequers.

Ratepayers to Consider Building of New School Near Old Rubber Plant

Construction of a new school in Irishtown, in the vicinity of the old rubber plant west of the city, to serve pupils of School Section No. 2, Sidney, will be seriously considered at a special meeting of ratepayers of Section 2, Sidney to be held in Bayside School on the afternoon of January 16th.

The new school will divide the present attendance at Avondale School on the Trent Road where 70 pupils are being taught in accommodation normally limited to about forty.

LOW WAGE CLASS SHOWS MOST UNEMPLOYMENT

Detroit, Dec. 29—(CP)—Half of Canada's wage earners receive 80 per cent of the National Wage Bill, and the low wage class shows the heaviest unemployment, R. H. Coats Dominion Statistician, told the American Statistical Association here last night. Mr. Coats delivered his presidential address at the centennial banquet of the organization and recalled that in its 100 years of the Association's existence this year marked the only occasion on which a Canadian had held that post.

His address emphasized the value of statistics to all phases of social activity. Statistics, he said, had long been the handmaid of the exact sciences, apprenticed in the scullery, but now promoted to housekeeper, "eating with the family."

BANK MANAGER RELEASED BY ARABS WHEN RANSOM PAID

Jerusalem, Dec. 29—(AP)—Louis de Bouvier, British manager of the Ottoman Bank, missing since Monday, arrived her today unharmed and said an Arab band held him for ransom until friends paid for his release.

De Bouvier, who is fluent in Arabic, brought home a "passport" assuring him of safe passage. It was signed by the widely-known chieftain Suleiman.

De Bouvier said his captors quarrelled over whether to shoot him but the biggest squabble was over the dress clothes found in his luggage. It ended with one Arab wearing his patent-leather shoes and another his dinner jacket and strutting before their comrades.

The amount of the ransom was not disclosed.

Espionage

By FLORENCE SALISBURY

It was just nine o'clock when Helen, with a small valise in her hand, stepped buoyantly from the elevator to the sixth floor of a down-town building. As a matter of habit she glanced at the window opposite. Certain enough, there sat old Jim in his customary place, reading the paper and waiting for her to open up the office.

He was a stupid looking person with round shoulders and feet that scuffled. With half-closed eyes and an open mouth he would listen when spoken to and usually reply with a "Yeh." His connection with Mr. Henda's office was nothing more than "ornamental." Occasionally, however, if Helen and Henda were out, he would attempt to take a telephone message — which never proved a valuble aid, for he either misunderstood what was said ,or failed to know who had called.

For a moment, as Helen turned the key in the lock, she faintly sensed the strangeness of Jim's having been so eagerly during the past two weeks. But the feeling swiftly faded into nothingness. She was completely unconscious of plotting of any kind.

Mr. Henda was a bachelor, a little past forty. It could very easily be seen why he had remained in a state of single blessedness and why, in all probability, he would remain single the rest of his life. Certain points in his character put him at a disadvantage. To the fair sex his most objectionable trait was his miserliness. This quality displayed itself in his countenance, mainly around his eyes that were cold and calculating. To be sure, he always paid his bills, though somewhat tardily, but was very careful in involving nothing but the most necessary expenses.

From the time of Helen's first day at the office, Henda had set his mind on winning her. But her manner was merely courteous, nothing more, and he finally resigned himself to the fact that she did not care for him.

Suspicion and jealousy were also in his makeup. That was why he had had old Jim come in early for the past two weeks. He, himself, never arrived much before noon. Lou Ward a pleasant, attractive young man, was the object of his suspicion. This gentleman usually made a call at the office during the morning to see Henda. If he was not there, which was usually the case, Ward would set down to wait a while and talk with Helen in the meantime.

Such a thing as a romance in his office, unless he was concerned, was not going to be allowed. So Jim had been instructed to sit in the inner office and keep his ears open. Up until this particular day Jim had been unable to report anything of interest to Henda.

About noontime, Helen's employer came blustering into the office with his customary agitation. Helen had gone out to lunch and Jim sat in the inner office.

"Has Mr. Ward been in, Jim?"

"Yeh."

"What was the line of talk today?"

"They were talking of eloping tonight. He's going to call here at the office for her."

"Indeed! You don't say."

The clock on the nearby church had struck four and still Henda made no motion toward going home. His customary time of departure was 3.30. Alternately, he paced the floor, thinking what he would say to Ward when he came in, and rocked to and fro in the swivel chair, tapping the floor with his feet. He eyed Helen constantly, which made her very nervous. Her uneasiness he believed was due to her fears that he might have learned of what was to take place. Presently he thought of making some remark to startle her.

"Ah-ha," he said, eyeing the valise, "a suitcase. You must be going to elope, Miss Blake."

"Nothing like that," replied the girl, quietly.

Such calmness in lying was appalling, thought Henda. Well, he would try again. He remembered Helen had told him some time ago she was to take part in a play that night. That, of course, must have been arranged before she had ever thought of eloping.

"I hope you'll do well in the play tonight, Miss Blake," he ventured.

"Thank you," smiled Helen, "Mr. Ward's identical words."

Henda paused a moment, picking his finger nails.

"Is that what he said?"

"Yes," replied Helen indifferently.

Henda strode over to the closet and slipped on his coat.

"Tell Jim he had better keep out of my sight tomorrow," he declared, as he yanked on a pair of gloves. Helen looked puzzled but no explanation was offered.

"I will, she said. "Good night, Mr. Henda."

TO MAKE 2,500 MILE CRUISE IN OUTRIGGER CANOE

In this 32-foot outrigger canoe a crew of three are planning to cruise between the American territory of Hawaii and Samoa, a 2,500 mile ocean voyage, the first trip of its kind in modern times. Clearance papers for the oceanic adventure have been issued by J. Walter Doyle U.S. collector of customs at Honolulu. The adventurers plan only one stop, on Fanning Island, in their 2,500-mile cruise. The crew consists of U. A. Woodbury, 2nd, of Burlington, Vt.; Don Hall, of Long Beach, Calif.; and Charles Kern, of Pawtucket, R. I. They expect to make the trip in about 20 days.

FOOD SHORTAGE FEARED AFTER ONTARIO BLIZZARD

Scores of Ontario towns were completely isolated following the worst blizzard to hit the province in recent years. Hundreds of citizens began digging themselves out from under the blanket of snow which, driven by heavy gales formed drifts similar to these in the main street of Orangeville. Grave fears were felt that a serious food shortage might result in isolated sections of the province as highways were impassable and train service disrupted.

Gifts Go From the Palace

London.—In almost all walks of English life you will come across persons who regularly receive Christmas gifts from the British royal family. But it is not so easy to find a person who has the distinction of presenting a gift to Buckingham Palace or Windsor Castle, official residences of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, and having it accepted.

While the British rulers' generosity extends over a wide area during the Christmas season, the number of gifts which they themselves accept is limited. It is limited by themselves. From the thousands of packages which pour into the royal palaces almost daily from tradesmen, citizens well - wishers from afar, persons who have received kindnesses at the hands of British royalty, only a few are accepted. Some are passed on to members of the household. Most are returned. Only those who can truly be considered as personal gifts are kept within the royal circle.

The royal family may be internationally known and able to command gifts from all quarters, but King George and Queen Elizabeth treat their gifts too seriously to accept them without moderation, as they might well do if they wished.

x x x

In recent weeks the "gift" department at Buckingham Palace, King George's London residence, has been busily employed returning many thousands of packages addressed to the King and Queen, containing cigars, cigarettes, smokers' requisites and of numerous other samples sent by firms in the hope of gaining royal patronage during the Christmas season.

Many of the samples are inexpensive. A clerk enters details of the goods received in a special ledger, and the more valuable packages are set aside to be returned with a polite note of refusal. Some of the less valuable items, although not accepted by the royal family, are distributed among the palace servants. An official of the household recently said that the value of samples received by the King and Queen in a year was approximately $150,000. Packages for Queen Elizabeth contain beautiful toilet articles fancy goods and ornaments. King George's "sample mail" includes, besides smoking materials, articles calculated to appeal to his sporting nature.

A palace official recently said that the supplies of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco received by the King during a year would, if retained, be large enough to satisfy the smoking needs of several reigns. In one week last year 5,000 brands of cigars were addressed to the King. Many were in silver boxes and ivory caskets, but all were returned to the senders with notes of thanks.

Other members of the royal family also receive, addressed to them personally, various presents and "samples." These invariably are returned.

As far as the presents which King George and Queen Elizabeth together with the two princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, select to give to relatives and friends, there is exacting personal attention, right from the first choice to the addressing of the label.

x x x

Their Majesties, like King George V and Queen Mary before them, make their preparations for Christmas well in advance. Already some London stores have been requested to forward to Buckingham Palace a display of suitable gifts for selection. The King and Queen make out separate gift lists, then compare them to avoid duplication.

King George usually selects 250 gifts, Queen Elizabeth and the two princesses more than 1,000, and the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and the Duke and Duchess of Kent nearly 200 each.

This year Princess Elizabeth plans to present to several of her friends calendars bearing photographs taken by herself with a new camera. Other friends of the princesses will receive miniature Christmas puddings made by Britain's prospective Queen.

x x x

Distribution of the royal gifts takes place on Christmas morning. Accompanying each present is a greeting card or short note written in the King's own hand. The gifts are packed in artistic boxes and paper; the Queen herself designs many of the wrappings.

As in former years, the King and Queen together with Princess Elizabeth and Queen Mary, will pass this Christmas at Sandringham, beloved home of King George V. There will be the usual Christmas tree cut on the Sandringham estate, and the princesses will entertain a small party.—By Frank Williams in Hamilton Spectator.

At The Theatres

AT THE BELLE

"The Citadel"

"The Citadel," based on the novel by Dr. A. J. Cronin, has been brought to the screen in a notable picture which is on the Belle screen.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer produced this film at its British studio in Denham, England, with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the leading roles. A cast of more than one hundred players appears in support, principal among them the well-known English players Ralph Richardson, Rex Harrison, Emlyn Williams and Penelope Dudley-Ward.

The dramatic story of a young and obscure physician in the Welsh collieries is revealed on the screen with all the emotional power of Cronin's outstanding novel. A whole village was reconstructed for one sequence and the depths of a coal mine are shown in another. When the mine collapses, Donat descends into the pit in one of the most thrilling scenes filmed.

The surgeon's fight to retain his ethical code, his love for the schoolmistress and their marriage, followed by their struggles together in adversity and wealth, combine to form a work rich in emotional and dramatic intensity. King Vidor's direction comes close to perfection.

"Donald Duck" cartoon Walt Disney's newest Donald Duck comicolor cartoon, "Fox Hunt," and a funny Robert Benchley comedy "How to Watch Football," precede the feature attraction.

Midnight Show

With a cast of high and low comedy experts, and what sounds like a hilariously funny idea for its main theme, "Thanks for Everything," 20th Century-Fox's latest prescription for what ails you, moves into the Belle Theatre for a special preview presentation.

Having made so many notable contributions to the entertainment of the average man, Darryl F. Zanuck, in charge of production for 20th Century-Fox, has now focused his camera batteries on Mister Average Man himself, who is of all things, the central character in "Thanks for Everything."

This Mister Average Man, according to the studio, is selected in a nation-wide contest, brought to New York with all expenses paid and with the expectation that he is to receive a first prize of $250,000—and is then promptly set upon by a couple of smart promoters, who see in his innocent countenance the shining light of a million-dollar idea.

Jack Haley has the role of Mister Average Man, Adolphe Menjou and Jack Oakie are the promoters, while Arleen Whelan, Tony Martin and Binnie Barnes offer spirited support.

AT THE McCARTHY

"RIO GRANDE"

Scores of cowboys and riders of the plains bring riotous action thrills and outdoor adventure to the screen of the McCarthy Theatre, in the great western hit "Rio Grande."

The production stars none other than the present king of the screen's most popular western action heroes, Charles Starrett, surrounded by such favorites as Dick Curtis, Hank Bell and Bob Nolan.

Miss Ann Doran, newest among the screen's most popular cowgirl heroines has the distinction of becoming Charles Starrett's starring partner in "Rio Grande."

Three striking new western songs "The West Is My Soul", "Slumbertime On The Range", and "Old Broncho Pal", introduced in this production, makes "Rio Grande", not only a he-man action hit, but also appeals to lovers of popular western ballads. "Rio Grande" is not just a western picture, for nothing has been spared to make it one of this season's outstanding western productions, to be thoroughly enjoyed by adults as well as the boys and girls who love nothing better than a real western thriller.

Leon Errol Comedy

Leon Errol who has been frequently seen and enjoyed by all patrons, on the screen of the McCarthy theatre, returns in what we recommend as his best comedy featurette, entitled "The Jitters", a 20 minute comedy-scream. Also in addition to this, another chapter of the very entertaining serial "The Spider's Web", a screen vaudeville musical treat that will be enjoyed by everyone entitled, "The Carnival Show" and a Merry Melody technicolor laugh hit and it truly is (for laughing purposes only) entitled "A Feud There Was" balances a smash programme at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Fools for Scandal"

A riotous comedy with music and Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet—is "Fools for Scandal" as the feature presentation at the Capitol.

As if gorgeous Miss Lombard, she of the mad antics, were not enough, the picture should really teach the femme fans how to say . . . Fernand Gra-vay, (it's Gravet in the billing). The handsome French musical comedy star making his second American appearance—the first was in "The King and the Chorus Girl"—surprises his most ardent fans with a song routine that's well worth the price of admission alone.

Personally directed by Producer Mervyn LeRoy, the film fairly sparkles with wit, speed and fun throughout—a made-to-order mad cap formula for Miss Lombard and Gravet.

A swell score of music is by Rodgers and Hart, a pair that's penned many a hit tune. The two numbers in "Fools for Scandal" destined for equal popularity are "How Can You Forget" and "There's a Boy in Harlem" the latter part being part of the "Le Petit Harlem" cabaret sequence which was specially handled by Dance Director Bobby Connolly.

The story itself is a wow. Miss Lombard is an American movie star in Europe to see the sights. Gravet, an impoverished French baron who does not use his title because of a lack of coin of the realm, shows off his culinary ability for a gag at a party. The haughty actress offers him a job as her cook to embarrass him. He accepts after which the film continues its fast pace as Miss Lombard falls hopelessly in love with her aloof chef.

The programme is rounded off with three very fine short subjects —A musical "Side Show Fakir", a sport reel "High, Wide and Dashing" and "Stranger Than Fiction".

Yesterday afternoon Manager "Wannie" Tyers of the Capitol presented his first in a series of Special Children's matinees. A goodly crowd of kiddies along with many adults turned out and were very enthusiastic over this program especially arranged for the young folk.

unceasing vigil in case Holubec and Vlaisevgevich are brought out alive.

A member or one of the four crews attempting to drill a passage to the men expressed doubt last night that they would be reached before tonight. Other rescue workers were without hope the stricken miners would be found alive.

Rescue Work in Shifts.

Rescue crews, working in half-hour shifts, pressed forward with still greater effort after the second blast showered them with rock. Both explosions occurred at about the same place, near the 2,700-foot level. Company officers estimated yesterday about 40 feet of rock and debris would have to be drilled to reach Holubec and Vlaisevgevich.

The two miners were working in the stope, or drift, sloping upwards from the 2,700-foot level when the explosion on the level below collapsed the stope. Fellow-workers near them suffered shock and were treated after being rushed to the surface.

A complete medical staff with an ambulance maintained a tireless vigil in case the men were brought out alive. Friends and fellow workers of the men who were not members of the rescue crew stood by in the mine office awaiting word of the rescue operations and ready to offer whatever help they could.

CHINA TO STAND FIRM

Chungking, Dec. 29—(CP-Havas) —"China will not capitulate!" General Chiang Kai-Shek said before the Kuomintang (government party) Assembly yesterday.

Chiang flatly rejected the peace plan outlined a few days ago by Premier Fumimaro Konoye of Japan which called for collaboration of Japan, China and Manchoukuo in an anti-Communist pact, among other provisions.

20 GOV'T PLANES ARE SHOT DOWN

Insurgent Land Drive, However, Slowed to Deadlock

Hendaye, France, Dec. 29—(AP)—An Insurgent communique boasted today 20 Government planes were shot down in the greatest air battle of the offensive into Catalonia.

Despite the aviation success, however, the Insurgent land drive slowed almost to deadlock. Gains reported were of minor consequence, although in six days Insurgents have claimed conquest of 380 odd square miles of territory.

The air battle was over land lines near the Albages - Borjas Blancas Road, 70 miles to the west of Barcelona.

24 Planes in Fleet

Twenty-four of General Franco's fastest fighting planes swooped down from a high altitude to a large Government fleet which Insurgent dispatches said consisted of 55 fighters and six bombers.

Land fighting in the area dwindled as the bombers dropped their explosives and headed for their base, leaving fast pursuit planes to fight it out.

Brief Government accounts said both German and Italian planes made up the Insurgent air squadron.

While soldiers of both sides watched and cheered, the two airfleets dove, wheeled and turned, spitting death until squadron leaders of both sides ordered ships still aloft back home. At the end of the battle, Insurgent dispatches said, 20 of the Government planes had crashed, some of them in flames.

CITIZENS HELP

Later, one of the occupants left the house to look for the gunmen and was assaulted by another gang. He suffered jaw and rib injuries.

A short time after the cigar store holdup, three armed bandits entered a small confectionery store in downtown Toronto, held up Mrs. Gertrude Marcus, widowed operator, and fled with $3.75 from the till.

Mrs. Marcus said she was afraid "they'll come back and kill me". She said that if "they will hold up a lone old woman at pistol-point they are capable of anything."

Forced Onto Floor.

In the cigar store robbery, Proprietor Bert Rosen and four customers were forced to lie on the floor, while the three bandits went through their pockets. Rosen was robbed of $102 and another man approximately $50. Police said $148 was found on Brown when he was searched.

Police are searching for Brown's car, believed used in the Rosen store robbery. Authorities also believe a fourth man was involved and that he escaped in the car. Two guns, allegedly used by the trio, were recovered by police. A red handkerchief was found near one of the guns.

The thugs backed from Rosen's store and fled north on foot. Brown was captured a few blocks later by Robert Stanley, a former amateur wrestler who pinioned his man with a flying tackle and held him until police arrived.

Jumped On Car.

Huen jumped on the running board of an automobile driven by Julius Sokoloff, Toronto. The motorist stopped his car and grappled with the man. Ernest Kratz, a taxi driver, came to his aid and allegedly wrested a gun from Huen. Sokoloff held Huen until police arrived.

Frank Cater, a police probation officer, saw the three men get out of a car before the robbery. He was suspicious and waited in the vicinity. A few minutes later the bandits fled with occupants of the store screaming "stop thief" and "holdup".

Cater took after two men and caught up with a man alleged to be Huen and held him. An instant later a man alleged to be Brown jammed a gun into Cater's back and told him to let Huen go or he would shoot. Police probationers are not armed and Cater complied.

Cater then blew his whistle and took up the chase again. Another probationer, George Tomlin, heard the whistle and joined the posse of citizens chasing the men.

Refused Request.

Cater was in the lead as the crowd closed in on Huen. Meanwhile, Stanley refused to give his prisoner into custody of Tomlin, dressed in nondescript clothing in line with his special duties in the downtown district. Stanley was finally persuaded that the poorly-dressed man was a police officer and turned over Brown.

Brown is alleged by police to be leader of an underworld gang who is wanted here on charges of armed robbery and for jumping a $3,000 bail warrant. He is also alleged to be wanted by Hamilton police on charges of shopbreaking.

Police said Brown escaped Dec. 14 when a companion, Frank Barnes, Hamilton, was taken into custody after a chase. Police were questioning them in connection with stolen radios as they sat in a car in downtown Toronto, when the men fled. Barnes was apprehended after a chase.

THE CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

LORD'S DAY ACT

Rt. Rev. A. R. Beverley, Toronto, Lord's Day Alliance president, headed the deputation. It was organized because of concern over a recent speech by Mr. Conant in which he urged liberalization of laws governing the Sabbath.

Early Break-up.

The Alliance deputation included representatives of labor organizations worried because some workers might lose their weekly day of rest should Sunday laws be radically changed.

Bishop Beverley, while Mr. Conant was making his reply to the deputation, interrupted to bring the hearing to a close by saying the Attorney-General's hearing was not very sympathetic and that unless Mr. Conant had something further to discuss, there was no use wasting time.

Mr. Conant said it would be impractical to send provincial police into the municipalities to enforce the Lord's Day Act as it now stood.

"As long as the present system continues, we can't do any more about enforcing the Sunday laws than we are doing at present."

Letter Read.

"I have been greatly impressed," Mr. Conant said, "with representations made me from one of the northern mining districts, containing the following statement:

"'Sunday is really the only day the miner has free. Consequently he is, in some respects, the victim of circumstances, as far as recreation is concerned. With a long winter ahead, he cannot see many hockey games as by the nature of his job he has to work on different shifts. In the summer the same thing applies to baseball and football, which, as you know, are two major sports in the Porcupine.

"'It is the general consensus that if some portion of Sunday were set aside for recreation it would develop a greater community interest and spirit among the men employed at the mines, because the sport centre would be a common meeting ground for all sections of the camp'."

Common Situation.

Mr. Conant said the situation in the mining country was "fairly common throughout the province due to the fact that many of our working people have no time or opportunity for recreation during the week."

The delegation, included members of church bodies, the Salvation Army, the Retail Merchants' Association of Ontario and the Toronto Trades and Labor Council. It asked that Lord's Day Act of 1906 be enforced "reasonably, sanely, consistently and on a province-wide basis"; that the provincial government seek repeal of the Dominion Lord's Day Act of 1845; and that the government make continued efforts to preserve one day's rest in seven."

Mr. Conant said he agreed with the deputation's claim there should be one day's rest in seven.

Will Investigate.

"I am surprised at what one of your delegation says—that there are firms in Ontario where employees are not given one day's rest in seven," the Attorney-General said. "I intend to make further investigations."

Mr. Conant said, in reply to a request from the delegation, that it would be impossible to have provincial police patrol municipalities to enforce Sunday legislation.

"Imagine what the city of Toronto would think if provincial police undertook to enforce certain laws there," he said.

"We are all interested in the welfare of our people," Mr. Conant went on. "We approach it from different angles, that's all. We are in agreement on the obsoleteness of the law of 1845 and will take into consideration what should be done about it. As for your stand that the laws on our statute books should be respected, we are in agreement with that. It's the most important thing today—respect for law. We will see that the laws are enforced fairly and impartially."

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Clearing fogs! What a boon to aviation and navigation if fogs could be cleared from airdromes sufficiently to permit landings and take-offs, or from the lane of an ocean liner to permit the seeing of icebergs and other vessels or the making of harbor. Fogs can be dissipated by various means such as heating the air or sprinkling water or sand, but these and all other methods so far thought of are possible only in physical laboratories on a small scale and are entirely impracticable when done on a large enough scale to be at all helpful on an air field or a steamer lane. An old eastern proverb says: "A fog cannot be dispelled by a fan".

FRAME DWELLING AN EASY PREY TO ROARING FLAMES

Leslie Robson, Father and One Child Escape from Building

25 BELOW ZERO

Mother Found on Floor of Bathroom Clutching Child in Her Arms

Winnipeg, Dec. 30 (CP)—Flames roaring in 25 below zero weather through the two-storey frame house of Leslie Lyle Robson in suburban St. James last night brought death to Mrs. Robson and five children.

Only the father and the oldest of six children, 12-year-old Stanley, escaped the fire which broke out about 11 p.m. shortly after they had retired. Robson, a coal dealer, is in serious condition in hospital suffering from burns, cuts and exposure. Stanley suffered only severe shock.

The dead are Mrs. Wretha Robson, 31; Shirley, 10; Dorothy, 7; Doreen and Donald, 4-year-old twins; and George, 2½ months.

Worst In History.

Thomas Baird, Assistant Fire Commissioner, said it was the worst dwelling fire in Winnipeg's history. Not since eight died and ten were injured in the Medway Court Apartment House fire Sept. 1, 1929, has the city experienced such a death toll.

Other serious fires in Winnipeg were in St. Boniface College Nov. 25, 1922, ten dead; Winnipeg Theatre fire Dec. 24, 1926, four dead; and Casa Loma Block fire April 14, 1928, five dead.

SEAWAY TREATY MAY BE SIGNED

Prime Minister King Has Not Moved to Open Discussions on Draft

Washington, Dec. 30 (AP)—State Department sources indicated today the Senate of the approaching 76th United States Congress would be given a new Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway treaty for consideration if the tentative draft is approved by the Canadian Government.

The department forwarded to Prime Minister Mackenzie King a draft of the proposed treaty last May. The Prime Minister acknowledged receipt, but has not moved to open discussions formally.

President Roosevelt told newsmen, after the Prime Minister's visit in November, that Canada favored speedy conclusion of a seaway pact. Some sources speculated on whether the United States' enlivened defence program would spur negotiations for the proposed route to the Atlantic for large cargo vessels and construction of electric generating plants involved.

The treaty has been altered to permit Canada to wait until 1949 to start work on that part of the project lying purely within Canadian waters. Numerous other changes in the treaty have been made.

Sterilization of Certain Types of Mentally Unfit Persons Advocated

Magone Commission Gives Report to Provincial Cabinet

ADVISES NEW BOARD

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—Advocating establishment of a Board of Review for mental cases and sterilization of certain types of mentally unfit persons, the report of the Magone Commission on conditions in Ontario mental hospitals was expected to be brought before the provincial cabinet council today.

The report, compiled by a three-man commission headed by Clifford R. Magone, solicitor in the Ontario Attorney-General's Department, was made public yesterday after four months of hearings at provincial mental institutions and at the legislative buildings here. It commends hospital superintendents and staff members of their work "under very trying circumstances" and urges sweeping changes in the Ontario Medical Act.

Crew Returns Finds Freighter Undamaged

London, Dec. 30 (AP)—The Admiralty said today the crew of the British freighter Marionga, attacked yesterday off the east coast of Spain, had returned to the ship and found her undamaged.

The 4,236-ton Marionga was reported to have turned back to Oran, Algeria, whence she sailed Saturday for Barcelona. The vessel sent out an S.O.S. yesterday, saying her crew had taken to boats after being bombed. She reported her position between the Spanish mainland and the Balearic Islands, where Spanish Insurgents base a large air force.

ALL-DAY CURFEW LAW AT NAZARETH

Terrorist Acts Lead to Imposition of New Restrictions

Jerusalem, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas)—Military authorities imposed new restrictions in Jerusalem and Nazareth today after terroristic acts that resulted in two deaths.

At Nazareth an all-day curfew was imposed after unidentified persons shot and killed Tafa Fahoum, a member of a well-known Christian Arab family, while he was walking in the main street of the town.

In Jerusalem, Major-General Richard O'Connor, Military Governor, cancelled permits of Arab taxi drivers after shots had been fired from a taxi at two Royal Air Force officers.

Near the Jaffa Gate of the old city, Isaac Klein, a Jewish laborer, was killed by a sniper's bullet.

Woman, Convicted Of Child's Murder, Is Given Freedom

Leeds, England, Dec. 30 (AP)—A mother who was sentenced to death only nine months ago for the "mercy murder" of her imbecile son returned to her home and husband today—a free woman.

Mrs. Kathleen Mumford, 40, walked four miles to the police station last March with the body of her son Derek, five. She told officers she put him into a gas oven after the doctor pronounced the child an incurable imbecile.

"In the eyes of the law I am guilty but not in the eyes of God," she testified. She was convicted of murder. Her death sentence was commuted. The Home Secretary ordered her release after neighbors testified recently that she gave the helpless Derek loving and careful attention before the doctor's pronouncement.

SKILLED GANGS OF RESCUE WORKERS MAKING PROGRESS

Entombed Men Might be Alive if They Sought Protection Under Train

ROCK BURSTS COMMON

Kirkland Lake, Ont., Dec. 30 (CP)—Skilled gangs of rescue workers dug beside the uncovered rear of an ore train today as frantic efforts to reach two entombed miners continued. Although admitting chances of survival were slight, officials of the Lake Shore Gold Mine said the men might be alive if they found protection from the blast by creeping under the train.

The miners, John Holubec, 33, and Vito Vlaisevgevich, 40, were trapped half-a-mile underground Tuesday night when the blast collapsed a stope in which they were working and caused a fall of tons of ore. It was reported rescue workers had heard sounds beneath the rock blast on which they are digging.

GOLDFIELDS, SASK. A BOOMING TOWN

Started Three Years Ago and Now Population of 800

Goldfields, Sask., Dec. 30 (CP)—From a tent city to a good-sized mining community in three years is the story of this booming town 550 miles north of Prince Albert.

Three years ago mining men set up a camp, consisting of half a dozen tents, close to the Hudson's Bay Company trading post. Since that time the population has increased to almost 800, the trading post has been enlarged, two hotels have been built, a number of restaurants and two motion picture theatres adorn the main thoroughfare.

The originals of Goldfields were fortunate if they received mail twice a month. Now mail and periodicals are delivered six times a week. The Mackenzie Air Service operates out of Edmonton three times a week and another company flies mail out of Prince Albert to the miners and their families on a similar schedule.

Community Rink.

Men in the community worked together to build an ice rink. There is a four-team hockey league consisting of Athona Gold Mines, two teams from Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, and a team representing Goldfields. Athona won the title last year and are leading the league in the present schedule.

Recently a curling rink sprang up and the miners are proving masters with the besom and stane. Although they have not decided to enter competition for the Macdonald's Brier Tankard it would not be surprising if a quartet from Goldfields were to issue a challenge in the near future.

Bridge is a favorite pastime with miners and their families, although Saturday night finds almost everyone at the dance hall. A bowling alley is also at their disposal and many a pleasant evening is spent toppling the maples.

FRANCE TO SEEK NEW SYRIAN PACT WITH CONCESSIONS

Uncertainty Created by Italian Colonial Agitation

FRENCH CONTROL

France Will Not Take Risk of Launching Independent Syria

Paris, Dec. 30 (AP)—Parliamentary deputies said today France would ask military concessions from Syria in a new French-Syrian agreement, because of uncertainty created by Italian colonial agitation.

The new agreement would be a substitute for the 1936 treaty granting Syria independence and release from the French Mandate. Syria ratified the treaty but the French parliament has not.

France cannot risk launching an independent Syria, a government spokesman declared, at the very moment the French need a firm grip on all Mediterranean military and naval bases.

Patient Battles With Nurse, Jumps to Death

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)—A desperate, 10-minute struggle between nurse and patient ended last night in the death of Mrs. Miriam Rieber, wife of a wealthy oil financier, in a 35-storey plunge from a window of her Central Park South apartment.

Wife of Torkild Rieber, chairman of the boards of the Texas Company and the Texas Corporation, Mrs. Rieber had been under care of a physician for a nervous ailment, police were told.

Miss Helen Koerner, nurse attending Mrs. Rieber for the past two months, told officers she attempted to hold Mrs. Rieber but the woman tore herself free and plunged from the window.

Bombs Strike Ship's Bridge, Deck Damaged

Madrid, Dec. 30 (AP)—The British ship Mirupano was badly damaged today in an Insurgent air raid on the port of Valencia.

A direct hit wrecked the bridge and part of the deck. Shrapnel tore several holes in her starboard side.

The Mirupano's crew all took haven in air raid shelters ashore when the first alarm sounded and none was injured.

Several waterfront houses were destroyed but no casualties were reported.

A cannonading last night killed five persons and injured thirty in the Pacifico Atocha area of southern Madrid. About 200 shells fell in the district.

Fireman Injured In $70,000 Blaze

Buffalo, N.Y., Dec. 30 (AP)—One fireman was injured early today during a three-hour fight to subdue a fire in a five-storey machinery store and warehouse in downtown Buffalo.

Flying glass lacerated the right eye of Fireman Emmett O'Connor so seriously he was taken to a hospital.

Fire Commissioner William R. Castimore estimated damage at $60,000 to $70,000 after flames had destroyed the interior of the structure occupied by the Buffalo Mill Supply Company.

Heavy machinery valued at thousands of dollars was stored in the building. For a time the flames threatened adjacent buildings occupied by the Buffalo Evening News, and alarmed guests in the 12-storey Hotel Worth on the other side.

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 30 (CP)—Arthur Edward Mahoney died here last night at his home. Born in Hamilton, Ont., he had lived here for 19 years, working as a painter and decorator.

He obtained his discharge from the Royal Canadian Regiment when war broke out and joined the 86th Machine Gun Section in Hamilton, and was transferred to the 21st Battalion.

GOV'T DESTROYER FORCED AGROUND DURING BLOCKADE

Seven of Crew Killed and Eleven Injured in Battle

ONE-SIDED BATTLE

Spanish Boat Took Refuge at Gibraltar Early in August

Gibraltar, Dec. 30 (AP)—A daring dash for freedom through blazing guns of Spanish Insurgent warships and shore batteries ended in failure for a lone Government destroyer today, amid the crashing of shells in startled Gibraltar itself.

The Jose Luis Diez, a virtual prisoner here since August, attempted to sneak through a gauntlet of lurking Insurgent ships in the pitch of darkness of early morning. But destructive fire of her enemy forced her aground only 100 yards from the Gibraltar shore with seven of her crew killed and eleven wounded.

Before grounding, the destroyer struck a heavy blow on her own account by ramming and sinking the 1,500-ton Insurgent sloop Jupiter.

Shortly after the darkened 1,650-ton Jose Luis slipped from the protection of the Gibraltar harbor the short-lived, one-sided naval battle began.

Astrologers Predict Death of Duce In Accident in 1939

Paris, December 30—(CP-Havas)—New war threats, a fatal accident for Premier Mussolini, drastic changes in the totalitarian states and the advent of a "big blond man with a pointed nose who will lead France out of its difficulties" are among predictions for 1939 by France's leading astrologers.

Casting their horoscopes and surveying world horizons, they seem to be unanimous that Il Duce will meet with a fatal mishap during the 12 months to come.

No forecasts are made concerning the leaders of other dictator countries, but some of the astrologers say increased economic difficulties will force them to modify their policies.

Madame Fraya, veteran astrologist who predicted the war of 1914, foresees "a renewal of feminine influence" in the world.

Dom Neroman, a leading Paris astrologer and former artillery colonel, asserted "1939 is a catastrophic year placed under the influence of the moon and of Mars." From this, Dom Neroman calculated there will be grave troubles in Europe on March 21 and May 3, when "the Munich system will be reversed." There will be troubles in Tokyo, and at Moscow too, he said, and on June 23 France will come "under the pernicious influence of Mars."

Madame Fraya did not agree. She said "1939 will be under the beneficient influence of the sun and Venus. I see happiness and work and a renewal of feminine influence."

There will be war scares but no war, the astrologers agreed, and the war-mongering countries will lose out. In France, after the Chamber is dissolved, the "big blond man with a pointed nose" will inaugurate a "first-rate policy."

Grand Jury of Psychiatric Experts Favored to Test Sanity in Criminals

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH

Richmond, Va., Dec. 30 (AP)—A new kind of grand jury which would make an impersonal analysis on the sanity of any criminal was proposed today before the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Winfred Overholder, superintendent of Saint Elizabeth's Hospital, principal United States Government Hospital for the Insane, told members attending the special symposium on mental health that the appointment of such a jury of impartial experts in psychiatry would serve the cause of justice better than the use in many criminal cases of reputed experts who testify for and against an accused person.

At present, he said, it is left to the discretion of the trial judge who is qualified to speak as an expert on sanity or insanity and both defence and prosecution find medical men who will present opinions directly opposed to each other.

It is almost a universal practice for judges presiding over criminal trials "to permit almost any doctor of medicine who has a license to practice to testify as an expert in practically any field," Dr. Overholder said, whereas the truth is that psychiatry is a highly specialized field which most physicians know little about.

The American Psychiatric Association and the American Neurological Association have certified approximately 500 physicians throughout the country who are qualified to pass on the sanity of an individual, Dr. Overholder added, and these psychiatrists are the only ones admitted to testify in federal district courts. In addition California, Wisconsin and Massachusetts have passed laws enabling judges to appoint physicians to furnish "unbiased expert" services in any trial.

Britain, France, Egypt United in Opposition To Italian Participation

Egyptian Government Takes Especially Strong Stand

EXCHANGE VIEWS

'Moral Disarmament' Only Possible Basis Seen for Change

By PIERRE MAILLAUD

(Copyright, 1938, by the Havas News Agency)

London, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas) — Great Britain and France have decided after week-long conversations that Italian participation in control of the Suez Canal is out of the question, it was learned here today.

Neither France nor Great Britain would agree to such a concession even if there should be a lessening of the French-Italian tension caused by Italian agitation for French territory, it was said.

Chamberlain's Visit To Rome.

It was also learned that when Prime Minister Chamberlain goes to Rome next month he will not seek to mediate between Italy and France although he may tell Premier Mussolini that further withdrawals of Italian troops from Spain would create a favorable atmosphere for French-Italian talks.

In an exchange of views with the British government, the Egyptian government has taken a stand strongly opposed to Italian participation in control of the Suez Canal.

With the views of the British, French and Egyptian governments thus in accord, it was said that only a complete change in the international situation, with read "moral disarmament", would make it possible to envisage a change in the canal's administration.

No French Concessions.

While no French concessions to Italy are being considered at the present time, it was said that any which might later be mentioned could concern only questions settled by the Laval-Mussolini accord of 1935, which Italy has denounced.

Informed British sources said France took this position in a memorandum to the British government. In any case the French-Italian difficulties are not to be discussed during Mr. Chamberlain's visit to Rome.

London Paper Says Goebbels Found in Room With Actress

Nazi Statement That Goebbels Has Recovered From Illness, Taken As Indirect Denial of Truth of Report.

Berlin, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas) — Authorized Nazi sources today said that Propaganda Minister Goebbels is rapidly recovering from an attack of intestinal influenza and left his bed three days ago after spending Christmas at his home. These sources said it is hoped he will be able to make a New Year's broadcast scheduled for 7 p.m. tomorrow.

(The Nazi statements were taken as an indirect answer to reports published abroad, but not confirmed in any quarter, that Goebbels had been horsewhipped. The London Daily Mirror reported today that Goebbels was beaten by friends of the actor Gustav Froelich when they found him in the apartment of Froelich's wife, the film actress Lida Barova.)

CLERGY UPHOLDS DEATH PENALTY FOR MURDERERS

Clergymen of Different Denominations See Scaffold as Deterrent

MAWKISH SYMPATHY

Saint John, N.B., Dec. 30 (CP)—In this old seaport city where the last hanging occurred more than half a century ago, clergymen of different denominations uphold the principle of capital punishment.

Two men convicted of murder here this year had their death sentences commuted to life imprisonment. John Netcoff was condemned to hang Dec. 14 for the hammer slaying of his former housekeeper. In April William Robicheau was sentenced to death for murder during an armed robbery.

Date of the last hanging in this city was May 9, 1883, when William Hughes, colored, went to the gallows after killing his wife.

Horror For the Crime.

"If we consider the crime of murder in its proper perspective we would be more horrified at the crime and more sympathetic towards the victim than the culprit," commented Rev. Dr. Brice D. Knott, Central Baptist Church, one of four ministers who gave their opinions on the subject.

"The fear of death, by the law, is undoubtedly a strong deterrent of this particular crime," he said. "There is altogether too much mawkish sympathy shown towards murderers even in the most brutal cases.

City and District News

ORCHARD OWNERS PROTECT TREES FROM HUNGRY RABBITS

The first snow fall has brought the first worry to orchard owners of the district who are now taking steps to protect their trees from gnawing rabbits and mice. Sales of wire screen locally for shielding the trees have been good, it is stated. Even tar saturated bags have been found a good substitute as a guard against the rabbits who turn to bark for sustenance when snow covers the fields and woods.

FAIR DEPTH OF SNOW HELP TO LUMBERMEN

Snow which covers the district to a fair depth has not only given skiers of the city their first chance at their favorite outdoor sport, but has meant money to lumber operators of North Hastings, it was reported this morning by Harry Bell, of Millbridge, a visitor to Belleville this morning.

"Operators have been waiting for this fall to start the first of the real work in the woods. The present fall has been sufficient to permit skidding, and the weather has been cold enough to make good ice roads after they've been sprinkled", he reported.

Less cutting is expected to be undertaken in North Hastings this season due to a heavy cut last year, it was further stated.

LITTLE GIRL EXPRESSES APPRECIATION FOR CARTOON PRIZE AWARD

A little girl competitor, Marie Bourdon, Lemieux, Ontario, first prize winner of the recent slogan and cartoon competition for school children of Ontario arranged by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association today wrote and thanked Mr. J. L. Irwin, Honorary President of the Association, for the money order received.

"It is the first prize that I have won," wrote little Miss Bourdon. "I think it is very nice to get. My friends are glad that I won it. Many older people say they would like it, too—and they complimented me.

"If I should pass through Belleville I would certainly be glad to see you. But if I do not go, I will always remember the man who gave me my first prize."

A cash prize of $10 had been forwarded the little winner.

Former Commissioner Geo. A. Reid Presented With Clock by Staff

In recognition of his lengthy service and active interest in affairs of the Commission, former Commissioner Geo. A. Reid, of the local Public Utilities Commission has been presented with a valuable chime clock by the staff for the consideration he has given their interests while serving on the local body.

In making the presentation on behalf of the staff, Mr. O. H. Scott, manager, declared his pleasure at being granted this privilege.

"It is with this pleasure that I express to you, on behalf of the staff of the Commission, the appreciation felt by them of the manner in which you have given consideration to their interests during the many years you have served as Commissioner," stated Mr. Scott.

"As an evidence of our appreciation and the pleasant feelings we have for you, and as a slight reward for the service you have rendered, we ask you to accept the electric mantel clock which we are forwarding you.

"We extend to you, and Mrs. Reid, our best wishes for a Happy New Year and we hope that in the years to come the chimes may serve to remind you of the time spent with our co-operation for the benefit of the utility users of Belleville.

Mr. Reid in his reply to the staff stated:

In accepting your present of this beautiful clock I feel very grateful and wish to say that you will always be remembered by me both collectively and individually as I understand that every one of the staff both in the office and out has had a part in this gift. I had no thought whatever of a gift until you presented it to me.

In the eight years I have been on the Commission as Hydro Commissioner and Utilities Commissioner I have appreciated the hearty co-operation of every one on the staff. I have never asked for any information but that it was cheerfully given and that goes a long way toward good fellowship. I will not be your Commissioner for 1939, but let me assure you that I will always take an interest in the work and in each one individually. In the future if I can be of any assistance to you, please always feel free to come to me.

Again thanking you on behalf of Mrs. Reid and myself for this gift and wishing you all a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

POLICE COURT

A short session of the police court was held today before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., but a number of cases were disposed of. A young man from Collins Bay pleaded guilty to driving a car while intoxicated and was given seven days in the County Jail while his permit was cancelled for three months and his car impounded for the same period, both to date from the time of his arrest early in December. He was also ordered to pay $14.10 costs or in default a further fifteen days.

David McFarlane, Shannonville, given time to raise the costs and pay restitution in a theft charge appeared but did not have the money and was sentenced to one month in jail. James McNamara, Lonsdale and his brother, Domenic appeared charged with causing a disturbance in the Marysville Hotel. James pleaded guilty and was given a suspended sentence of one year and ordered to stay out of the hotel for that period, also being ordered to pay the costs of $17. The cost were paid. No evidence was offered against Domenic by the Crown Attorney but he was ordered by the Magistrate to stay out of the hotel for a year.

A resident was fined $50 and $16 costs after pleading guilty to keeping a common gaming house. The fine was paid. A non-support charge was heard in camera, the accused being ordered to pay his wife $10 per week and in default to serve three months in the County Jail.

Sightless of City and District Are Feted at Christmas Party

Gala Event Put on by Local Branch of Canadian Institute for the Blind

One of the most interesting of Christmas parties was that given last evening in the Y.M.C.A. by the Belleville branch of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, at which the guests were sightless persons and their guides of Belleville and district.

The tables were very beautifully decorated in Christmas colors and each of the guests of honor was presented with a gift, chocolates for the ladies and cigarettes for the men. About sixty were present.

For the musical program which was a very enjoyable part of the evening's entertainment, Mr. R. J. S. Dewar, president of the Belleville branch, was chairman. Mrs. M. P. Duff presided at the piano. Mr. J. D. Bankier gave a vocal solo and also led in community singing. Miss Helen Chant soprano, also contributed a solo, while Miss Anna Hogle delighted the guests with readings. Mr. Melton newly appointed secretary for this district and an accomplished musician, although blind, played two brilliant piano solos.

The Belleville branch is greatly indebted to all those who assisted in making this party a success.

COUNCIL REFUSES LICENCE TRANSFER OF BILLIARD ROOM

Amending By-law Passed After a Lengthy Discussion

GOODBYES SAID

Work of Retiring Aldermen Praised by Council Members

An amendment to the by-law regulating billiard parlors in the city, which would refuse the transfer of a Billiard Parlor from one location on Front Street to another location on the same street and also prohibited the opening of any new Billiard Parlor on Front Street was passed at the last session of the City Council for the year at a meeting held on Thursday evening in the Council Chamber. Nine members of the council were present including Mayor Bone, Aldermen Jennings, Thompson, Logan, Kennedy, Cushing, Rollins Howell and Barlow and although a motion was introduced by Alderman Howell to refer back the amendment to the first meeting of the 1939 council for further consideration the motion was lost and the council voted unanimously in favor of the amendment and it was finally passed through the various stages.

Makes Request

Theodore Maraskas, appearing for his mother, who is the owner of a Billiard Parlor in this city, requested no by-law or amendment be passed until application was made for a transfer of the billiard licence now held by Mrs. Maraskas. The owner has been forced to move from her present location on the east side of Front Street due to another firm arranging for the lease of that property. Mr. Maraskas during the week purchased a property at 216 Front Street known at the McFee Jewellery Store and intended to enlarge the building sufficient to house the equipment necessary for the conducting of a billiard parlor but the council by their action blocked the procedure, refusing to allow the transfer even if application is made.

Deputation Heard

A deputation headed by John W. Cook, E. R. McBride and Mrs. Cummins presented a petition from merchants in the immediate vicinity of the proposed new Billiard Parlor asking that the council refuse the transfer claiming it would be detrimental to business to have a billiard parlor in such close proximity to their places of business. Mr. Cook spoke for the deputation, requesting the council to give every consideration to their request.

After the petition was presented, Mr. Maraskas addressed the council asking why he had been singled out for attack. "I am not asking for a transfer at this time," said Mr. Maraskas, "but I think this is a rank discrimination against my mother if the council tonight undertakes to put through this amendment. I did not come prepare to fight this issue at the present time and I believe I could secure just as many signers to a petition to have the transfer granted. The family have definitely committed themselves to purchase this property." At this point Mayor Bone informed Mr. Maraskas, that there was likely to be a by-law passed at the meeting refusing a transfer to another location and also prohibiting the establishment of pool rooms on Front Street. The speaker was taken by surprise at this turn of events and asked the council to reconsider their stand on the matter. He told the members, that his mother and family had paid large tax bills in the city for years and it was not fair to show discrimination.

Mayor Speaks on Question

When the by-law came up for consideration, Mayor Bone stated he was speaking as a property owner and not as Mayor and that it was not desirable to have pool rooms on the main street of the city. Alderman Howell asked that the question be deferred till the next meeting of the council in the new year as there was not a full council present and that Mr. Maraskas had made strong representation to the council to have the transfer granted. Alderman Thompson stated he took a strong stand on the matter and Alderman Rollins believed it was a very contentious question but that he was opposed to more pool rooms on Front Street. "If you want to play billiards one can go on a side street as well as on the main one," said Ald. Rollins. "As a council we have to be fair to everyone and I think under the circumstances that we are doing the right thing by opposing this proposed transfer.

Alderman Opposed

Alderman Jennings stated he was definitely opposed to pool rooms at anytime and that he was very sorry to vote against Mr. Maraskas but he was of the opinion that the merchants in the section of the proposed location would be hard hit if the council allowed the transfer to be made.

Alderman Kennedy also stated he was very much opposed to pool rooms on Front Street and would have to vote for the amended by-law. Alderman Logan did not consider it fair to turn over any business of the 1939 council that could be done by this council. The members unless there is good reason should be at every council meeting and as we are here assembled as Aldermen of the city we should transact the business that comes before us.

Alderman Cushing was in favor of deferring the question to another meeting as there was not a full council present but Alderman Barlow disagreed with the speaker stating there was a quorum present and a representative body of the citizens. He asked Mr. Maraskas to withdraw a statement, that the council members were his enemies. "I have never considered anybody as a friend or an enemy, when transacting business for the city and I think the statement should be withdrawn. This was done by Mr. Maraskas. At this point Ald. Howell made a motion to refer the by-law back but the motion was lost and the by-law passed.

Tenders Called

Tenders for a car of coke were called, while Aldermen Cushing, Rollins and Lewis was appointed a committee to report on contemplated changes to be made in the assessor's office. The treasurer and auditor were authorized to sign debit slips on the Bank of Montreal in payment of City of Belleville coupons. A recommendation was passed to proceed with the closing of Mulberry Street, a small street running off Dundas Street East. Possibility of a traffic signal being placed at the corner of Pinnacle and Bridge Street East was shown in the motion to have the matter referred to the Department of Highways and a report prepared for council. A number of by-laws arranging for the transfer of property were passed through the various stages.

Goodbyes Said

Before council closed Mayor Bone thanked the Aldermen for their kind and considerate application to business during the past year and hoped that in the new year the city would progress and prosper. "It was not possible for us all to agree on every subject," said His Worship. "But despite this fact a considerable amount of work has been done. I intend to introduce a new program in the early life of next year's council and I am sure it will help to stir this country out of the doldrums. Ald. Logan replied to the address thanking the Mayor for his consideration and also voiced the regrets of the members in losing Aldermen Howell, Barlow, Wills and Baragar from the council. Aldermen Barlow and Howell replied, Alderman Barlow viewing his five years in council as the happiest of his life and that he would always have the best interest of the city at heart. The best of wishes were extended for a bright and prosperous New Year.

Motor Licences Good Till March 31st

J. P. Bickell, issuer of motor licences for Ontario, said today present plates are good until March 31, 1939, end of the government's fiscal year. Under legislation passed at the last session of the legislature, the motor-licence year was changed, effective in 1939, to correspond with the government fiscal year. ROGER W. BABSON

American business has no more inspiring personality than Roger W. Babson, internationally-known business commentator and investment adviser. An outstanding feature of his philosophy has been his lifelong insistence on the importance of religion in business.

Born in 1875, reared in an old-fashioned atmosphere of hard work and hustle on a farm in Gloucester, Mr. Babson went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Upon graduating in 1898, he turned instinctively to financial and business activities.

His exertions, however, undermined his health; he contracted tuberculosis and he was sent West "As good as dead!". It was while he was convalescing from this dread malady that he worked out some of the possibilities and problems of business statistics.

That was nearly thirty-five years ago. Today his weekly statistical and financial reports are read by thousands of business men and his research work is carried on by a large staff of workers.

Mr. Babson founded Babson Institute for men; and, in cooperation with Mrs. Babson, developed Webber College for women,—both nationally known educational institutions. Here young men and women may concentrate more in the fundamentals and less on the frills of business.

To millions of newspaper readers, Mr. Babson is best known by his familiar weekly stories on business which appear in more than 400 papers throughout North America. Of unbounded energy Roger W. Bab-on has probably done more than any other man to bring statistics to life, to instill a broader vision in business men, and to publicize the ups-and-downs of the business cycle.

Minto

Minto—The Y.P.U. met in the church on Friday evening in the form of a Christmas program. A large crowd attended the meeting. It was opened by quiet music after which all joined in singing a hymn. Mr. Delve led in prayer and he also told a story to the children. Another Christmas hymn was then sung. The president, Lorne Hagerman then took over the program and the greeting was given by Ella Mayo. Mr. John B. Hagerman sang a solo. A recitation was given by Marguerite Howard. Eva Sine gave a reading and recitations were given by three junior boys, Keith Twiddy, Kenneth Sine, Owen Delve. Della McMaster contributed a monologue and Eva Hagerman sang a solo. A recitation was given by Fred Howard, after which a dialogue "Jelly for the Minister" was put on by Mrs. Kenneth Belcour. Edna McMaster and Annis Johnston. Ethel Hagerman gave a reading. A pantomime "Away in a manger" was given by Mae Sarles. Mrs. Albert Twiddy and Laura Wright sang a duet. Marjorie Clements gave a reading and a hymn was sung. Mae Clements sang a solo and a dialogue was given by Carman Colden and Marguerite Howard entitled "Tim's Christmas present." Mae Sarles took up the collection which amounted to 5.73. Miss Mae Clements who has secured a position in Toronto was home for the holidays and during the program she was called to the front. Edna McMaster read the following address and Ethel Hagerman presented Mae with a bedroom clock from the Junior Bible Class.

Miss Mae Clements,

Dear Mae:

It is a pleasure tonight to have you once more in our midst.

We have missed you from our Sunday School, Young People's and church work, since your new duties have called you away. We know however, that each one of us has some special duty in life and since your chosen profession has called you to other parts we can at least watch with pleasure, your progress from time to time.

We believe though that you will always recall your younger days spent in your home community and so tonight we, as members of the Junior Bible Class of Salem S. S. take this opportunity of expressing their best wishes for your success and would ask you to accept this small gift. As you use this clock may you ever be reminded of your friends at Salem.

Friendship is a golden chain
That binds true friends together
And if you never break that chain
We will be friends forever."

Signed on behalf of Salem Jr. Bible Class, Mrs. Delbert Sine, teacher, Edna McMaster, President.

Mae graciously thanked all for the lovely gift.

Mrs. Delve gave a talk on their experience in the North West which was very interesting. All joined in singing the National Anthem, after which Santa Claus arrived and distributed the presents off the tree. All journeyed homeward feeling that the evening had been well spent.

1939 Business and Financial Outlook for Canada

By Roger W. Babson

Babson Park, Massachusetts, December 30. I am convinced that Canadian business in 1939 will average higher than any previous year in her entire history! There is terrific momentum behind the growth of Dominion business and 1939 should see general activity rise 15 per cent over 1938. Workers, farmers, salesmen, merchants, manufacturers, and investors should all share in this new march to prosperity.

A year ago at this time I said that early 1938 would witness a sharp intermediate recession, but that by Christmas business would be pushing toward all-time highs. The figures for the last few months bear out this prophecy. Early 1938 saw a sharp recession. Business dropped more than 10 per cent. By mid-summer, however, the trend had changed and sensational gains were recorded during the autumn.

12 PER CENT BELOW PEAK

The year is now closing on a new wave of confidence. Business now stands at 132 on my Babsonchart. It is just a hair below the good levels of December 1937 and 12 per cent below the 1929 and 1937 peak figure of 151. With the upward trend again clearly established, I predict a year of healthy improvement in all major lines of Canadian industry.

I also anticipate a good year in the States, with a gain of 20 per cent over 1938. Hence, Canada will feel not only the stimulus of domestic pick-up, but also the impetus which always comes from excellent business south of the border. The Dominion's foreign markets are broadening with encouraging regularity. The trade pacts concluded with the United States and Great Britain will accelerate exports during approaching months.

FARM OUTLOOK MODERATELY BETTER

During 1939, farm results should have less bearing upon total business than was the case during the serious depression years. Industry, generally, is shifting into high gear and will be somewhat less dependent upon the flow of crop money than in 1938. My guess is that the backbone of the long drought has been broken. According to the theory of weather cycles, the Western Provinces should have another good crop year.

Moisture conditions this fall were passably good. In some of the best growing areas reports have it that much of the depleted sub-soil moisture has been replaced. Moreover, there is a good chance that wheat prices will average slightly higher during next year's harvest. Barring a crop disaster, farm income for the Dominion as a whole should register another increase.

BUILDING TO INCREASE

Activity in all major industries should continue the gains of recent weeks. Building, which affects practically all other lines, may increase as much as 20 per cent. This means that I expect to see building reach a new recovery peak and the highest point since the winter of 1931-32.

Leader in the building field will be residential construction. More homes will go up, both with and without Government financial aid, than at any time since the home building boom in 1928 and 1929 Those engaged in supplying materials should be prepared for a sizable jump in demand as the year works along. There will also be more activity in engineering and business construction.

BETTER YEAR FOR NEWSPRINT, AUTOS

Canada's stable newsprint industry is headed higher. Although losses were recorded during 1938, this industry never did go very low except in comparison with the new high levels reached in 1937. Demand is again increasing, and exports will doubtless move substantially higher. I expect newsprint production for 1939 to surpass that of 1938 by 25 per cent.

Automobile output suffered severely during the 1938 recession. Not until the latter part of the year were there any signs of renewed enthusiasm in this direction. However, the end of 1938 was just the beginning of what may be the greatest production since 1929. Automobile assemblies should jump 20 per cent above 1938 with tire manufacturing up 15 per cent.

STEEL AND TEXTILES TO RISE

Both iron and steel will see greater activity during 1939. Combined totals may average 20 per cent above 1938. The new armament industry in Canada will undoubtedly make good strides during the next few years. This will have a marked effect upon iron and steel operations, particularly if Great Britain chooses to, or is forced to, establish more armament and aeroplane plants in the Dominion.

In Quebec and Ontario, there were fewer textile mills at work last summer than in the preceding year. As 1938 drew to a close, however, the industry picked up new momentum. Markets for Dominion textiles will be relatively good over the period ahead. Therefore, total textile output during 1939 should surpass that of the year just closed by as much as 12 per cent.

CONSUMER INDUSTRIES HIGHER

Meat packing will reflect a generally improved domestic demand for foods, as well as an improved foreign market. I look for the average of hog, sheep, and cattle slaughter to move ahead approximately 12 per cent during 1939. Flour milling is another activity which should contribute to the general betterment. A 10 per cent advance is possible in this industry during the next ten months.

The tobacco industry of Canada is growing in importance each year. Acreage will be higher and tobacco manufacturing should rise three per cent. Petroleum is another Canadian product which is making great strides. With the new Alberta findings and increased output probable, a distinct reduction in imports can be anticipated in 1939. Of all her activities at the present time, however, Dominion mining is the most spectacular.

GREATER MINING ACTIVITY

Gold mining, which has reached almost phenomenal heights during the last few years, will again forge ahead, perhaps eight per cent. Silver should not be far behind with production totals pushing some five per cent higher. Copper and nickel can increase as much as 15 per cent and 10 per cent respectively. This will bring both metals to new production peaks for the recovery period.

Coal fields of Canada are rich and appear to be virtually inexhaustible. Despite the hundreds of thousands of tons extracted, mining continues at a good rate and 1939 promises further gains. In view of the demand, I estimate that about 10 per cent more coal will be mined next year than in 1938. With brighter industrial conditions, zinc and lead output for the next twelve months should be eight per cent above 1938 figures.

BETTER LUMBER OUTLOOK

Early winter lumber operations in some provinces are somewhat restricted in comparison with the same time a year ago. The building industry will make some demands on lumber cut within the country, while the external market promises to hold well. Hence, a 20 per cent boost in exports of planks and boards during the year ahead is a real possibility.

Lumber is not the only export commodity which will reflect stronger world trade. Canada's export business as a whole will benefit from freer flow of goods among Great Britain, the Dominion and the United States in accordance with the new trade treaties. It would not be unreasonable to expect a 20 per cent improvement in foreign trade during the course of the next year.

MODERATELY HIGHER COMMODITY PRICES

Pressure will be on the upside as far as commodity prices are concerned during the next twelve months. Perhaps there will be sufficient momentum to force the average for 1939 more than five per cent above the average for 1938, but the trend will be toward higher levels. Hides and leather seem in position for relatively sharp advances. Other items will probably see no sensational price changes, barring the possibility of a European war.

Because of improvement in the business of all the provinces, strike totals are bound to expand. I do not expect, however, any serious tie-ups which will affect business adversely. Jobs will continue to increase. So will payrolls. Wage rates will move upward, but more slowly than employment, and it is unlikely that 1939 pay scales will average more than five per cent above 1938.

OUTLOOK FOR SECURITIES

Canadian investors face an interesting year. Stock prices will be subject to two favorable forces during the earlier part of 1939. Expanding business activity, both in Canada and the United States, indicates larger earnings, increased dividends, and higher stock prices. In addition, the first effects of the decline in the pound will be a bigger British demand for Canadian securities.

Later in 1939, however, the latter trend may reverse itself. Nevertheless I am bullish on well-selected sound Canadian stocks for 1939. Better business will also benefit medium-grade bond prices. However, I feel that high-grade bonds are close to their peak. Despite the relatively good securities outlook, investors will have to select and watch their investments with the utmost care.

KEEP YOUR FEET ON THE GROUND

The above is my summary of what I believe 1939 has in store for Canada. It is a pleasant picture. 1939 will probably be the best business year in Canada's entire history. SO MY CLOSING MESSAGE TODAY IS: MAKE THE MOST OF 1939'S OPPORTUNITIES, BUT KEEP YOUR FEET ON THE GROUND. OBSERVE THE GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS AS WELL AS IN YOUR PERSONAL LIVES OR JUST AS SURE AS NIGHT FOLLOWS DAY YOU WILL FIND YOURSELVES IN THE SAME MESS AS THE REST OF THE WORLD.

Convicted Bank Robber Tells Of Shooting Friend in Fued, Threw Body into Powderhouse

Lee Bradley's Amazing Story Startles Police Officials

GIRL IS WOUNDED

Quarrel Arose While Pair Were Trying to Secure Dynamite

Sioux Falls, S.D., Dec. 30 (AP)—Lee Bradley, convicted bank robber, awaiting trial on a charge of murder, in an interview told an amazing story of how he shot and killed Floyd Parker, also a former convict, and then tossed his body into a powderhouse near here where it was blown to bits by seven tons of explosives two years ago.

A quarrel over a woman, Helen Sieler of Sioux City, Ia., described as Parker's "girl friend", led to the shooting, Bradley said. The Sieler woman also was shot and left for dead in the powderhouse, but managed to crawl away before the blast which created one of the midwest's sensational crimes.

Bradley, who served about 10 years of a 15 year term after pleading guilty to robbing a bank at Ft. Pierre, S.D., in 1925, was arrested near Yakima, Wash., last August after a 19 months' search.

Two Serving Time

Two other men are already serving terms in connection with the powderhouse crime. William Nesbeth, Sioux City bartender, is under life sentence after his conviction here of first degree murder, while Harry (Slim) Reeves, also of Sioux City, is serving a 40 year sentence in Iowa after pleading guilty to a jewelry store robbery at Sioux City.

"I guess I haven't a chance to beat this rap anyway," said Bradley detailing events leading up to the powderhouse blast which shook the countryside for 50 miles around on New Year's Eve in 1936. "This story won't do me any good, but can't do me any harm, because I'm slated for the limit—life."

Bradley denied the blast killing was premeditated, gave an account that conflicted at many points with testimony in the Nesbeth trial.

Carried Out Robbery

He told of planning and carrying out the robbery of the Ehlermann Jewelry Company in Sioux City with Reeves, Parker and Nesbeth a few days before the blast, but denied Parker was slain to keep him and the Sieler woman from "squealing" about the crime.

After the Ehlermann robbery, Bradley said, the five came here on December 31st and his companions became "lit up on Marihuana." The trip here was made, he said, to obtain dynamite, and it was while he and Parker were attempting to break into the powerhouse that the quarrel broke out when he made a disparaging remark about Miss Sieler.

Parker, Bradley said, struck him from behind with his fist and then attacked him with a hammer, but he managed to draw his gun.

Fell Like a Log

"I shot. He fell like a log," Bradley said calmly, his voice neither raised nor lowered. "I rolled him over and he was dead. I had shot him in the heart."

When Nesbeth, Reeves and Miss Sieler came up, Bradley continued, Reeves said, "What are we going to do with the woman? She'll squawk."

"She knelt over Parker and as she did Reeves grabbed the hammer and began hitting her over the head. She keeled over. Then when she cried to Billy (Nesbeth) for help, Reeves shot her.

Thought Girl Dead

"I guess we must have all thought of the same thing at the same time, 'let's get rid of these bodies', so we picked them up and tossed them into the powderhouse. I thought Sieler was dead too, because she didn't make a sound.

"We all helped toss the bodies in, but I won't say who lit the fuse. Then we ran to the car and were five or six miles away when the explosion came."

(The blast of seven tons of dynamite and black powder shattered $20,000 worth of plate glass in the downtown district, five miles from the scene of the explosion, caused near panic among New Year's Eve revelers and was felt as far as Pipestone, Minn., 50 miles away. Only a few bits of Parker's body were found after the explosion.)

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was pushing crooked things strate and strate things crooked, saying to pop, What in the world is that pamphlet you're reading with such a devoted expression, Willyum?

It's a little booklet of prose poems, and it's a masterpiece, pop said, and ma said, It must be, judging by your wrapped expression. What's the name of it? she said.

I'll read you one or 2 extracts, pop said.

Wich he started to, saying, Like the breath of an angel on the wings of a dove. Now isn't that a thought for you? he said, and ma said, It is indeed, it's just perfectly beautiful, who wrote the booklet?

Listen to this one, I think it's even btter, As the faintest breath of earliest Spring stirs the budding hyacinth, pop said. Doesn't that cvall up a picture to your eyes, or at least to your nostrils? he said, and ma said, it's lovely, it's short but it's just lovely, what book is it?

Here's one of my favorites, pop said. Eyes half closing, mind half dozing, a million miles away into the perfect future on an opiate cloud, yet exquisitly here to every faintest breath of the swooning present, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum Potts am I ever going to learn the name of that mysterious book?

O, didn't I tek you? pop said. It's called Semmy Annual Catalog from Russell Beezly's Tobacco Shop. It's the very latest edition. Then send me one every summer and one around the first of every year, it's mighty thoughtful of them, he said, and ma said, O hush up, the way you waist a person's time is enough to write a book and here I could of been doing today's bridge problem.

Wich she hurry up started.

Eliminate Seasonal Hazards By Learning Proper Technique Of Cold Weather Driving

Advice is Given by C.E. McTavish, General Motors Official, Who is Leading Authority on Control of Traffic Dangers —— How to Drive on Icy Roads, and in Fog or Mist.

The seasonal hazards which winter adds to motoring in the Dominion could be met and virtually eliminated if motorists would study and practice the proper technique of cold weather driving, in the opinion of C. E. McTavish, who in addition to being general sales manager of General Motors Products of Canada is a leading authority on the control of traffic dangers and is the nominal head of the General Motors Safety Club.

"The assumption that an increase in accident ratio is inevitable under conditions of ice, snow or fog on the highways is entirely unjustified and unfounded," declared Mr. McTavish in a recent interview. "If a man blames treacherous driving conditions for an accident, in nine cases out of ten he is merely seeking to evade his own responsibility."

The commonest road hazard peculiar to winter driving, Mr. McTavish pointed out, was icy road surface. Most skids under this condition, he declared, were the result of sudden brake application or too-rapid turning on curves, and could be prevented by the use of second or first gear for deceleration and speed control; sparing and gentle use of the brakes with the car still in gear; slow and careful taking of turns, and the use of good tires with plenty of tread. In some cases he recommended driving with two wheels on the shoulder of the road, but emphasized that as a general rule when conditions became so hazardous as to require this precaution, no motorist should venture out in his car except under circumstances of the most extreme urgency.

Fog Precautions

To meet the hazard of driving in fog or mist, Mr. McTavish suggested cautious driving "within the range of the headlights", pulling well off the road before stopping to clean the windshield, and the use of fog lamps.

"Probably the least known and most valuable 'trick' of safe driving" concluded Mr. McTavish, "is how to take a curve. Most people apply the brakes when going into a turn. This is wrong. It throws the weight of the car upon the front end, making it hard to steer. Try slowing down before you begin the turn, and then at the moment of turning, accelerate slightly."

RESOLUTION TIME

This is the time for resolution making.

Many New Year's resolutions are made and broken.

Is the making of resolutions to be avoided? and why are so many broken?

Resolutions must be more than mere wishes. They must be the result of decision, backed up by the will.

Failure to keep resolutions may indicate that they are a passing fancy and not seriously held or that the power of habit is seemingly too great to be dominated by the resolve or that there is lack of will.

But a resolution if given a chance to be carried out strengthens the will, liberates the mind from the control of mere habit and routine, and makes possible stronger resolutions.

New Year's is an apt time for resolutions, for believe it or not, in his or her way each person takes a sort of inventory of himself or herself at this season. There is a fresh new year ahead, a clean page not the scored or soiled or marked page of 1938, where the checkered lines of life criss-cross in a bewildering maze. Even the person who says he is making no resolutions has made a resolution which unfortunately he is certain to keep—that is, to make no effort to improve his life in the year 1939.

Scientists say that few people if any tap more than a mere fraction of their powers. Surely New Year's is a time to make a decision to achieve more in the way of self-improvement than in the past. It is a time when it ought to be easier to put all the machinery in the individual makeup to work instead of letting the human plant run at thirty per cent capacity.

There is one thing that may be observed at this time. It is realized that the rigor of Canadian life and the conquest of problems in a young country like Canada make for a strong virile race. But Canadians must not depend on circumstances and conditions to develop them. They must throw themselves and their high resolve into the decisions of life to bring success to themselves as individuals and to the nation. There is always the possibility that there will be too great reliance upon these conditions. On the other hand there is the example of children of foreign born or newcomers, who achieve high place in the race of life in Canada. Such children know from their home life and from their studies that they must make good—they have an inspiration and the result is that sometimes they do outstrip Canadians who have generations of residence in Canada behind them. Such resolves to win life's victories do not wait for New Year's.

Canada offers many opportunities for those of high resolve. Those who are not goaded by worthwhile principles and energy cannot do for Canada what they should do and cannot receive through Canada all the benefits they should receive. People of this country have at their finger-tips something which is like the console of a vast organ — the principles of national life— offering boundless rewards to be realized if the right spirit dominates the effort and if the effort is sustained. There is a call for resolution and the bending of all resources to one great goal — the development of the individual life to the highest expression so as to be a factor in the state.

On the first page of the Record Book 1939 accordingly there should be listed many a resolution made after deep thought and so fired by inspiration that the resolution cannot fail. This resolution should not be selfish, but should include others. Achievement of a good resolution must bring good to others.

ATTITUDE FIRMS

A firming attitude on the part of the democracies has been noticeable for some time in their relations and in their references to the totalitarian powers.

Today the French are standing up to the Italian claims in the Mediterranean and have declared their unalterable resolve to maintain and keep the territory they now have. That there should be no more surrendering to the men of Berlin and Rome is the growing feeling in Britain and in France. Now it is declared that France feels herself capable to handle Italian claims herself alone and that the Franco-Italian territorial question will not be part of the discussions when Chamberlain visits Mussolini.

Factors in this strengthening of opinion against the Rome-Berlin axis include the aftermath of Munich, the rending of territory from Czechoslovakia by Poland and Hungary, evidence of Germany's hand working down the Danube and stretching over into the fertile fields of the Ukraine, the German backing of Italian demands for territory, the pogrom of the Jews, and the recent speeches in which leading Americans have bluntly referred particularly to Naziism.

The totalitarians are not losing time while on the other hand the appeasement method of diplomacy is marking time for the democracies. All the while, if general opinion outside of Germany is correct Germany and its Nazi regime are in a rather bad way economically.

This method of the Rome-Berlin axis to acquire territories—a scheme really aimed at expansion is something which seems to be the crux of the matter. What event or turn of affairs is going to cure the Fascist and Nazi states of this notion of imperialism which has somehow got into their blood and brain.

MY COAL STOVE

Oh ! ! What a joy my stove has been Through many winter days!
It's glow and gleam of ruddy light
Through dreary days and winter nights
Are worth a meed of praise.

A bit old-fashioned it may be,
But like a long-tried friend,
It never failed to do it's part —
So with a fond and grateful heart
It's name I will defend.

When illness came and nights were long
It glowed with friendly cheer,
When heavy was the hand of pain
And slumber sought our eyes in vain,
It's light a comrade dear.

And many a night about the fire
Rang merry song and jest;
With friends around the fireside bright
The hours sped by in keen delight,
For simple joys are best.

And now as by my fire I sit
One thought my spirit cheers,
'Twas love that shed its glowing light
Upon our happy hearthstone bright
Through all the changing years.

OLD PRINTERS NEVER DIE, they just dry up and blow away, or somepin. Here's to W. J. (Bill) Reynolds, of Brockville, who has just celebrated his sixty-fifth anniversary as a member of the Brockville Recorder staff starting under that grand old man of Canadian journalism, Col. David Wylie, and continuing now under another equally celebrated Canadian journalist and humorist, Rt. Hon. George Perry Graham, one-time Provincial Secretary for Ontario, and one-time Minister of Railways for the Dominion, and friend and confidant of Sir Wilfred Laurier. Bill Reynolds is a printer of the old school, one of the lads who graduated from printer's devil status, with all its deviltry and rough jokes of errands for strap oil, left-handed monkey-wrenches, etc., to full-fledged journeyman status and the opportunity to set type by hand for fifteen or twenty cents per thousand "em's"—from there to foreman of the news room and make-up man—to witness the advent of typesetting machines and the vanishing of the old-time hand printer, except the survival of the fittest who adjusted themselves to the machine age with effort and kept in intimate touch with the craft. Bill Reynolds witnessed the heydey of the tramp printer, otherwise known as tourist printer, and his decline and fall before the onslaught of the little brass matrices and the fertile brain of a Mergenthaler. And still Bill Reynolds carries on, and is as alert as ever telling Editor George Graham that the copy hook is empty and unless fed p.d.q. machines will be idle. Editor Graham has tried to persuade Bill Reynolds many times to retire on pension, but Bill cannot see it that way — work is his life and when he stops working he expects quick transfer to the Heavenly Messenger which he hears has gone back to hand composition. Incidentally it might be mentioned as rather odd that in all his years on The Liberal Brockville Recorder, Bill Reynolds has been a Conservative, in fact his brother, Walter Reynolds, is the Legislative member for Brockville riding, having defeated Millionaire George Fulford for that position at the last provincial election. Congratulations friend Bill, go on and live forever.

CHRISTMAS WAS AN EXTRA GAY TIME FOR THE SMITH FAMILY of Fayette County Illinois, for Santa Claus brought a fleet of seven automobiles to the Smith Family,—all on account of a lake of oil being discovered under the Smith farm which heretofore has not raised much but debt and taxes. Oil changed all that and Farmer Smith sold a lease on his 100-acre farm for $50,000, besides a royalty on all the oil produced. Each of six Smith children received a Christmas gift of an automobile, with a seventh car for Ma and Pa Smith. A minor child was given a bank account providing enough to buy a car when he reaches the age of eighteen. And so a little oil spread on the troubled waters of family life changed the domestic picture entirely.

50 YEARS AGO

Dec. 30th, 1888.

Mr. W. H. Gooding of Chicago, Ill., was in the city yesterday. He was formerly connected with Mr. Ford, photographer, in this city and is now one of the proprietors and manager of the Aetna Copying Company in Chicago, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the United States. This is another example of what a Belleville boy, with plenty of pluck and energy can accomplish.

Complaints are being received by the authorities to the effect that persons, who have no business to transact, gather in bunches in the inner market building and indulge in conversation, thereby blocking the aisles. The market is sufficiently crowded as it is with buyers and sellers and something should be done to improve matters.

A Country Editor Looks Back

Twenty years ago last Monday morning we boarded a C.P.R. train at Eganville, Ont., in forty-five degrees below zero weather, and that evening slept in a bed in the Belvedere Hotel, Belleville. Next day at noon we arrived at Deseronto and that same afternoon was among those present in Lawyer Herrington's office in Napanee.

x x x

That was a momentous day for us. We had bought The Deseronto Post. The Post had been suspended in November after the death of its youthful publisher and Deseronto was trying to get along without a newspaper.

x x x

The next day we went back north to pack up and to bid a few friends good-bye, and on January 1, 1919, we took possession of our new business. The first week in January, Deseronto Town Council held its inaugural meeting and passed a resolution, welcoming us to the town and offering us such aid as a town council could offer another employer of labor in a community. That town council was composed of W. J. Malley, mayor; Thos. J. Naylor, reeve; R. J. S. Dewar, E.C. Metcalfe, Geo. E. Clement, John C. Burns, W. H. Harvey and John Dalton, councillors. The clerk was Henry R. Bedford. Today, twenty years later, only two men of those mentioned above are alive,—Dewar, who is county registrar at Belleville, and Burns, a hydro employee at Markham, Ontario.

Twenty years ago! The flu had swept the country and had taken a tremendous toll of lives. The big push in the Great War had seen the German hordes swept back behind the Hindenburg line, had ended with the death of one brother opposite Douai, the severe wounding of another . . . armistice had come . . . a war-weary world was mad with joy that it was all over . . . that there would be no more wars . . . that the world was now safe for democracy and from militarism . . . oh, yes, they told us all that in 1919 and we believed it all. The C.N.R. way-freight was running daily through Deseronto to Napanee while there were passenger trains day and night. Today, twenty years later, there is no railway line from Trenton to Deseronto and trains reach the old mill town by way of Napanee.

x x x

Twenty years ago! Already the buildings at Camp Mohawk and Camp Rathbun had been sold to the wreckers. Already Mr. Erickson of Toronto had purchased all the old DeHaviland planes that had been used for training fliers at the camps and was either flying them to Toronto or was shipping them knocked-down. Already every last one of the hundreds of officers and men at the aviation camps had departed to the four corners of the earth. S. R. Curry, now editor of the Tweed News, was attending Belleville Collegiate and was playing goal for their hockey team.

x x x

Twenty years ago! W. H. Ireland defeated Jesse Funnell for the mayoralty of Trenton by 754 votes to 413. Mark Tripp headed the poll for the council, and other members elected were R. H. Spencer, P. J. O'Rourke, Stan. Langdon, G. H. Sarles and J. H. Jones. School trustees were H. Kemp, C. M. Foster and H. E. Mayhew. Weller's Opera House was Trenton's lone show place. J. A. Pelky was in the coal and wood business. Capt. B. M. Bowen was sailing the M. Sicken. The Rev. R. A. Cranston, late of Palmerston, had been inducted into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Presbyterion Church and had taken up residence in the brick dwelling opposite the high school. Rev. Scott was pastor of Grace Methodist circuit. Prof. Smidt and his wife were preparing to spend their last winter in "The Drift" before departing for France. And The Drift was for sale. And so were the buildings of the British Chemical Company. H. R. Cory (now Mayor Cory) was C.P.R agent; G. W. Arnott was chief of police; L. M. Parks was truant officer. C. K. Temple was manager of the Molson's Bank; J. K. Fraser, the Standard Bank; B. H. Siddall, the Bank of Montreal. The Board of Trade officers that year were Arthur Allen, president; N. J. McNair, vice-president; J. K. Fraser, secretary; H. F. Whittier, treasurer. Geo. Hoag was C. N. R. superintendent at Hornepayne. Trenton was talking about a war memorial. Robt. Whyte was principal of the high school. The LaMorre family had defeated the high school team at hockey and Pat Jennings was challenging the world for them. Sir John Willison, editor of the Toronto Daily News, addressed the Canadian Club in their club rooms in the Jacques Block. Just to mention a few of the Trenton items of that year.

x x x

Twenty years ago! There was no such thing then as the No. 2 Highway as we know it today. Contractors Harvey and Armitage were building a section east of Deseronto the Chisholm Wellage Company had come up from Alexandria or Cornwall to put down a cement highway between Deseronto and Napanee. Editor Maurice Detlor of the Deseronto Post of today was a pupil at the public school where he was probably reciting, "When I'm a man I'll be a printer if I can."

x x x

Twenty years ago! There were two daily papers in Belleville—the Intelligencer, edited by the son of a one-time prime minister of Canada the Ontario, by Morton & Herity. Kingston had the Whig and the Standard. Trenton, the Advocate by P. J. O'Rourke and the Courier by Clarence G. Young. Tweed had two newspapers, the Advocate by Zed. Lafontaine, the News by Alger Bros., now of Oshawa. Stirling had its News and its Argus, a Mr. Currie the dean of all newspapermen in this district, being editor of one of them. Sandy Grant of Tweed was member for the Ontario Legislature; Thomas Thompson, Madoc, represented the riding at Ottawa. W. B. Northrup of Belleville was Clerk of the House of Commons. Another member of Parliament was E. Gus Porter of Belleville.

x x x

Twenty years ago! Deseronto had a team in the Bay of Quinte Baseball League, and so had Trenton. The boys had returned from overseas and those who hadn't spent their seventy dollars a month allowance for rehabilitation were saving it against the day when they would need it. A. B. Calnan was editor of the Picton Gazette, Mr. Steet of the Picton Times. The Deseronto Post was the only weekly paper in the district that was charging, and getting, one dollar and fifty cents a year subscription.

x x x

Twenty years ago! Radios were little known in this part of the country. If Dr. H. A. Boyce did not bring the first one into Deseronto that year he brought it the next to make him one of the first radio owners in the district. Automobiles were not what they are today and neither were the roads, fortunately for the cars. English officers had brought English-made cars into the district and had taken Canadian wives back to the Old Country with them. It is possible that parts of one of these cars may be found around Deseronto yet. "Kitty" Carnew was Crown Attorney at Belleville and H. R. Bedford was police magistrate at Deseronto and T. A. O'Rourke, police magistrate at Trenton.

x x x

Twenty years ago! The Rathbun Company had been dead for some time. Wrecker Morden came down from Shannonville and took away the old boilers. Dominion and Beacon Match factories worked day and night to keep the country "lit" up. Powder plants and iron works absorbed the balance of the employable labour in Deseronto. The town was prosperous, but not spoiled like Trenton where the I.M.B. spent money like a drunken sailor. The True Blue Orphanage at Picton was a busy place, but all the buildings but the big chief's Wigwam on Forester's Island had been removed. C. W. Malley, who was afterwards to succeed his father as druggist and mayor, defeated James Saylor of Trenton at Montreal for the intercollegiate light heavyweight wrestling championship of Canada.

x x x

We could go on and fill this page with names and events and occurrences of that memorable 1919 when we first took of The Post. Few of those we met in those days are in the land of the living today.

x x x

During those past twenty years we have moved (by way of Arnprior) from the south-east corner of the county to the south-west. While oddly enough we learned our ABC's in the north-eastern end of the same county. So this County of Hastings has ever been so close to us that we don't seem to be able to keep away from it.

x x x

During those past twenty years we have given the Bay of Quinte district the best years of our life. And we would do it again, if we had them to give. During those twenty years we have made friends that have proven to be as true as steel, during those twenty years we have not purposely harmed or wronged any man. Thus we can look back at this time without regret or misgiving. We have played our part. That's all.—By Harry M. Moore in Trenton Courier-Advocate.

PATRIOTS

Armed with flimsy spears and shields, their bodies gleaming with oil and paint, a deputation of native warriors from a mountain district of Papua went recently to the magistrate's office in Port Moresby to offer to fight for the British Empire. They had heard of the possibility of war in Europe. "The government is our friend. Who fights him must fight us, too," said the spokesman.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

He Saw A City Destroyed

Rumblings in the mountains of Martinique were followed recently by disastrous landslides on the island's southern neighbor, St. Lucia. St. Lucia and Martinique are linked together in the greatest tragedy in the long history of the West Indies — the eruption of Mount Pelee, which destroyed the chief city of Martinique 36 years ago.

Of the 30,000 persons who stirred in St. Pierre on Martinique the morning of May 8, 1902, the legend has it that only one was alive at nightfall. That one, a negro prisoner, escaped because he had been unable to escape the city dungeon. The burning flood of lava which obliterated the city in a single wave failed to reach the prisoner in his underground cell.

The story of the destruction of St. Pierre has given rise to many fables, created many legends more fantastic than the legend of the negro prisoner. The few witnesses of the event had no time to assimilate the picture. St. Pierre was destroyed in 45 seconds.

The people of St. Pierre had lived too long in the shadow of Pelee to believe that any great danger could come from the mountain. It was believed that the disturbances were signs that the crater was sinking into extinction.

A few men quietly gathered what belongings they could and fled to the southern hills across the bay. M. Clerc, owner of one of the largest sugar plantations on the island, climbed to the height of Mount Parnasse, a mile from the city, and prepared to watch the eruption at his ease.

May 5 they were given their final warning. A river of lava poured through a break in the mountain and rushed to the sea, destroying several factories and taking the lives of 150 men.

At five minutes to eight by M. Clerc's watch on that last morning the streets of St. Pierre were crowded with Frenchmen, Creoles, Hindus, Chinese, Indians and negroes, going to church on Ascension Day. A minute later the streets and the people and the churches were gone, and there was a lake of fire rolling into the sea.

"There were two tremendous explosions, one instantly following the other," Clerc wrote in after years. "The whole top of Mount Pelee was blown to the winds. The burning crater tipped and seemed to spill its whole load of flame on the city. Vast billows of molten substance flowed downward and a canopy of fire hung in the sky."

After the first eruption the mountain subsided in a few hours. About noon M. Clerc and a few companions went down into the city in a futile attempt to ascertain whether there were any survivors. When they came within sight of the molten lake, where the city had been, they saw at once that any rescue attempts would result in their deaths.

The shipping in the harbor was destroyed, with the exception of the schooner Roddam. With 17 of her crew dead, with her decks covered with tons of volcanic ash that made her seem a grey ghost ship, the Roddam took news of the disaster to St. Lucia.

According to legend, the wharfmaster at St. Lucia cried to the captain of the Roddam, "From what part of the world do you come?" and the captain answered: "We come from hell. Tell the world that St. Pierre exists no longer."—Kansas City Times.

Difference in Death Rate of Appendicitis in Two Large Cities

When the death rate for appendicitis in one large city is about three times that of another large city, there must be some reason other than the skill of the surgeons or the staff and equipment of the hospitals.

Dr. Mont R. Reid, Cincinnati, in 'Surgery' states that the lapse of time between the onset of the symptoms and operating appears to be the important factor in determining the death rate. For example in Philadelphia where the length of time between the appearance of the first symptoms and operation is 49 hours, the death rate is 11 per 100,000; whereas in Cincinnati, where the time between onset of symptoms and operation is 91 hours, the death rate is over 30 per 100,000.

Statistics also show that the taking of purgatives definitely increases the death rate.

In communities where intensive campaigns have been conducted to educate the public with respect to dangers of delaying operation and taking purgatives, the death rate has been greatly reduced and doctors have been forced by public sentiment to adopt the policy of advising immediate consultation with a surgeon in cases of acute unruptured appendicitis.

Just as a physician would not now refuse to use antitoxin for diphtheria, so should the physician, in the light of the knowledge that early operation lowers the death rate in appendicitis, not neglect to advise this early operation.

Dr. Reid also states that in his experience when he is sure an acute unruptured appendix is present, he advises immediate surgery. "I have long since refused the responsibility of 'observing' any case this must be borne by the patient this must be borne y the patient or his family."

Another point is that while the typical or 'usual' signs of appendicitis—a pain that starts in region of stomach and then shifts down to lower right side of abdomen and stays there, together with nausea and vomiting—are found in the majority of cases, the appendix may be situated at other than its regular position and so not give the usual symptoms.

We must not think of a campaign to have early operation for appendicitis as a scheme to enrich surgeons but as a campaign to save life. The figures of Cincinnati and Philadelphia prove the truth of this.

TOWN BOOSTER

If news is scarce, look around, dig in and make it. That seems to be the slogan of Editor Curran, of the Sault Star, who has submitted his discoveries of white Indians and Vikings to a credulous newspaper world. There is nothing that the man who importuned Kipling into writing a beautiful verse for the Sault Star memorial won't attempt as long as he can keep Algoma in the limelight. Keep it up, Old Boy. What next?—St. Catharines Standard.

AT HALF-MAST

Commander Hilary P. Mead, Royal Navy, in a letter to the London Times, explains the matter of half-mast ritual:

"There are two distinct theories as to the ritual of half-masting colors; the one relates to death's victory, symbolized by placing death's invisible insignia above the national colors and leaving just sufficient space there for such an imaginary flag; the other subscribes to a sentiment of slovenliness and despondency in mourning whereby the national colors are allowed to trail on the ground or in the sea. In the one case the flag is hoisted rather nearer to the truck and in the other more toward the foot of the staff.

"In modern times there is a growing tendency not to subject the national colors to any sort of indignity such as being humbled in the dust, and so on; therefore it is more usual to accept the first of these two theories. In actual practice the relative breadth of the flag to the length of the staff must be an important factor. If the flag is a large one compared with the size of the staff, then, of course, it will appear to be lowered more than half-staff down."

IMITATING ART

Was the fantastic second career of F. Donald Coster an example of nature imitating art? It is hard to find in fiction an exact parallel for this man who lived two lives in a lifetime, who took off one identity and put on another and who made an artful and inconspicious translation from one career to another. In "Buried Alive" Arnold Bennett wrote of an escape from identity, but in that case it was a harassed artist who sought escape from the penalties of fame through his valet's identity. In "The Late Mattia Pascal" the ever whimsical Luigi Pirandello put an extra twist on the theme; in his book there is not only the attempt to assume a second identity but the even more difficult attempt, marked by tragic disappointment, to return to the first. Connoisseurs of mystery fiction probably would be able to discover an exact parallel for the Musica-Coster case, though it is too early to attempt to discover the parallel. The full story of the translation of Musica into Coster has not been told, perhaps never can be told. There are here and there in the land a few successful practioners of this art of translation, but since their success depends upon continued silence, the world will have to depend on the writers of mystery stories for the formulas on how to take a new name and live a new life. Huck Finn remains a prime exponent of how not to do it; his experiment in assuming a new name and a new character was successful, but in such a hair-raising fashion as to reform him in that respect forever after. Jean Valjean is an example of translation with reformation, so the parallel with the Musica-Coster case is not exact.—New York Sun.

OVERWORKED WORDS

Glamour! How ubiquitous the word has become. Like many another pretty one of its kind it is being seriously overworked and will soon be dead of this slavery. "Thrill" poor ten-a-penny article of every film and feuilleton, was once magical and shiversome. "Thrilling regions of thick-ribbed ice." It meant something to Shakespeare. It means nothing now. The same demise awaits poor "glamour."

You cannot look at a popular print without seeing some reference to a Glamour Girl, a phrase which to Sir Walter Scott would have meant a genuine enchantress but now has been degraded to serve as a verbal tiara for any little "cutey" whose agent can get her a film contract.—Manchester Guardian.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hume, Menie, Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hume, (nee Jennie Mather), of Menie, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on December 26th, (1888-1938). The ceremony was performed by the bride's brother-in-law, Rev. Hugh Shaw of Campbellford and the weather was very rainy, vastly different from the mild balmy day of December 26th, 1938.

The guests were the immediate members of the family. T. J. Hume, wife and three children, Cobourg, Annie Hume B. A., Chief Librarian, Windsor, Elsie W. A. Hume, wife and three children at home, also Mr. Wm. Hume, Mr. and Mrs. W. Rannie, Campbellford, Miss Alice Hume, Rev. and Mrs. Hugh Shaw, Menie, brother and sisters on both sides of the house.

Much appreciated congratulatory letters were received from Stephen's United Church, Hoard's, from the Official Board of Seymour Charge and from Rev. Dr. Reddick, pastor of Seymour Charge, the Ratepayers of Seymour Township at the nomination meeting on Monday, Dec. 26th, also the Officers and Directors of Seymour Agricultural Society.

Numerous letters and cards of congratulatory nature were received from relatives and friends, also telegrams from the Humes at Ottawa, and Mrs. Chas. Rannie, sister of the groom, Fort William. Windsor friends of Miss Annie Hume sent a dozen pink roses; J. P. Hume and Esther, a dozen yellow "mums" which were used in decorating the living room and dining table.

After a delectable dinner, graced by the wedding cake on which were 50, 188-1938 inscribed in red letters, T. J. Hume, the older son, after a few chosen words regarding the nature of the occasion and his daughter Phyllis, the eldest granddaughter, presented her grandparents, on behalf of their sons and daughters with a reversible blanket of gold and rose; the groom of fifty years replied, thanking the family and remarking on the changes that have occurred since the rainy December evening he was married, and saying that it had been a great privilege to witness these advances. T. J. Hume then called on all the adults present to say a few words.

The dinner party broke up with the singing of one verse of "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" and the afternoon was pleasantly spent in recalling events of the years gone by.

Friends Honor Thurlow Couple On 35th Wedding Anniversary

On Saturday evening, December 17th, about thirty friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Hamilton, in the form of a surprise party to honor them on their thirty-fifth wedding anniversary. Miss Anne Brown read the address and Mr. Wm. Casey presented them with a silver relish and chop dish. Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton both made suitable replies and all sang "For they are jolly good fellows." A delicious lunch was then served by the ladies. The address follows:

R. R. 6, Belleville, Ont.,
December 17, 1938.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton,
Dear Friends:—

We, a few of your nearest neighbors, have come tonight to celebrate with you your thirty-fifth wedding anniversary. Many of the old friends of thirty-five years ago have been taken, but we, who are left, feel the need of a get-together of this kind to renew friendships and neighborliness which should be the bonds uniting communities.

The hurry and bustle of each day's activities seem to leave little time for neighbors to get together in this informal way, but our meeting here tonight is simply to let you know that we do remember our old friends wish God's blessing upon you both, hoping you may be spared to celebrate many more anniversaries of your wedding.

What good times we have had here with you! No matter how many, or how often we came you always were the charming host and hostess.

Whenever you were asked to help in the community you were always willing to do so, and our church has reaped the benefit of your faithful and untiring services.

We ask you to accept this silver relish and chop dish as a small token of our esteem.

Signed on behalf of your near friends and neighbors,

Mrs. F. Walker
Mrs. W. Casey
Mrs. F. Easton
Mrs. E. W. Brown.

IT'S YOU I WANT!

Thrilling romantic serial by Allene Corliss

He even enjoyed the fact that whenever he tried to make love to this girl she laughed at him.

"No," said Jay, lounging against the rail shielding a match flame with his cupped hands, "I don't like mine much. Let's take yours."

"All right. Let's take mine. Pure New England. Back as far as the eye can read. Good, unadulterated Commonwealth of Massachusetts stock. None of us have ever wandered far from Boston. Helena got to New York. And eventually to Paris. That gave the family an awful wrench. But her father left her ten thousand dollars in Liberty bonds, so no one could do anything about it."

"She really is a cousin then?"

"Yes, of course. I've always adored her. She's ten years older than I am and much cleverer, naturally. Her magazine sends her to Paris for two months every year. The rest of the time she has an apartment in New York and does much as she likes."

"While you?"

Whitney grinned. "I live on Beacon Hill with my great-aunt Hester Prentice. But it's not as bad as it sounds. I get around a lot. This trip to Europe, for instance.."

"Tell me," said Jay, "about the rest of your family. That is, besides Great-aunt Hester, and Helena."

"Well, there aren't so many of us. As a family, we sort of skipped one entire generation. The war accounts for Scott's father, and I lost both my parents with the flu and Tod's went down on the Titanic the year I was born...."

"Scott," said Jay Nowell, "is the cousin you fell in love with when you were fifteen. But who is Tod?"

Whitney laughed. It was a very pleasant sound. And suddenly Jay thought that a word she had used to describe Scott Prentice described her, too. She was the gayest person he had ever known. Not in any noisy, hot-cha way. But quietly, as if gaiety were an integral part of her personality. She was gay and proud and very sure of herself. That came, he supposed, from being properly brought up, with a permanent, definite background. If tragedy had touched her as a child, it had certainly never been allowed to encroach upon the rest of her life.

She said: "Why, Tod is another cousin. Tod and Scott and I. We've grown up together."

"But you're going to marry Scott." It was a statement not a question. Pronounced softly. With no infection. Jay was like that. At twenty-seven his lean, dark face was immobile. His lips seldom smiled. His dark gray eyes remained steady and inscrutable beneath narrow lids. His voice never betrayed any emotion. A weary tolerance of things. A stoic acceptance of the fact that there was nothing new....or very important ....under the sun. You saw him suddenly as a small boy being handed over from one nursemaid to another. As a young boy being eased through a series of expensive schools. As a young man going wearily from one pleasure resort to another....

And you were sorry for him. And wished that things had been different for him. But nothing could be done about it now. It was too late. You sensed that, too.

"Yes, of course," she answered him casually, her eyes leaving him and going up the Harbor. They'd passed Nix's Mate and Long Island and were getting in. Straight ahead at the end of the Harbor was Charleston Navy Yard. To the right was the flat expanse of the East Boston airport. In a few minutes they would be close enough to see the people on the pier as individuals and not just a flutter of white handkerchiefs, a blur of dark color. They would be able to distinguish faces. Scott's face. Dear and laughing and excited. His blond head shining in the sunlight.

Scott hadn't wanted her to go on this trip. He had begged her to stay home. To marry him. That last night at Kay Reynold's dance at the Somerset....

CHAPTER V

They had left the party early and he had driven her home. But first they had just driven around. It had been a gorgeous night. Pale with spring moonlight. Mellow with a promise of rain. They had ended up somewhere out in the country—near Charles River Village—and Scott had parked the car and they had got out and walked down a narrow lane to the edge of a river. A river that lay still and silver-white in the moonlight.

Whitney remembered how her stiff white organdy dress had swished about her ankles and how absurd Scott had looked in tails on the country road. They had both laughed about it and then Scott had caught her up in his arms and kissed her and said: "Don't go, Whit. Don't leave me. Stay here and marry me this week. Three months are so long...."

She had trembled in his arms and shaken her head. "No, darling. I can't. I want to go on this trip. I want to go to Paris and see Helena. Besides, we haven't any money.... that is, not enough. In another year I'll be twenty-one and there is a trust fund..it isn't a lot but it will be enough to start on and you need another year to get established with your firm."

Scott had said: "I need you. We can live on what I'm making now if we are very careful."

"But you'd hate it, darling. You're horribly extravagant. You spend every cent you make and more, too. You know you do. And you would hate a two-room apartment and no money for taxis and theatres and football games and having to have your shoes resoled and being careful about how many clean shirts you wore on account of the laundry bill...."

Scott denied it. Fervently. He said: "I wouldn't like it for you.. our not having any money. But I wouldn't mind for myself. Not if I had you....not if we were married, sweet."

But he would have. And she knew it. He knew it, too. Even though he wouldn't admit it. So they had stayed there in the moonlight a little longer and then he had taken her home and the next day she had sailed for Europe.

She had said to him: "Have a good time....but not too good a time."

And he had said: "That may be hard to manage....but I'll try and the same to you, darling."

Well, she had had a good time. But she had missed Scott terrifically. It all just went to prove what she had always known: that for her there could be only him. A life in which he didn't figure .... importantly....was utterly incomprehensible to her. She had told Jay Nowell the truth. She had fallen in love with Scott when she was fifteen. During her first Christmas vacation. It was the year she had her first evening gown. A yellow chiffon affair that came barely to her knees in front and dipped enchantingly to her ankles at the back. And her dark hair was shingled and everyone was talking about a young orchestra leader named Rudy Vallee and there was a new dance called the Charleston. You learned to dance it clinging to the backs of chairs. It was a very gay vacation with everyone. that is, all the girls she knew, wearing tomboy raccoon coats and experimenting warily with windblown bobs and orange lipstick. And boys back from Groton and Andover and all the other schools and being allowed to go. unchaperoned. to tea dances and the movies. It was the winter that everyone was dancing to the strains of "Melancholy Baby" and humming "Always." There were still as many phonographs as radios. It was a winter of jazz and "blues" singers and rolled chiffon stockings and a perfect epidemic of new slang expressions. Such as the classic, "So's your old man." She had a gay, exciting and completely satisfactory Christmas vacation. And she fell in love with Scott Prentice. He had been twenty that year and a Harvard sophomore. He had been in love with Paula Webb. Paula was twenty-six and divorced and very lovely. She had worn a slim tan lapin coat that vacation and a tight black hat drawn down over her ears with only a curve of dark gold hair showing on the curve of each ivory cheek. She had had a slim boy's figure and brown velvet eyes and a Southern drawl and she had been able to do the Charleston like nobody's business. She drove her own car, a long-nosed cream-colored roadster, and lived with a negative relative in Cambridge and went to all the football games and the college dances and knew all the right answers. And Whitney hated her.

Scott kissed her twice that vacation. Once when she arrived home and again when she left. Dutiful, brotherly kissess that he forgot the next minute and that she treasured for months afterwards. She saw him perhaps four times altogether during the two weeks she was home. Each of these times was at a family dinner. She saw much more of Tod, who was only a year younger than Scott but had seemed to take longer about growing up. Tod took her skating and to the movies. He took her to a hockey game. He even went dancing with her. Scott was much too busy with other more sophisticated, adult pleasures.

And then, miraculously, she had caught up with him. It hadn't taken long. A year of two. And Scott had looked at her one day and seen what had happened. Seen that somewhere along the way she had stopped being a long-legged child and had become.... well, exactly what she was....lovely and adult and desirable. He had kissed her. again then. Quite differently. He had said: "Whit, darling, you're a knockout. You've grown up beautifully. From now on you're my girl, understand?"

She had understood, all right. She had wanted to say: "Of course I have grown up beautifully. I've worked hard at it for years....so you would like me, Scott....so you would like me better than Paula Webb."

Only, of course, by now there was no Paula Webb. There hadn't been for years. There'd been a whole flock of others since her but somehow these didn't seem to matter. They were all blotted out in that first kiss....completely washed up by Scott's words: "from now on you're my girl, understand?"

So for some time now she had been Scott's girl.

LOOKING BACK AT SPORT'S BIG MOMENTS

1. Red Storey (64) runs wild against Winnipeg Blue Bombers as Toronto Argonauts defeat western champions, 30-7. 2. Seabiscuit defeats War Admiral in match race at Pimlico. 3. Don Budge, monopolist of tennis titles. 4. Chicago Black Hawks happy after winning Stanley Cup. 5. Helen Wills Moody received congratulations from Helen Jacobs after beating her at Wimbledon. 6. Gabby Hartnett, LEFT, shakes hands with Joe McCarthy before world series. 7. Capt. Geo. Eyston breaks world's land speed record as he travels 357.5 m.p.h. 8. Gordon Drillon, leading scorer in National Hockey League. 9. Ralph Guldahl, winner of two successive U.S. open golf titles, and three straight western opens. 10. Henry Armstrong, sensation of the year in boxing circles. 11. Hank Greenberg, whose 58 home runs left him just two short of Babe Ruth's major league record. 12. Joe Louis knocks out Max Schmeling in two minutes and four seconds of their fight for the world's heavyweight championship. 13. Leonard Hutton, who scored 364 runs during one stay at the wickets in the test matches.

Year Going Out Supplied Fans With Many Thrilling Moments

Another year has almost run its allotted span and it seems fitting to glance back and conjure up again the thrilling moments and outstanding personalities that flashed on the scene during the past 12 months. And so we present a composite picture of the international sport scene for the past year. Let's see what we have to look back over......

1. Three months of campaigning on Canadian gridirons reached a peak when Winnipeg Blue Bombers, champions of western Canada, and Toronto Argonauts, eastern monarchs, met in Toronto for the Dominion crown and the Grey Cup. The stirring game was climaxed by a sensational fourth quarter drive by Argos that gave them the game, 30-7. One of the greatest one-man exhibitions ever seen on a Canadian field was staged by Red Storey who galloped over the Winnipeg line for three touchdowns.

2. Among the many horse races that will be recalled by turf followers in years to come will be the match race held at Pimlico between War Admiral and Seabiscuit, a race that stirred up a tremendous amount of interest when run in November, after having been originally scheduled in May. Seabiscuit finished the winner by four lengths after a hard battle, witnessed by 40,000 spectators.

3. Don Budge was the year's one-man tennis show. The tennis world was completely dominated by the young Californian, who turned pro at the close of the amateur season. In addition to helping United States retain the Davis Cup, Don performed the unprecedented feat of capturing the four major singles titles, Australian, French, British and American, in the same year.

4. Chicago Black Hawks, after finishing third in the American division of the National Hockey League, came roaring through the playoffs in smashing style and topped off a season of surprises by snatching three of four games and the Stanley Cup from Toronto Maple Leafs in the finals. Bill Stewart, American-born manager of the team, became the "miracle man" of 1938.

5. The most dramatic moment on the year's tennis calendar took place when Helen Wills Moody staged a grand comeback in the game she once dominated, and captured the all-England singles crown at Wimbledon when she downed her arch-rival, Helen Jacobs, in the final, 6-4, 6-0. Miss Jacobs injured her right ankle during the match, but Mrs. Moody kept up a merciless game and coldly accepted congratulations afterwards, arousing a storm of controversy among fans and writers.

6. Gabby Hartnett led Chicago Cubs to a baseball pennant in the National League, after taking over in mid-season from Charlie Grimm, while in the American, Joe McCarthy, boss of New York Yankees, led McCarthy's men steamrolled over the Cubs in four straight games in the world series for their third consecutive world championship, a new record.

7. The Thunderbolt, with Capt. Geo. T. Eyston, of England, in the cockpit, roared over the salt flats at Bonneville, Utah, to establish a new land speed record of 357.5 m.p.h. Eyston sped to a new record on Sept. 16, the day after John Cobb, a fellow-countryman had broken Eyston's previous mark.

8. In his second year in the National Hockey League, Gordon Drillon, a product of the Maritimes, scored 26 goals and was credited with the same number of assists to lead the major league scorers with a point total of 52. He had a two point lead over his teammate Syl Apps.

9. Ralph Guldahl, No. 1 golfer of the year, triumphed in the western United States open golf championship for the third year in a row, and in addition took the U. S. open for the second consecutive year. He was generally rated the links' best despite the larger earnings of Sam Snead.

10. The fighter of the year, and in some quarters named the athlete of the year, was Henry Armstrong, perpetual motion Negro fighter, who captured the world's welter and light weight titles to add to the featherweight crown he had won in 1937. He thus became the first man in ring history to hold three world's titles at the same time.

11. Hank Greenberg, slugging first baseman with Detroit Tigers in the American League, provided the best individual thrill of the ball season when he made a great effort to break Babe Ruth's record of 60 home runs in one season. his sluggers to another easy win. Through August and September, most of the attention of American League fans was focussed on Hank, but he couldn't quite make it and wound up the season with a total of 58, tying Jimmy Foxx for the second best four-bagger total in a season.

12. Two minutes and four seconds after Max Schmeling sat in his corner of the ring in Yankee Stadium, N.Y., confident of regaining the world's heavyweight boxing championship, his hopes were blasted by the dynamite-ladenfists of Champion Joe Louis, acclaimed one of the greatest of the long line of titleholders, who lept from his corner with as devastating an attack as the ring has ever seen, to score a first round knockout and avenge his loss to Schmeling two years before.

13. Staying at the wickets for 13¼ hours, Leonard Hutton, 22-year-old English cricketer, gave the followers of the ancient game their greatest thrill of 1938, when he hammered Australian bowling for a total of 364 runs, more than any one else had ever scored in the 64 year history of the test matches.

Americans in Third Place by 4-2 Victory Over the Bruins; Black Hawks Drop to Fourth

Keep Punching Boys Only Team to Beat Boston Twice This Season

1,500 PRESENT

Veterans of Detroit Squad Set Pace in Win Over Hawks

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Hockey's most astute dealer in old gold, Mervyn (Red) Dutton, has brought his hock-shop accumulation of jewellery under every National League test and proved its value.

In the two years since the league took over New York Americans' franchise and told Dutton to rebuild the club's ailing fortunes, he has made them a greater power than some teams built by costly farm systems. Through clever dealing, and under liberal polishing with the banner that reads "keep punching," the Dutton collection has come up with the N.H.L. leaders.

The Americans rose last night into undisputed possession of third place when they defeated the first-place Boston Bruins 4-2 at New York. They became the first team to beat the Bruins twice this season and the first to score four times on a single night against young Frank Brimsek since he replaced Tiny Thompson in Boston's goal.

Hawks Now Fourth

Chicago Black Hawks, tied with Americans before the night's program, dropped into fourth position by losing to Detroit. The Red Wings, who haven't been beaten by the Hawks all season, gave one of their best performances despite a crippled lineup in their 4-1 victory at Detroit.

Art Jackson, bought by Dutton this fall from Boston, and Tommy Anderson, who used to play with Detroit, scored twice each for Americans. A crowd of 15,000 in Madison Square Garden watched the home team go ahead early and pull to the front again after Bruins had tied the score in the second period.

Minus Three Stars

Minus three of their young stars, Alex Motter, Mud Bruneteau and Eddie Wares, the Red Wings got first-class service from such veterans as Marty Barry, Chuck Conacher, Hec Kilrea and Tiny Thompson and from Gus Giesebrecht, up from the International-American League farm at Pittsburgh.

Barry sent the Wings to the front after 19 minutes and Conacher made the lead 2-0 with a blazing shot in the second period. Kilrea increased it in the third and Thompson defied every Hawk attack until Earl Robinson beat him with half the period gone. Then Giesebrecht completed the scoring with five minutes to play.

INJURY SERIOUS

Life for Jack Adams, manager of Detroit Red Wings, is practically no fun these days, as his team fluctuates between sixth and seventh place in the National League. In addition to which he is getting more than his share of injuries. Modere (Mud) Bruneteau (above), crashed into the boards in a game in Toronto, and an injury that looked as if it would keep him out for maybe a week, now may keep him out for six weeks, and possibly for the rest of the season. Mud injured the ligaments in his knee and an operation may be necessary.

Widening Blue Line Reduces Whistle Tooting to Minimum

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—National League Hockey fans may not realize it but the continuous peep of the referee's whistle which used to pierce their ear drums and rouse their ire has been reduced to what amounts to an occasional toot this year. All because 10 inches were added to the blue line.

And the fans can thank Manager Conn Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs who pioneered in the movement for a wider blue line.

Since the line was widened from two to 12 inches and a minor revision made in the rule about crossing it the number of offsides has been cut in half and play speeded up 50 per cent, estimates Smythe.

"Why, I've seen our three forward lines changed without a letup in play," continued the Leaf official. "Sometimes it has been necessary to create a deliberate offside to stop the play."

With fewer stoppages the periods are played in less elapsed time. Smythe said some sessions during the current season have occupied just 23 minutes. In other years the periods have extended beyond the half hour.

Longer Intervals

Thus the club management, rather than send the fans home too early, have been making the interval longer between periods.

Smythe said he got the idea for a wider blue line from a letter written by a fan to a newspaper in Chicago. The fans was fed up with frequent offsides and thought something should be done about it.

While on his pet topic, the Maple Leafs' mentor mentioned the matter of numerous facial cuts suffered by players this season. He thought the wearing of helmets was responsible to a certain extent for these injuries.

"Some players, because they're protected by helmets, develop the tendency of carrying their sticks high and also get careless about how they wield them," he said.

Smythe, however, did not suggest helmets be banned.

HOCKEY SEASON TO OPEN TONIGHT

Junior "C" Team to Meet Picton Squad at Hume Arena

Inaugurating the junior hockey series in Belleville and incidentally the first game of the great winter pastime to be played here, "Toots" Holway's fast travelling beardless youngsters will cross sticks with the smart Picton junior squad in the opening tussle of the Junior "C" O.H.A. series at the Hume Arena tonight.

Picton who bowed to the Trenton sextette last night in their opening game in the Prince Edward County town by a 3-2 score, were by no means disgraced by their initial setback, and the Holway-coached kids will need to travel "all out" to knock off a victory in their opening encounter.

However, the local youngsters have not been letting the figurative grass grow under their hockey feet. Under the keen supervision of their coach, they have been practicing faithfully, are full of confidence yet not to the point where they have reached the stage of cockiness. They will step on the ice, impressed with the fact that they will have to give their best if they want to down the Picton crew, who showed surprising form in their opening game last night

However it should be a stirring battle and one that should augur well for the high class junior series that will form part of the hockey bill of fare for fans of this city and district this winter.

Local fans should get behind the young fellows and encourage them by their attendance for they are the potential big league stars of the future, and if Belleville is to regain any of the sports glory made on the diamond and hockey rinks in years gone by, fans must realize that only by the fostering and training of the youth of the city can this be done.

Recreation Alleys

The Deacon Sportwear won the first half of Major League last night at the Recreation alley by taking 3 points from the Belleville Fruit.

ARGOS ARE VOTED BEST TEAM FOR THE SECOND TIME

Football Squad Rolled up 79 Points in Canadian Press Poll

GRADS ARE SECOND

Noel MacDonald Voted Outstanding Girl Athlete of Year

(By Sydney Gruson, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—Winners and still champions, Toronto Argonauts have been voted the outstanding team in Canadian sport for the second straight year.

Capturing the fancy of sports editors from coast to coast, Argos rolled up 79 points of a possible 93 in the annual Canadian press poll. Thirty-one editors voted, with three points for their first choice, two for second and one for third. It was Argos from the first return.

Edmonton Grads had supporters for winning another women's basketball championship and Trail Smoke Eaters received praise for their capture of the Allan Cup and the senior amateur hockey championship. But the Argo drive to a second successive National football title was as unbeatable in the voting as the team on the field.

Grads, who produced the outstanding girl athlete of the year in Noel MacDonald, their centre, wound up in second place with 38 points and Smoke Eaters were third with 28.

Picked First by 23

All but one editor placed Argos among their three choices and 21 of the 33 had them as the No. 1 team. Argos earned the honors by providing the country's football fans with some of the most thrilling action seen on a Canadian gridiron.

They flashed a brilliant offensive and a steady defence in marching first to the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union championship, then to the eastern title and finally past Winnipeg Blue Bombers to the Canadian championship. Their 30-7 victory over Bombers was the ultimate in football thrills.

Grads have been winning basketball championships so long now most people have given up counting. Since Jan. 1, 1922, they have won more than 300 games and lost only 17. They have held the North American championship 10 times since 1923, always under direction of Percy Page.

Smoke Eaters Close

Smoke Eaters, at present on a tour of Europe, won the Allan Cup in a bitter four-game series at Saskatoon and Calgary against Cornwall Flyers, Eeastern champions. They have not lost a game against Europe's finest teams.

St. Boniface Seals, who won the junior hockey championship in Toronto against Oshawa in a five-game series, and St. Catharines Athletics, senior lacrosse champions, were the other teams to draw more than four points. Seals had 13 and Athletics 10.

Miss MacDonald, 23-year-old stenographer and centre for Grads since 1933, was announced last night as the best girl athlete of the year. She received 30 points in the C.P. poll to 24 for Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, Canadian women's golf champion. Robina Higgins of Winnipeg, champion javelin thrower, was third with 16 points.

FOXBORO SQUAD IN VETERAN CLASS

Number of Old Campaigners to Form Nucleus of Team

Foxboro, Dec. 30 (Special)—With the fading of Christmas, more seasonable weather for ice making is upon us and the boys of this village and vicinity, who are hockey enthusiasts will be afforded the opportunity of getting in a little practice before their playing season opens. The local boys had little hopes of entering a team in any league, when the hockey season came around this year; they had all the necessary equipment and twenty or more boys were anxious to play, but they could find no manager. Mr. Jack Stewart, however, eventually was persuaded by the boys to take over the managerial reins and a team was entered in the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League along with West Huntingdon, Zion's Hill, Cannifton and Glen Ross. All games are to be played in the Stirling arena and the schedule is billed to get underway shortly after the New Year.

Number of Young Players

Manager Stewart has a host of young players coming along but the team will be built around such old campaigners as Gordon Walt, Ab. Seeley, the Guay boys, Ralph Campbell, Frank Wilson and a few others, all of whom have had many years of hockey experience behind them. At the last meeting of the league the Foxboro management handed in twenty-five names, all of which complied with the residence ruling, but this number must be whittled down to a limit of fifteen players by playoff time.

Arrangements are being completed whereby a portion of the United Church grounds will be turned into a temporary rink for the winter months and flooding operations now getting underway. This will make it unnecessary for the boys to go to Stirling, whenever they wish to get a little practice and the boys are all very enthusiastic over the plans. The best of luck is wished Mr. Stewart in his new endeavour as a hockey coach and if his charges come through with flying colors, which the team of a couple of years ago did when they copped the league title everyone will be happy.

No Outside Talent

No outside talent is being allowed this season as teams are restricted to choosing their players within a certain mileage limit. The ruling was deemed advisable in an effort to bring the league back to the popularity which it enjoyed a few years ago when local talent predominated. With an evenly balanced league such as is promised this season there ought to be many exciting games such as were enjoyed by the fans some years ago when the arena was packed for every tussle.

Allan and Memorial Cup Finals Temporarily Set by Executive

Teams May Receive Playoff Cuts in Future Finals

COOPERATION SOUGHT

Montreal, Dec. 30 (CP)—Eastern executive of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association swung into the second day of its two-day meeting today with a long list of decisions behind and temporary setting of Allan and Memorial Cup finals and discussions of possible injury-insurance for playoff contenders still to come.

Delegates wasted no time plunging into action yesterday, and by the end of the day a new system of playoffs between Maritime and Quebec representatives had been approved, a policy of close co-operation with the National Hockey League and United States hockey bodies upheld, and a system of playoff cuts for competing clubs suggested.

The new playoff system, designed to give the Maritimes at least part of an inter-regional competition each year, calls for a three-of-five series to replace the present best-of-three, with the first two games in the Maritimes and the others in Montreal.

Group Insurance

While the Maritime-Quebec series is on, starting March 18, Ottawa district winners will meet the Ontario Hockey Association champions in a best-of-three series, winners of the two groups to meet for the eastern final.

For the Memorial Cup, Ottawa district winners will travel to the Maritimes, winners to meet Quebec finalists with O.H.A. champions drawing a bye into the eastern finals.

In addition to setting temporary venue of senior and junior Dominion finals, it was expected delegates today would discuss a system of group-insurance to cover all players taking part in Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns. The matter was mentioned yesterday and left until today for further consideration.

Delegates endorsed a policy of co-operation with the N.H.L. as expressed in the interim agreement between the two bodies effective since last summer, mentioning specifically the case of Eddie Finnigan of Ottawa who has been barred from the C.A.H.A. until he straightens out a tangle with the N.H.L. over broken contract with Providence Reds. President Dr. W. G. Hardy plans to meet Frank Calder, N.H.L. President in an attempt to smooth over the three-year-old dispute.

Co-operation Sought

Co-operation with hockey bodies in the United States and Britain was also stressed as the best means of controlling the sport in Canada and to prevent wholesale raiding. President Hardy intimated differences between the C.A.H.A. and the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States would be settled within a month.

A plan whereby clubs taking part in Allan and Memorial Cup playdowns would divide 10 per cent of the net profits from playoff games on a pro rata according to the number of games played and the distance travelled, was approved for submission to the general meeting of the C.A.H.A. in the spring.

The playoff cuts would be in addition to playoff grants already given which delegates felt had not always reimbursed clubs for travelling expenses in the past.

SCOTLAND STAGES BIG WEEK-END OF SOCCER MATCHES

Glasgow Rangers and Celtics to Meet at Ibrox Park, Monday

RANGERS ON TOP

English Loop to Stage Interesting Matches Over Holiday

London, Dec. 30 (CP Cable) — Soccer interest shifts at the week-end to Scotland where the game plays a big part in New Year's celebrations. First division teams play three matches in four days, one more than members of the second division.

But the big holiday program will be carried out under conditions totally unlike those which prevailed for England's big doings at Christmas. A thaw has made gridirons like quagmires.

The annual battle between Glasgow Rangers and Celtic—probably the most gruelling struggle of the season—will be played before a capacity crowd at Ibrox Park on Monday. Last year the light blues won the corresponding match 3-1 and on their recent showing they should chalk up another victory

Saturday, Rangers are likely to retain their five-point margin over the Celts and Hearts at the expense of Ayr United, but two days later they are away to the neighboring Partick outfit which is performing in high gear this season.

Joint Holders of Second

The tussle between Celtic and Hearts Saturday is second only in importance to that between "the Old Firm." The Glasgow Irishmen and Edinburgh's top-ranking team are joint holders of second place in the championship race with 29 points. The result may go either way. Celtic rounds out its holiday schedule with a match against Queen's Park at Parkhead.

Following the match with Celtic, Hearts return to the Scottish capital for a match with their cross-town rivals, Hibernians, Jan. 2, and the following day go to Arbroath.

Tired English league teams will also play on muddy grounds and a number of upsets may be recorded. Feature match of the day is that between Newcastle United and Sheffield United, candidates for promotion in the second division. The teams tied for second place two points behind Blackburn Rovers, will play at Newcastle.

Derby County, leader in the championship race, opposes Aston Villa at Derby and Everton, runner-up, three points behind the pace-making Midlanders, is away to Brentford. The Toffeemakers will be strengthened by the inclusion of A. Stevenson, Irish International inside-left, who missed the Christmas matches through injury.

BOBBY PEARCE, NOTED OARSMAN, GIVEN TROPHY

Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy to be Presented January 14

OUTSTANDING ATHLETE

Retains World's Title Few Days After Death of His Wife

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)— Bobby Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., world professional sculling champion, was announced today as winner of the Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy, awarded annually to the year's outstanding athlete named by a committee of five.

The committee, headed by P. J. Mulqueen, chairman of the Canadian Olympic Committee, considered a large number of candidates, professional and amateur, men and women. It was announced the vote on Pearce was unanimous.

The Lou E. Marsh trophy, put up in memory of the late sports editor of the Toronto Daily Star, was first awarded in 1936 to Dr. Phil Edwards, Montreal's great middle-distance runner. A year ago it went to Marshal Cleland of Troy, Ont., noted horseman.

Overcome Handicap

The committee took into consideration, as it must under the deed of gift, "Handicaps Overcome" by athletes on their way to the top. The mighty Pearce, unbeaten in all his career, retained his world title last summer just a few days after the death of his wife.

The Australian-born champ trained under the shadow of his wife's illness for his contest in Toronto with Evans Paddon, Australian champion. But he conquered the challenger with ease in their three-mile engagement at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Ruled Amateurs

Before turning professional, Pearce ruled the world's amateur scullers from 1928 to 1932. He won Olympic championships at Amsterdam in 1928 and at Los Angeles in 1932. He settled in Hamilton after capturing the British Empire games title there in 1930. Later he knocked off the Diamond Sculls and numerous Canadian and United States events.

The Marsh trophy committee did not announce the ranking of athletes under Pearce but made public the following who were given serious consideration: Jack Purcell, Toronto, world professional Badminton champion; Bob Pirie, Toronto, the country's outstanding swimmer; Mrs. Dorothy McKenzie Walton, Toronto, Canadian women's badminton singles champion.

Jack Flavelie, Toronto, Canadian and United States 150-pound sculling champion; Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen, Toronto, Canadian women's open golf champion; Robina Higgins, Winnipeg, javelin thrower; Noel MacDonald, Edmonton, basketball star; Bill Fritz, Toronto, sprinter; Eric Coy, Winnipeg, weight-thrower; Terry Evans, Toronto, amateur wrestler; Mrs. Edward Gooderham Toronto, Ontario women's golf champion.

Judges were Mr. Mulqueen, Elwood Hunghes, General Manager of the Canadian National exhibition; T. H. C. Alison, President of the Canadian Association of amateur oarsmen; Oscar Pearson, Y.M.C.A. executive, and Charles Ring, donor of the Marsh trophy.

Pearce will be presented with the trophy here Jan. 14.

Ted Smith Wins At Junior Ping Pong

The junior members of the Y.M.C.A. engaged in a ping pong tournament Thursday morning as one feature of the holiday week programme.

A round robin best three out of five games, with each player entered resulted in the following standing: 1 Ted Smith. 2 Eric Cooper, 3 Bob Byrnes, Cliff Lazenby, Ron Salisbury, tied for 3rd.

After the games the boys enjoyed the use of showers and swimming pool.

Sports Roundup

(By Drew Middleton Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, Dec. 30 (AP)— You don't suppose Jimmy Johnston is kidding anyone with that list of ranking heavyweights he got out, do you?....The boy bandit puts Bob Pastor in the No. 1 spot as the outstanding challenger for Joe Louis' title....And Maxie Rosenbloom right after him....Why not unknown Winston....Accused of being slightly partism—since he owns Pastor from noggin to dogs—Brother Johnston bellowed: "That has nothing to do with it."…. People are more fun than anybody.

John Brennan the big Michigan guard is just a little fellow around home....He stands six foot two inches and weighs 200 pounds but is the smallest man in his family in three generations....Lou Gehrig claims the Yanks, who bunted less than any other Major League team, know how to bunt all right...."But McCarthy takes the signal off a lot ....We get it and are set to bunt when he notices an infielder shifting or something like that....Then he takes it off....But you'll notice that when we do bunt, we bunt successfully."

It is pleasing to learn that Marshall Goldberg of Pitt will play the left halfback position on the all-east team next Monday.... This means Goldberg will get more chances to break loose....After a dullish two weeks here the athletes are rolling in....Elly Vines is working out for the opening of his "20-weeks war" with Don Budge and is worried over the loss of his competitive edge....Joseph Louis Barrow is at Pompton Lakes and John Henry Lewis, his challenger at Summit.

The boys all think Don Budge will knock the tar out of Elly Vines the first time they meet but that after the first couple of matches comrade Vines will make Budge look like an amateur.

HIGH WIND WRECKS PEA-VINING STATION

Whirling and twisting in almost cyclonic fury, the terrific gale that swept Prince Edward County this week left in its wake a mass of tangled wreckage and ruins of what was formerly a pea-vining station, property of the Canadian Canners Ltd., at Bethel a few miles southeast of Demorestville.

The building withstood the onslaught of the elements for three hours, then gradually crumpled beneath the relentless attack and crashed to the ground, a heap of twisted wreckage. The station housed two pea-vining machines, and was in a fair state of repair, it is stated.

HORSE AND CUTTER DRAW ADMIRING GAZE OF PEDESTRIANS

Sleigh bells chimed in the city last evening and pedestrians along Front Street drew up to the curb to admire the novel sight of [illegible] old-fashioned cutter driven in gay style by an elderly resident of the district who apparently felt conscious of the admiring stares of local residents as he drove along. An old-time buffalo robe billowed out behind the cutter which was drawn by a steaming, hackney type horse, head held high as if proud of the privilege granted. Silvery chimes bounced with each step.

Today several bob sleighs from the country, and coal sleds within the city were observed on the streets, while the sound of bells rose above the purr of motor cars.

Restaurant Customer Pays Check of Diner Who Had no Money

The supper crowd had gone, and tables cleared in the downtown restaurant. Only one or two lingering diners remained to toy with the turkey croquettes, piece de resistance of the present tag end of the holiday season.

He entered, quietly, unobtrusively, seating himself at one of the middle tables, eye scanning the bill-of-fare even before a well-worn overcoat had been hung on the hook. From the menu he picked food a hungry man would choose.

From soup to the last course of pie he ate stolidly heartily, wiping his lips on the paper napkin as he finished, then leaned back and beckoned the soft-shoed, hovering waiter.

he announced calmly, as the cus- he announced celmly, as the custodian of the tables appeared.

"No money . . . can't pay", repeated the youth as the blank, flat look on the celestial countenance persisted.

"This—" shoving the dinner check forward. "Compre? No can pay . . ."

"Better you should pay for suppah. . . .Maybe you fool, eh", purred the Chinese in rising tremolo. "No?"

"Call the police", requested the moneyless patron, tonelessly.

"No money . . Police .. Understand?"

Glances kitchenward by the waiter failed to produce any immediate remedy to the situation. Rapidly the dinner drama was drawing to an unpleasant climax. It was an amiable customer who finally reached the solution. A customer who had finished dinner and had observed the little play from start to finish.

"How much is the check. Here, put it on mine. I haven't done my good deed yet today."

"You mean that, Mister?" asked the youth rising and with one motion reaching for his coat. "Thanks I thought it'd be the klink again tonight but I guess I've got another chance. A guy'll take any kind of a chance when he's hungry".

Hit-and-Run Driver Phones Police of Accident Later on Vigilance of investigating police who stopped a car that was behaving strangely in the vicinity of Ann and Victoria Streets last night, resulted in the discovery of the identity of an alleged hit-and-run driver following an accident in which two automobiles were damaged.

Driving along Victoria Avenue an automobile owned by a resident of this city, was struck, police state, by a car approaching northward on Ann Street and which failed to stop at the intersection.

The driver of the northbound car drove on without stopping, while the driver of the other motor, due to snow, was unable to ascertain the number of the alleged hit-and-run car.

Plainclothesman Isard, who investigated the accident, noticed a car driving in the vicinity of the affair, and stopped it. He noticed the car had been damaged and immediately questioned the driver. "It is my father's car," the youth at the wheel stated.

Further investigation resulted in the commandeering of the car for testing purposes. A few minutes later, a resident of the city telephoned the police that he had been involved in an accident. He was the owner of the temporarily confiscated car.

Both vehicles sustained damage to fenders and headlights. No injuries resulted.

ROCK SALT TO MELT STREET ICE, TOO EXPENSIVE FOR CITY

Cost of ice removal from Belleville's streets through the use of rock salt or calcium would be almost prohibitive for a city this size, it was stated by officials of the city works department reviewing methods now in winter use by other larger cities.

Cinders and sand which have been used for some time past by the local department have been found the cheapest and best for local purposes, it is reported by city engineer Chas. Mott. This material can be purchased for about 50 cents the yard, while the cost of cheapest grades of rock salt would run to an estimated $18 or $19 the ton, it was stated.

At The Theatres

AT THE CAPITOL

"Under Western Stars"

"Under Western Stars" Republic Picture at the Capitol brings to the screen two new stars, a new series of pictures, and a new, exciting twist to a western story that is as good as has come out of Hollywood in many a moon.

Roy Rogers, an entirely new name on the marquees of the country, and Smiley Burnette, who has already won a good deal of fame as "Frog" in the Gene Autry westerns, are the co-stars.

Rogers is a cowboy who finds himself elected to Congress on the promise of wiping out the Great Western Water and Power Company, an outfit of rather unscrupulous manipulators that has dammed up the only water supply available to ranchers in the dust bowl section of the west.

Burnette, playing Roger's secretary and Rogers move in on Washington, and Roy becomes enamored of Carol Hughes, the daughter of the Great Western's president, who has no little influence in the nation's capitol. Through various ruses in which several catchy tunes are cleverly worked in, Roy manages to win Federal aid for the ranchers as well as the girl. However, before they go back to the west, plenty of exciting and amusing situations arise.

"The Missing Guest"

Mysterious slayings and disappearances in an eerie "ghost house" that bring thrills, chills and surprises, alternate with outbursts of hilarious comedy in Universal's "The Missing Guest", at the Capitol Theatre.

The plot concerns a haunted mansion, reopened after eighteen years by Frank Baldrich (Selmer Jackson), who sneers at ghosts. With his wife Linda (Florence Wix) and his step-daughter Stephanie Kirkland (Constance Moore), he gives a gay fancy dress party which is crashed by Scoop Hanlon (Paul Kelly), young reporter intent upon an exclusive story.

Larry Dearden (William Lundigan), Stephanie's half brother, disappears after announcing that he intends to sleep in the Blue Room. Two dumb private detectives, Jake (George Cooper) and Vic (William Wayne), get nowhere in the search for Dearden.

To make matters worse, Dr. Carroll (Edward Stanley) is found shot to death the next day in the Blue Room. Scoop finally succeeds in clearing up the entire mystery and winning the love of Stephanie as well.

On the Stage

Tonight the Capitol presents on its stage the fifth of the series of Ken Soble's Tour for Talent shows. As the series progresses the talent seems to be just as strong in audience appeal as when it started. When the "Tour for Talent" shows are ended Belleville will no doubt have a very worthy contestant to send to Toronto to take part in the big radio broadcast.

Midnight Show

The New Year's Midnight Show at the Capitol presents the season's most delightful, romantic comedy, "Service DeLuxe" starring Constance Bennett, Mischa Auer, Charlie Ruggles, Vincent Price, and Helen Broderick. Deluxe entertainment served by masters in merry-making!

AT THE McCARTHY

"Rio Grande"

Action, adventure and more thrills than has been combined in an outdoor film in many months, awaits lovers of excitement that rings with the beat of six-shooter speed in Charles Starrett's latest starring western hit "Rio Grande" feature attraction on the McCarthy theatre screen.

Not one second passes in the entire length of this ace western picture, that something of real interest is not flashing across the silver sheet, either it is an ambush fight with rifles, between cowboys and rustlers or else it is a real hand-to-hand scrimmage, fast riding, split second draws and red blooded action that holds you to your seats never lets up until the final exciting scene at the end. "Rio Grande" also presents pleasing cowboy songs and the surrounding cast in support of Charles Starrett are excellent.

A splendid programme of entertainment that includes another chapter of the detective mystery story "The Spider's Web", a 20 minute Leon Errol comedy entitled "The Jitters" also a merry melody technicolor laugh hit "A Feud There Was" and a screen vaudeville treat "The Carnival Show" which is exceptionally fine entertainment is presented in advance of the feature presentation "Rio Grande" at the McCarthy Theatre.

Rosalind Russell and Robert Donat in "The Citadel," at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"The Citadel" Outstanding

"The Citadel," A. J. Cronin's dramatically powerful story of a young doctor who barters his ideals for worldly riches, opened before three large audiences at the Belle Theatre yesterday as M-G-M's second British-made photoplay and proved itself one of the most distinguished motion pictures of the new movie season.

With the superb portrayals upon the part of Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the principal roles and the understanding and incisive direction of King Vidor, the new picture becomes at once a tribute to its author, to the medical craft and to the art of motion pictures.

A dramatic love story is unfolded in the account of the young surgeon who struggles among the miners and marries a humble schoolmistress. There is agonizing suspense when he descends into a mine that has collapsed to amputate the arm of a man trapped beneath a fallen timber. There is drama when he deliberately dynamites a sewer that has been spreading disease but which authorities refuse to remove.

Cronin's moving story has become even more dramatic on the screen, without an alteration, but because of the added power of visible action. Donat is outstanding as the disillusioned young doctor and Miss Russell has the best role of her career as his sympathetic wife. Ralph Richardson and Rex Harrison, two of Britain's most capable actors, appear as fellow doctors with Donat and their performances are excellent.

Much credit goes also to Emlyn Williams an official of the Miners' Medical Aid Society; Mary Clare as the sympathetic cafe proprietress and Penelope Dudley-Ward as the society girl. There are more than one hundred speaking parts in the cast.

"The Citadel" is one of the most popular novels in years, having topped the list here and abroad since its publication about a year ago. The M-G-M adaption does it honor.

Thief Steals Basket of Groceries From Car

The hitherto quietness of the police station was broken last night, when a road weary transient who was tramping the streets could not answer to the satisfaction of police officers as to what he was doing here or his immediate intentions, and as a result spent an enforced night in the warmth of the cell block. He faced a charge of vagrancy today.

A sudden rush of cold and tired knights of the road on the police station last night saw eleven footsore transients apply for lodging in the cell block.

Some one got their New Year's groceries free of charge last night when they nonchalantly walked to a car, the property of Franklin Casey of Corbyville, and quietly extracted a basket of edibles from the rear seat, valued at nine dollars. Mr. Casey told the police that he had left the car on Front Street, for approximately thirty minutes to do some extra shopping, and when he returned the New Year's eats had disappeared.

ROAD WORKER INJURED IN FALL FROM TRUCK

Hurled from the top of the truck on which he was working by the force of the gale that swept this district on Tuesday, William Hudgin, Mountain View resident, was rushed to the office of a Bloomfield physician in a semi-conscious state suffering from head injuries.

Hudgin was spreading sand on icy highways near Christian Street School, and had partially turned around when a particularly heavy gust of wind caught him, tossing him on his head on the pavement. His condition today is regarded as favorable.

GARAGEMEN FIND MANY MISSING ARTICLES UNDER SEATS

"If you happen to lose small articles out of your pocket, it is a good idea to look alongside and under the seats in your automobile," advises a local garage repairman who while doing repair work on the interior of machines brought in for service finds these locations a source of hidden treasure.

Combs, coins, and key rings with keys believed lost for weeks, letters that were never mailed, books, papers and a heterogeneous assortment of long forgotten articles are weekly recovered by the garageman and carefully preserved for the astonished owner when he calls for the car. The biggest find to date has been a crumpled five dollar bill with which the repair job was paid, it was reported by him.

"And was that owner tickled".

Who Stand and Wait

By MARCIA DINSMORE

Of course it was an absurd thing for Joe Standish to say. It seemed as though he were denying his birthright when he, whose great-something uncle had been Miles Standish himself, announced firmly but definitely that he would never marry one of the girls in his own crowd. They were all idlers, who cared for nothing but a round of dances and bridge. Not one of them had ever worked for her living, nor intended to. Not one of them—to come to Joe's real grievance— not one of them took Joe Standish seriously.

And, of course, it wasn't really Althea's fault, either. Though she had giggled with her hostess over Joe's rash declaration, she had forgotten it immediately, for she had not yet had the pleasure of meeting the "very dearest boy of the whole crowd."

But Althea, too, had a high patrician pride, and, oddly enough, her name chanced to be Alden, though she could claim on descent from the famous John. She was angry that day, anyway, for she had lost herself in the maze of streets in a strange city. And it gave her no pleasure to consider how Tessie would laugh at her. So, when Althea, becoming hungry and wandering into the nearest restaurant found the soup cold and the meat half done, she made little effort to control her rising temper.

"This steak must be cooked over again," she said imperiously to the black-haired waitress, not really seeing the girl at all. Anita of the Romanos had a temper also. She was quitting work that very day and could afford to be impudent.

"It's plenty good enough for most people," she retorted. "And why should I run to the kitchen on errands for such as you?" The envious eyes had appraised correctly the simple extravagance of Althea's attire.

Something strange happened to Alethea then. She suddenly thought to herself: "If I answer back, I shall descend to vulgar brawling. If I keep silent, I shall seem to cower. The girl must be shown her place."

Slowly she looked up. Her eyes took in Anita's dark beauty, the petulant lift of lip. Then Althea rose quietly.

"There is no reason why you should wait on me," she replied with perfect composure. "If you will be good enough to put on my hat and coat and give me your apron, I shall prove to you that I am quite as good a waitress as you are."

And to the utter amazement of Anita (fortunately the room was quite empty) she did just that. Quietly she straightened Anita's little cap upon her shapely head and took the half-cooked plate of steak to the kitchen, where, by some mysterious wiles, she convinced the cook that she was a newly employed waitress.

At that moment, of course, Joe Standish walked into the restaurant.

"Scallops!" barked Joe, with a manly air. Then he looked up and saw Althea. Her eyes rested absently upon his sleek head.

Deftly she supplied his wants, and Joe kept telling himelf doggedly, "Ridiculous! I don't know anything about her. The family would be furious." But it was a losing game, and at the end of the meal, he suddenly addressed her.

"Do you know what a mining engineer is?"

Althea was rather startled, but her reply came quickly enough. "Certainly. A man who locates mines." Joe grunted. A little better anyway.

"My name is Joe Standish," he announced abruptly. "Please sit down. I want to talk to you." And Althea, after her first moment of panic, obeyed, smiling a little. She recognized the name, and suddenly remembered.

But even without the memory, those clear, boyish eyes were Joe's best reference.

And when at the end of the week they finally did meet at a dance, and Althea was formally presented to the sweetest boy of the crowd, she waited fearfully. Would Joe renounce his earlier promise, or would he forget the more recent vows of the night before? But she had not counted on the Standish pride. Joe looked once at Althea, once at the puzzled group of young people, then back at Althea.

"Yes, I have met Miss Alden," he announced calmly, "and she has promised to be my wife."

"But I thought you were going to marry a working girl," cried Tessie, when she had recovered her power of speech.

"Althea," reproved Joe coldly, "made a corking good waitress."

Fast work, you will say. To be sure. Joe, it would appear, had profited by the misfortunes of his more famous ancestor.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 30—(CP)— The Toronto Market moved upward on comparatively light volume today. Trade reached 377,000 shares in the first three hours, just about holding to the recent average.

Western oil shares assumed the leadership again and substantial gains were posted by Home, Calgary-Edmonton, Okalta, Foothills, Highwood-Sarcee, Davies, Anglo-Canadian and others.

Uchi stood out in the gold group with a gain of about 17 cents and Siscoe, Kirkland Lake and Lake Shore were other strong spots.

Noranda, Smelters, Pend Oreille and Sherritt were the highlights of the base metal list.

Steel, senior oil, utility and building issues held firm to strong.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec 30—(AP)—Rails, Amusements and Specialties carried the rising banner in today's stock market as other groups were halted by profit taking on yesterday's sharp upswing.

Further "Cash" Tex selling was a restraining factor for the Motors, Steels and Aircrafts. Dealings slowed after a fast opening and prices were moderately irregular near the closing hour. Transfers were about 1,300,000 shares.

HOG QUOTATIONS

Toronto, Dec. 30 (CP)—Bacon-hog prices gained 25 cents at Hull today. Liveweights lost Thursday's 25-cent advance at Brantford while other reporting markets were steady.

Butter Improves Position

TORONTO, Dec. 30 — Further strength occurred in butter prices on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, according to reports issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Eggs held previous rates.

Steady buying for small lots kept light offerings fairly well cleared on the butter market, and prices again firmed. Road blockage was reported to be curtailing shipments of fresh receipts to some extent. Two cars of the Western make were sold, one for shipment and the other on spot, at 21 1-2c. Ontario creamery solids traded at 21 1-2c for No. 1 grades, 20 3-4c for 38 score. Prints moved well through retail channels at the unchanged prices of 22 3-4c to 23c for top grades.

Fresh receipts were in lighter volume on the egg market due to present road conditions in some sections of the province. Offerings moved satisfactorily at former values, with buyers concentrating on A-medium and pullets, while A-large were inclined to drag. Graded shipments sold at 31c for grade A-large, 28c for medium, 27c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C-grades.

Better Demand For Butter

Montreal, Dec. 30 (CP) — Increased demand strengthened Quebec butter prices on open produce markets here, while most other offerings remained steady and unchanged, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers were 22 1-2c to 23c a pound and solids 22c to 22 1-2c.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 33 cents a dozen for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 27c for A-pullets, 24c for B-large, 23c for B-medium and 22c for C. Receipts, 959 cases.

Farmer Rescues Self as Ice in Lake Breaks

Peterborough, Ont., Dec. 30 — (CP)—Breaking through the ice of Chemong Lake with his sleigh and team today Fred Twomey of Ennismore, caretaker of the Floating Bridge, dragged himself back to safety and succeeded in rescuing one horse. The other was also pulled on to the ice by farmers who came to the rescue but it died later.

Recent snow and ice accumulating on the famous Floating Bridge weighed it almost beyond its buoyancy this week and at one place the float sank considerably below the water line creating a trap for automobiles and finally forcing traffic to take the over-the-ice route. Twomey was crossing with a loaded sleigh when the ice cracked.

WOUNDS WIFE AS HE SPRAYS BULLETS IN CAFE

Greenfield, O., Dec. 30 (AP) — Fifty dining and dancing patrons scurried under tables, ducked behind counters and raced for exists early today when an amateur boxer sprayed a small cafe with bullets, wounding his estranged wife, two other women and himself.

Constable Wendell Crishman, in the cafe when the shooting occurred, identified the gunman as William Cross, 29, amateur boxer and baseball umpire.

Cross was under police guard in a hospital where his wife, Katherine, 20, shot in the abdomen and breast, was given an even chance to recover. Her companions, Miss Lois Curry and Miss Esther Smalley suffered flesh wounds.

Mrs. Cross had filed suit for divorce and a hearing was scheduled for today. Cross had asked dismissal of the petition.

100 IN NIGHT DRESS DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, Dec. 30.—(AP)—One man was fatally injured, several persons were carried to safety in spectacular rescues and more than 100 were driven into the cold in night dress when fire destroyed the bar and grill of the seven-storey Hotel Lido at 65th Street and Columbus Avenue early today.

The fatally injured man was Nanheim Wexler, 65. He died in Roosevelt Hospital of shock and smoke poisoning.

The fire was discovered by Nat Emolowitz, night elevator operator who made eight trips bringing down sixty persons before smoke forced him to abandon his car.

Guests clustered at windows screaming for help. Some climbed to the roof and went down by the rear fire escape. Others had to be rescued.

Mystery of 'Human Hands' Reaches Final Solution

Prince Edward County Officials Baffled at Strange Find

"BEAR PAWS"

Now it can be told.

The "Mystery of the Human Hands" that baffled Prince Edward County officials last May when a box containing a pair of dissected "hands" alleged to be those of a human body were found in a field on the farm of A. E. Kleinsteuber, West Lake, has at last been cleared up to the satisfaction of everyone concerned, according to a story that appeared in yesterday's issue of the Picton Times.

While Prince Edward County officials were satisfied that the "hands" were the product of the dissecting of a university laboratory, Belleville Provincial police and medical men were sceptical, and pronounced the "gruesome find" as being the skinned dissected paws of a bear.

That they were right is borne out in a camp-fire story told in a hunting camp at Weslemkoon Lake, the Times states.

Tells Story

It appears that Angus Lake of Prince Edward County, who owns the famous Wishing Tree Farm, situated only a short distance from the place where the "hands" were found, sat in company with a group of hunting friends in a camp near Weslemkoon Lake. He told of how in 1937 he had, in his annual hunting jaunt to the north country sighted and killed a large bear. He took it home with him, and early this year disposed of it.

In May of this year, going on a fishing trip, he noticed a rare aroma coming from a box he had taken along to bring back the catch. Opening it he discovered the bears paws he had skinned and dissected and had forgotten. The box getting "higher" he stopped the car, threw the whole "shebang" over the fence, and drove on.

Reading the story of the discovery of "human hands" he went to the scene of the "find". "Mr. Lake", The Times states, "while a bit amused, began to question himself as to where he had been during the past few hours and then deciding the authorities knew more about crime detecting and anatomy than he did, went on about his business."

Later he decided to see the hands for himself. "Well", he said, "they still look like my bear's paws, and they are just the way I skinned and dissected them, but if they know more than I do about it I guess I will go home."

Iran Breaks Off Relations With France Over Pun on 'Shah' and 'Chat'

Paris, Dec. 30.— (AP)—Iranian Minister Sepah Bodi called today at the French Foreign office to announce France and Iran (Persia) no longer are related diplomatically.

The breach was over the French word for cat, "chat", which is pronounced "shah", and which was used as a pun in three French newspaper articles.

Irans ruler, the Shah, protested through Bodi that he did not like being confused with cats. Despite French assurances that nothing derogatory had been intended, his government cut off relations.

French officials pondered how to correct what the Shah evidently considered an indignity. Two of the puns were recent. The other had strained relations between France and Iran before.

WHERE THIRTY-FIVE DIED IN BRAZIL TRAIN WRECK

A general view of the wreckage of the passenger and freight trains that met in a head-on collision near Barbacena, Brazil, on the Central Brazil Railroad, killing thirty-five persons and seriously injuring more than one hundred. The passengers included Boy Scouts travelling to a jamboree and scores of laborers en route to promised jobs. Observers said that the accident might have been caused by faulty brakes on the freight train.

FRANCE RUSHES REINFORCEMENTS TO COLONIAL BORDERS

These French Zouaves, part of the Republic's colonial forces, were photographed during celebration of Bastille Day in Paris last July as they were reviewed by President Albert Lebrun. Today they are manning the border between French Somaliland and Italy's newest colonial acquisition, Ethiopia—as a result of the crisis that developed through Italy's claim for Djibouti, strategic French port on the Gulf of Aden and terminus of the French-owned Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad. Reports that Italian troops were concentrating on the border resulted in rushing reinforcements to the French colony.

$10 COUNTERFEIT BILLS ARE SEIZED

$4,620 In Bills Counterfeit of Latest Issue of Bank of Canada

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 30—(CP) — Windsor police today seized $4,620 in counterfeit Canadian $10 bills and held a 31 year old Chicago lawyer, Alphonsis Sopchuk, for investigation as they probed his possible connection with a large counterfeiting ring.

Royal Canadian mounted police said they expected to make arrests in other Canadian cities during the day.

The bills were described as counterfeits of the latest issue of the Bank of Canada. Police said the $10 bills could be detected readily except at night or in a dark place.

Taxi-Driver Detects Bill

Ernest Edwards, taxi-driver, detected as counterfeit a bill he said was given him early today by the Chicago lawyer and immediately communicated with police. Police raided Sopchuk's room and found 334 similar bills and keys to three lockers. In a bus depot police found the keys opened a locker containing a bag holding 433 of the notes.

Another bill was recovered when a girl brought it to the police station and said a man had given it to her. She identified Spochuk as the man who passed the bill.

Police said the counterfeits were by no means the best imitations they had seen. On the back, where the genuine bill bears the name "British American Bank Note Company, Limited", the bogus bill has "copy British American Bank Note Company Limited".

SKATING CLUB TO OPEN SEASON

Members of the Quinte Skating Club and their friends will officially inaugurate the outdoor skating season on their splendid open-air rink at the corner of Queen and Dufferin Streets tonight.

Following the ceremonies skating will form the major part of the evening's fun while a novel diversion will take place afterwards in the form of a moccasin dance to be held on the ice.

The weather man has been kind to members of this popular organization in that he has provided a splendid sheet of ice for the inaugural festivities. A large attendance is anticipated, and the committee in charge has left no stones unturned to make the opening night one to be remembered.

LARGE PERCH CAUGHT

First fish story of the winter's season was told this morning with visible proof by Harry Belford, local resident who displayed a three and one half pound lake perch caught by him while angling through the ice east of the hospital yesterday afternoon. Perch and sunfish have already started biting well, it is reported, though fishing shanties have not been placed on the ice as yet.

CHRONICLE 114 YEARS OLD

Halifax, Dec. 30—(CP)— Without pageantry, almost without observance, The Halifax Chonicle Thursday celebrated its 114th birthday. It was founded as The Novascotian Dec. 29, 1824 by George R. Young.

Four years later, its ownership passed to Joseph Howe, son of a New England Loyalist and Father of Responsible Government in Nova Scotia and eventually Canada. Seven years of incessant labor on his part made it the leading newspaper in political and literary influence in British North America.

POPE TO SEE CHAMBERLAIN

Rome, Dec. 30 (CP-Havas)—Pope Pius XI will receive Prime Minister Chamberlain when he comes to Rome, it was officially disclosed Thursday when the program for the visit was released. The audience will take place at the Vatican on Jan. 13, when the Prime Minister will be the luncheon guest of the British Minister to the Holy See.

BOB PEARCE

Who was awarded the Lou E. Marsh Memorial Trophy as the outstanding Canadian athlete, pro or amateur, for 1938. The trophy was first donated two years ago by Charles Ring, Toronto sportsman and chairman of the selection committee, in memory of the former sports writer. Pearce, an Australian by birth but a naturalized Canadian, won over a score of other athletes, representing the entire Dominion.

GOLFERS CAN ONLY WIN THE CUP

Standing beside an extra large golf trophy and generally adding that certain something to the picture is Merle Oberon, and to add the usual Hollywood description, "exotic screen star". The trophy (concentrate now!) is a 44-inch silver affair that goes to the best amateur in the Los Angeles open tournament that gets under way January 6. The pro winner, of course, gets cold cash.

CHARGE: SWINDLED SWINDLER

Mary Brandino and her brother, Joseph, both of Brooklyn, N.Y., hide their faces in Manhattan police headquarters following arrest on charges of blackmailing "F. Donald Coster", suicide head of McKesson and Robbins, with threats of revealing him as Philip Musica, pre-war swindler. But the Brandinos' masking failed. They are pictured below.

4 Sisters to Play in Picture

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 30—(AP) —Four sisters were cast today to play the roles of four sisters in the film "Alexander Graham Bell."

The actresses are Loretta Young and her three sisters, Polly Ann Young, Sally Blane and 15-year-old Georgianna Young. They will appear in the picture as the four daughters of Gardiner Hubbard, one of the backers of Bell, inventor of the telephone.

SHEEP BURIED IN STACK

Picton, Ont., Dec. 30—(CP) — John Hiller, of nearby Taylor Township, had a flock of seven sheep. The animals had the run of his farm, but last Friday they disappeared. Yesterday Hiller decided he'd better search for them. He found them buried beneath a straw stack that blew down that day—two dead but the others alive and fairly well.

FRAME DWELLING

Baird was unable to state cause of last night's fire. The two survivors were unable to tell a coherent story. Neighbors aroused by Robson's cries turned in calls to police and fire departments but the flames had made such headway entry to the house was impossible.

Clad In Pajamas.

Stanley, found standing bewildered and frightened outside the blazing house on Queen street clad only in his pajamas in the bitter cold, was taken to a neighbor's home.

"Dad yelled out 'run' and I got up and ran downstairs and out the door," he said. "Some man picked me up and carried me over here." Stanley out an upstairs window onto Stanley out an upstairs window onto the verandah roof, then jumped through after him. They both jumped from the roof to the ground, he said.

"I tried to go back in," he sobbed. "The flames were too bad. The hall was like a furnace."

Wildly Walking Around.

A neighbor, Frank Spickett, found Robson walking wildly around in the snow in his bare feet, clad only in underwear.

"For God's sake get my children, get my children," the father was crying. He was taken to Spickett's home until an ambulance arrived.

Mrs. Robson, clutching Donald, one of the twins, in her arms, was found on the floor of the bathroom where she apparently had fled seeking shelter from the flames. Shirley's body was found in a crouching position on the floor of the back bedroom of the six-room house. In the same room, beneath the bed clothes of the double bed, lay George, the baby, well swathed in blankets. He had smothered. Doreen and Dorothy lay dead in the front bedroom.

GOV'T DESTROYER

Batteries In Action.

Guns began to blaze from the 10-000-ton cruiser Canarias and other Insurgent warships. Insurgent batteries at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, some fifteen miles across the straits, also went into action.

Shells from the Canarias tore through and destroyed two houses on Gibraltar's Catalan Bay. Several occupants were injured and taken to hospital.

The fact that the shells landed on British soil, injuring British subjects, may lead to vigorous British diplomatic or other action.

Forced Aground.

After the ramming, gunfire from the vessels and the Ceuta forts compelled the Jose Luis to run aground on the eastern beach of Gibraltar. She immediately landed her dead and wounded.

A score of the crew of the Jose Luis were killed and many wounded in the battle with the Canarias and other Insurgent ships in the straits last August, which forced her to limp into Gibraltar for refuge and repairs.

Today's battle followed bombing of a British ship in the Mediterranean yesterday.

SKILLED GANGS OF

How far the rescuers must go to reach the men—or their bodies—was not known. Eight or ten feet of progress had been made through the ore with continual small falls of rock impeding efforts. If the men are not under the cars or the electric locomotive, they may have taken shelter under twisted timbers of the drift.

Find Part of Train.

A mine executive said last night that the portion of the car uncovered was part of the train used by the two men to clear away "loose" and muck after each dynamite blast.

According to mine engineers, rock bursts are common occurrences in gold mines and occur when ore or mineral bodies expand, then explode. Tuesday's rock burst occurred just after Holubec and Vlaisevgevich set off a charge of dynamite. The cave-in came immediately after the burst.

The rescue parties are working in half-hour shifts since only a few men at a time can work in the narrow confines of the drift. Officials said between 25 and 50 men are engaged in the struggle against the rock.

It is impossible to say when the rescuers will reach the trapped men but the rescue schedule is made out until Monday.

French In Military Control.

The Deputies said Premier Edouard Daladier decided to send a senatorial committee to suggest to the Syrians a new agreement under which they would have a large measure of independence but with French in control of police and military functions.

Djibouti, the French Gulf of Aden port, was quiet, with two French warships enroute to protect it. Senegalese troops were leaving Marseille today to strengthen the Djibouti garrison.

Attacks By Fascist Press.

Rome, Dec. 30 (AP)—France's unwillingness to have Prime Minister Chamberlain mediate the Italian territorial demands in Africa brought a new barrage of Fascist attacks today.

The attitude of France toward Italy's "natural aspirations", the newspaper Il Messaggero said, was today's "greatest obstacle" in the path of European pacification.

The press indicated Italy regarded Mr. Chamberlain's Jan. 11 visit as an opportune occasion for discussion of her territorial demands and might bring the subject up regardless of the French attitude

Says France Disturbed.

Il Messaggero openly discussed the possibility of a conference similar to the Munich meeting, declaring that "evidently the spectre of a new four-power conference — because Germany would take part in it—disturbs France's repose."

The paper attributed France's reluctance to have Mr. Chamberlain take up the matter to the French feeling that the "problem of relations between Italy and France no longer is a question of rights but rather of loss of prestige."

Il Popolo Di Roma said France's attitude might be due to one of two things: A desire to get Italy's minimum demands before France discloses her maximum concessions or a desire to limit Mr. Chamberlain's efforts to bringing France and Italy together so they could negotiate directly.

CLERGY UPHOLDS

"When it is an unequivocal case of murder and the guilt fully established I believe that capital punishment is merited and justified."

Scaffold Seen As Deterrent.

Rev. C. J. St. Clair Jeans, minister of St. John and St. Stephen Presbyterian Church and president of the Saint John Evangelical Alliance, asked what could be substituted for capital punishment and prove an equal deterrent.

"To the would-be killer the shadow of the scaffold is infinitely more terrifying than the shadow of life imprisonment," he said. Countries where the death penalty had been enforced "in a truly democratic manner" knew its adequacy and experienced little agitation to abolish it.

Rev. Dr. E. H. Ramsey, Saint David's United Church, felt the problem "is one of the most difficult in the whole moral realm". Maintenance that human life was sacred marked "the deep chasm between ourselves and the totalitarians".

To Awe the Lawless.

"On the other hand," added Dr. Ramsey, "in actual government it has been found necessary to execute the vicious slayer in order to awe the lawless into respect for the life and rights of others, and no substitute deterrent has been found to take the place of capital punishment."

Rev. T. Hudson Stewart, rector of St. John's (Stone) Church, Anglican, expressed opinion that in practice capital punishment was necessary to cope with crime but in theory to demand "an eye for an eye" was wrong.

STERILIZATION

ient has been detained longer than was necessary for his proper treatment," the report advises establishment of a four-man board to review the cases of patients whose certification or detention is protested.

The Commission, urging set-up of the board to "create a better feeling in the public mind," would have it headed by a lay chairman and completed by two psychiatrists and a general practitioner. It would operate as a separate unit from the Provincial Health Department — though possibly under supervision of the Health Minister.

Evidence was submitted to the Commission, the report says, to the effect that a "large number" of girls have been committed to the Ontario Hospital at Cobourg "because they have become pregnant, and had it not been for that they never would have found themselves in an institution for the mentally defective."

Recommend No Action.

"If sterilization could be carried out, while these girls would still be sex problems in the community, they would not be the same problem that they are now," the report says.

"We therefore recommend for the consideration of the government an amendment to the Medical Act providing that no action shall be brought against a doctor who performs such operation with the consent of a parent or guardian of a mentally ill or defective person, or against a parent or guardian for giving such consent."

The Commission, whose members other than Mr. Magone were Lionel Conacher, Liberal M.L.A. for Toronto-Bracondale, and Dr. William H. Avery, was set up by Premier Hepburn after charges were made by John H. Green, St. Thomas lawyer, that he was "illegally detained" in the Ontario Hospital at London for nearly two years.

The Commissioners were told to inquire into management and administration of mental hospitals, operation of the Mental Hospitals Act and various charges and complaints arising from admission, committal, treatment and detention of certain patients.

Dr. Stevenson Cleared.

Dr. George H. Stevenson, superintendent of the Ontario Hospital at London, is cleared by the Commission of Green's allegation with a summary reference that ends: "We understand that Mr. Green has started certain civil proceedings and we have no doubt that if any of his rights have been improperly interfered with he will be vindicated there, in the civil courts."

The report recommends segregation of purely alcoholic cases from mental cases, a survey of paretics (partially paralyzed patients) with a view to their segregation for treatment with "artificial fever", and the re-naming of the hospital at Cobourg so that girls trained for domestic service there will be accepted more readily on release.

It urges that coroners themselves be responsible for investigations of deaths in mental institutions.

Some Recommendations.

Under its recommendations, general hospitals would be assigned the mental examination units which now are included in mental hospitals. Before a magistrate might commit a person for observation to the examination unit of a general hospital, he would have to have before him the certificate of a medical practitioner; before he could commit a person to a mental institution, he would have to have certificates from two medical practitioners.

"We feel that no one should have the stigma of having been placed in a mental ward upon him without some evidence having been taken by the magistrate to indicate that the case is a fit one for examination," the report says.

COW ELECTROCUTED TRYING TO SWALLOW LIGHT BULB

Cotati, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP) — Unused to the marvels of the modern day, one of Peter Proskoriakoff's jersey cows tried to swallow the attractive looking electric light bulb which dangled from an extension cord. The barn floor was wet. Bossy was electrocuted. But it was not "light's out." The bulb was still alight in her mouth when Proskoriakoff found her.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Cores of raindrops! There are countless particles in the atmosphere, and those which are active for condensation are "kerns" or simply nuclei of condensation. Water vapor condenses upon them and forms cloud or fog droplets. The dewpoint, or that temperature at which water vapor exists to the degree of 100 per cent., seldom occurs in the free air. So condensation must occur at degrees of saturation less than 100 per cent. The active nuclei or kerns are the hygroscopic ones and the best examples are salt particles resulting from evaporation from ocean spray, and smoke particles resulting from combustion of sulphurous compounds.

BUILD UP ARMY IN COMING YEAR PLAN OF HITLER

Fuehrer Says He Hopes Germany May Help Appeasement

'DESTINY IS FIXED'

Declares Germany's Obligation to Italy 'Clear and Unbreakable'

(By Lynn Heinzerling)
(Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Berlin, Dec. 31 (AP)—German newspapers lashed at the United States government today as Chancellor Hitler set Nazidom on its "road of restiny" for 1939 with the admonition that the army must be strengthened.

World Jewry is the American farmers "throat cutter" and the United States Secretary of the Interior, Harold Ickes, their "general agent," newspapers declared, assailing the "Roosevelt regime."

The story of Germany's protest against Mr. Ickes' Cleveland speech of Dec. 18 and the State Department's rejection Dec. 21 was splashed on almost all front pages under such headlines as "sharpest German protest against lie campaign of United States Minister Ickes."

Defence of Ickes Nettles Germany

A communique issued yesterday by the official news agency, warning there was no hope of improving German-American relations as long as the State Department defended Mr. Ickes, gave the German public its first knowledge of the Ickes incident.

Hitler's hopes for 1939 were expressed in a New Year's message bearing the wish "that we may succeed in contributing to general appeasement of the world." Hitler reaffirmed continuance of the Rome-Berlin axis and referred to 1938, when Austria and Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland were added to the Reich, as "the year of the richest harvest in our history."

"Germany's course has been destined and fixed," he said of foreign affairs, ". . . the obligations which arise out of our friendship for Fascist Italy are clear and unbreakable."

Tasks set for Germany in the coming year included strengthening of the army, continued Nazi education of the people and execution of the four-year plan for economic self-sufficiency.

The Nazi press asserted the United States political setback at the Lima conference and "the Jewish stranglehold" were responsible for anti-German feeling in the United States.

Newspapers appealed to the American people to "rid their government of destructive Jewish influence."

Trade Threat Over Cotton

The Lokalanzeiger said straining of diplomatic relations to a high pitch naturally has resulted in severe repercussions in trade relations. It emphasized the Reich's capacity to absorb 4,000,000 bales of cotton annually from the United States.

In his New Year's message Hitler added that "my special thanks go to the hundreds of thousands who have surrounded the west front of the Reich with that wall of armor and concrete which we know no power in the world will ever break through."

Finance Minister Optimistic About Conditions in 1939

Ottawa, Dec. 31 (CP)—Optimistic forecasts of better Canadian business conditions in 1939 was made here by Finance Minister Dunning in a New Year's message.

Mr. Dunning said in his message made public last night, that barring foreign political aggravations an improvement in business activity, trade and employment may be expected in 1939 which will make it the best year since the depression began.

Mr. Dunning said that in the year just ending the Canadian economy suffered from the sharp recession in the United States, the continuing influence on trade and traffic of the 1937 crop failure and the political friction and wars in Europe and the Far East.

"Fortunately, the losing months of 1938 witnessed a substantial improvement in business conditions in the United States and the continuance and possible acceleration of this improvement appears to be assured for the immediate future at least," he stated.

This year's wheat crop in Western Canada was double the previous year but prices were low. The larger crop has increased the purchasing power of Western Canada and "will continue to exert a stimulating influence on several features of our economic life".

The Finance Minister noted with satisfaction that at Dec. 22 Dominion revenues were only $2,500,000 below the figure for the corresponding period a year ago. The Canadian National Railways deficit, however, would be larger and a further loss would arise from the government's wheat board operations.

ANY "NEW ORDER" NOT RECOGNIZED BY UNITED STATES

State Secretary Hull Tells Japan Firmly of Stand Taken

NOTE NOT PUBLIC

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—The United States told Japan firmly today that it could not recognize any "new order" abrogating the principle of the "open door" in China.

The United States' position was set forth, State Department officials said, in a note Ambassador Joseph Grew delivered to the Tokyo government this morning.

While the text of the note was not made public immediately, correspondents were given to understand it carried a tone of finality and was couched in strong terms.

It replied to a note from the Japanese government on Nov. 18 maintaining the principles of the past did not apply to the present situation in China and that a "new order" had arisen in Eastern Asia.

Protested Earlier.

State Secretary Cordell Hull had protested earlier that Japan was violating American rights in China by instituting monopolies, trade re-

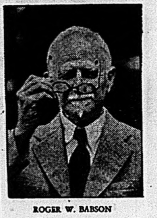
PROMINENTLY MENTIONED

London, Dec. 31 (CP)—Sir John Reith, former Chief of the British Broadcasting Corporation and at present head of Imperial Airways, and Viscount Runciman, Lord President of the Council, were among those prominently mentioned today in scant press speculation on the new year honors list.



ROGER W. BABSON

Babson "Puts Himself On The Spot" Again

For the eighteenth consecutive year, Roger Babson risks his reputation by forecasting what the New Year has in store for wages, jobs, prices, and business.

His predictions have always turned out 85-90 per cent correct. Remember for 1938 he forecast: "Resumption of Recovery" and "No War in Europe."

What about 1939? Will business recovery continue, or does a new tailspin lie ahead? Turn to page three for Babson's opinions.

INDICATION OF DESIRE TO WIN BRITISH HELP

Reported Chamberlain is Favorable to Some Concessions

NO BARGAINING

Some More Troops May be Withdrawn From Spain

Rome, Dec. 31 (AP) — A bitter anti-French campaign waged by the Fascist press for the past month halted abruptly today.

Morning papers limited themselves chiefly to asserting that the French request that Prime Minister Chamberlain on his Rome visit refrain from attempting mediation of Italian claims against France was received badly in London.

Diplomatic quarters regard the moderated tone in Rome as indicative of a desire to win greater British sympathy for Italy's "natural aspirations" as the time of Mr. Chamberlain's visit Jan. 11 draws near.

There were reports in these quarters that Italy feels Mr. Chamberlain already is favorably disposed toward some concession to her.

Some diplomats expressed the belief Premier Mussolini might agree to withdrawal of the remainder of his troops from Spain if France, in return, agrees to some of his demands in North Africa.

The newspaper Il Piccolo, however, denied reports of bargaining on the question of Italian troops in Spain and described them as "a left handed blow" attempting to sabotage Mr. Chamberlain's visit.

Daladier Races to Get Budget Through

Paris, Dec. 31 (AP) — Premier Edouard Daladier raced to get his 1939 budget through parliament today under a midnight deadline before leaving for a tour of France's western Mediterranean possessions.

The budget, on which Daladier twice has staked his cabinet's life and won only by narrow margins, went before the Chamber of Deputies for the second time, after its adoption by the Senate last night with alterations of the original bill.

Its passage became more complicated as the Chamber Finance Committee in a night session tacked on fifty new amendments. It is expected to be shuttled back and forth several times before the two houses reach an agreement.

If the budget has not been enacted when the old year ends, parliament will resort to the time-honored practice of turning back its clock and remaining in constant session until action is completed.

WEATHER MILDER IN WEST CANADA

Sharp Moderation in Temperature Felt Throughout Prairies

Winnipeg, Dec. 31—(CP)—Good news for western New Year's celebrants—the weather may be milder after a week of stormy blasts from the Arctic.

Sharp moderation in record subzero temperatures was felt by the bundled populace across the prairies last night and the forecast promised milder conditions for the start of 1939.

More snow was forecast but with the prediction came the glad tidings of moderating temperatures in Manitoba and "milder" for Saskatchewan and Alberta.

From the sub-zero 30's and 40's of earlier in the week, the mercury climbed to near zero in Saskatchewan and Alberta yesterday.

It wasn't so mild in Manitoba but a switch in the wind from the frigid north to the south promised early relief. It was 12 below in Winnipeg last night compared with a minus 28 earlier in the day.

LARGE APPLE SHIPMENT

Halifax, Dec. 31 (CP)—The big German liner Deutschland steamed down harbor today carrying to Germany 33,000 barrels of Nova Scotia apples.

P. W. Walsh, Nova Scotia Director of Marketing, said the purchase was made under the Canada-German trade treaty which involves an exchange of credit. Each year, a percentage of the total trade is allotted to apples.

Four special trains brought the fruit here in 156 cars from Nova Scotia's famed apple-growing Annapolis Valley.

Decrees Directed Against Jews In Force Sunday

Berlin, Dec. 31 (AP)—New Year's bells will ring into effect many new decrees directed at Germany's Jewish population since the violent anti-Semitic outbreak Nov. 10.

The sounding of whistles and bells at midnight tonight is supposed to mark the completion of 100 per cent Aryanization of German economic life.

Already barred from theatres, schools and colleges, ordered to stay off certain streets and faced with dozens of additional restrictions, Jews have been preparing for weeks for the new decrees to become effective with the start of 1939.

The following restrictions go into effect at midnight:

No Jew may be a house or real estate broker; he may not become a business trustee; all retail stores must be Aryanized; all Jews must be out of craftsmen's guilds and their membership cards taken up, and Jews must turn over their driver's licences for all types of motor vehicles.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobchter, in a matter of fact way, printed a list of the anti-Semitic decrees going into effect tonight along with a list of other changes effective at the same time, such as alterations in the mail delivery of parcels to Eire and requirement of new reflectors on the rear of automobiles.

There are still three more instalments to be paid on the 1,000,000,000 mark ($400,000,000) fine imposed on Jews after the slaying of Ernst von Rath, German Embassy Secretary, in Paris.

GERMANY'S PLAN FOR BIGGER NAVY INTENSIFIES RACE

England Notified Germany Intends to Double Submarine Strength

MAY AFFECT TALKS

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—Germany's surprise plans for a bigger navy to complement her powerful air force and army threatened today to intensify Europe's gigantic rearmament race.

As a parting shot to the year which brought him so many triumphs, Chancellor Hitler notified London that Germany intended to more than double her submarine strength, bringing it to parity with Great Britain's.

Germany was understood to be laying plans to begin mass production of a revolutionary type of "minnow" submarine. She also will build two new 10,000-ton cruisers.

FURNACE-DEATH IS INVESTIGATED

Clothing of Four Japanese Given to Police for Examination

Vancouver, Dec. 31. — (CP) — Clothing of four Japanese was given to a police criminologist today for examination as detectives pressed their investigation into the mysterious furnace-death of Emiko Yamada.

The clothing, that of the 16-year old girl's father and three roomers was taken from the house where the girl's charred body was discovered in the furnace last Tuesday.

A quantity of rapeseed oil, found beside a Buddhist shrine in the Yamada home, furnace ashes and bits of oil-soaked paper and matches found pinned to the girl's clothing, also were given to Inspector J. F. C. B. Vance of the Police Bureau of Science for microscopic study.

Detectives said they were still uncertain how the girl met death although Dr. John Whitbread, coroner, expressed a belief she was slain.

Officers said the rapeseed oil, believed used in religious ceremonies in the home, was similar to oil found on paper pinned to the girl's clothing.

TROOPS BOARD LINERS

Marseille, Dec. 31 (AP)—A thousand French colonial troops boarded two liners today, sailing to strengthen France's defences against Italian threats in East Africa. The Senegalese aboard the liners Sphinx and Chatilly were destined for duty at Djibouti, important French Somaliland coaling station on the Gulf of Aden along the route to Madagascar and Frances colonies in the Far East.

CANADA'S INCOME FOR 1938 ABOUT ON PAR WITH 1937

Predicted That Decrease Will Not Exceed $5,000,000

INCOME TAX INCREASE

Trade Recession Not Manifest in Income Until March

Ottawa, Dec. 31 (CP)—Canada's revenue collections for 1938 will not fall much short of 1937, in spite of declines in customs and excise.

While there will be a drop from last year, that drop may not exceed $5,000,000. The National Revenue Department collected $437,869,231 for the 1937 calendar year. The likely estimate for 1938, as the year closes, is in the neighborhood of $433,0000,000.

A gain of about $24,000,000 in income tax collections offsets in large measure what has been lost in customs and excise duties and excise taxes. In 1937 the income tax paid in to the government totalled $118,000,000 in round figures. This year a total of $142,000,000 will be reached, if the trend of the preceding 11 months has been maintained in December.

Customs revenues last year amounted to $93,772,334. The best estimate for 1938 places this figure $12,500,000 lower, about $81,250,000.

The same story is told with regard to excise taxes, which including the sales, stamp and other imposts. A decline of $12,500,000 is expected from last year's $173,311,616.

Excise duties, collected from distillers and tobacco companies, will not show much of a decline. Probabilities are that the $51,835,554 of 1937 may drop to about $50,000,000.

The trade "recession" of last year did not begin to manifest itself in Canada's income until March. Both January and February held up well in the customs and excise branches, a slight increase over the preceding year being noted. A decline set in during the third month, and the downward movement continued for the remainder of the year.

At that, however, the national revenue suffered little, due to the marked betterment of the income tax.

Full Pressure on Central Catalonia

Hendaye France, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Spanish Insurgent high command brought the full pressure of its offensive to bear on the Central Catalonian front today in a campaign to swing around Artesa and cut a path north to the French border..

On the two flanks of the stiff offensive, General Franco's Insurgent forces appeared to have slowed down—against the Llena Mountains in the south and against the Monsech Mountains in the north. But General Jose Moscardo's Aragon corps leading the central part of the drive pushed on against Cubiles, seven miles southwest of Artsea, on the main highway from Lerida to Seo De Urgel and the frontier between Catalonia and France.

Insurgent dispatches said Moscardo's column, which broke through the Balaguer bridgehead along the Segre River Dec. 28, advanced four miles northwest and cut across the Lerida-Seo De Urgel road to take Government fortifications from the rear.

May Divest Goebbels Of Propaganda Office According to Report

Broadcast A New Year's Message to German Nation

CHANGE IN STATUS

Goering May Become Vice Chancellor in New Setup

Berlin, Dec. 31 (AP)—Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels is scheduled to make a 20-minute radio address to the nation tonight which is expected to give evidence of his recuperation from recent illness.

Although he will speak from his suburban residence, "Schwanenwerder" on the Wansee (speech now scheduled for 1 p.m. EST), a spokesman for his ministry said already he was attending to much official business at home and would resume work at the ministry after the new year.

The official news agency announced Dec. 22 that the propaganda minister was ill of intestinal influenza. Since then little has been heard of him and he was unable to deliver his customary Christmas message to children Dec. 23.

Goebbels did not figure publicly in the Austrian and Czech events, but had an opportunity to rehabilitate himself when a vigorous campaign of words was launched against the United States and Great Britain.

Change In Status.

All the tricks used during the years when the Nazi Party fought for supremacy in Germany were mobilized for the international verbal conflict. Yesterday's attempt, in an official news agency statement on the situation arising from Harold Ickes' Cleveland speech, to effect a cleavage between 125,000,000 non-Jewish Americans and their 5,000,000 Jewish ocmpatriots was typical of Goebbels' methods.

Persons who have criticized Goebbels' tactics in the recent anti-Jewish campaign, charging him with failure to avert foreign criticism, assert that a change in his status is coming.

They contend Hitler contemplates announcing on Jan. 30, sixth anniversary of his assumption of power, far-reaching changes by which Goebbels will be divested of his propaganda functions.

The Fuehrer's plan is said to be abolition of existing state governments and revision of the Reich into about 36 administrative units, each under a stathalter or governor.

Under such a rearmament Field Marshal Goering would become Vice Chancellor and cease to be Premier of Prussia.

Goebbels would become stathalter for the greater Berlin area.

His ministry's functions would be absorbed partly by the foreign office, partly by Goering's four-year plan organization, partly by a ministry of culture. Highest Nazis, however, refuse to comment on these reports.

CLEANUP COUNTERFEITERS

Windsor, Dec. 31—(CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police claimed an almost complete cleanup today of what threatened to be the biggest counterfeiting project in recent years in Canada. Alphonsis Sopchuck, 31, Chicago Attorney, was arrested here yesterday and charged with uttering forged ducuments, counterfeit Bank of Canada $10 notes.

Another man was arrested in Chicago by United States Secret Service Men who said they would not name him pending the arrest of a second man there.

King and Queen to Attend Only Limited Number of Functions

Ottawa, Dec. 31 (CP)—The king and queen will be able to attend only a limited number of public functions during their tour of Canada late next spring and will not be able to accept the hundreds of private invitations which have deluged the government here.

In making this announcement last night, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said requests, invitations and suggestions from individuals and organizations in all parts of the country with respect to their Majesties' visit had been received by members of the government and the committees arranging for the tour.

"While not wishing to discourage any display of interest and enthusiasm, the government feel that it should be understood that their Majesties are going to be in Canada only a little over three weeks and that, consequently, with all the will in the world, it will be quite impossible for them to appear at more than a limited number of public functions, or to begin to visit many of the localities and districts which would naturally desire to be so honored," he said.

The original plan for the tour was for the royal couple to visit only Ottawa but it was extended, on the king's own desire, to cover every province. The detailed itinerary was sent to London for approval several weeks ago and confirmation is expected daily.

The prime minister indicated that an effort had been made to include in the itinerary as many of the larger centres of population as possible but that visits to many smaller cities and towns will necessarily have to be omitted.

Their Majesties will follow the same rule with respect to gifts during the Canadian visit as applies in the United Kingdom, namely, they shall not be expected to accept gifts from individuals, organizations or public bodies.

PONTIFF ENDING EVENTFUL YEAR

Efforts in Behalf of World Peace Very Marked

(Copyright, 1938, by The Havas News Agency)

Vatican City, Dec. 31 (CP-Havas)—The end of an eventful 1938 finds Pope Pius XI nearing the 17th anniversary of his ascension to the Papal Throne and carrying on his energetic defence of the Roman Catholic Church despite his failing health and 81 years.

Outstanding during the past 12 months were the Pontiff's struggle against the spread of neo-paganism in Germany, his concern over Italy's adoption of a racial program similar to that of the Reich, his participation in ceremonies connected with the canonization of three saints and two beatifications, and his efforts in behalf of world peace.

On numerous occasions Pope Pius condemned anti-Catholic measures adopted by Germany which the church declares are a violation of the concordats between the Vatican and the Reich and between the Vatican and the non non-existent Austria.

Relations Intensified.

Tension in relations between Germany and the Church was intensified last May when Chancellor Hitler visited Rome but did not visit the Pope in accordance with diplomatic custom.

Later the Pope declared in a public address that Fascism should avoid imitating Nazism on racial problems.

Premier Mussolini declared the Fascist government was determined to pursue its new racial policy.

Another point of friction between the Vatican and Rome was the Fascist party ruling its members must refrain from joining the world-wide Catholic action and that those who already belonged to both organizations must choose between them.

The new Italian laws banning Italian "Aryans" from marriages with persons of other races regardless of their religion brought Vatican representations to King Victor Emmanuel and Mussolini on the grounds the law was a violation of the Lateran Accord of 1929.

Will Not Interfere.

The Italian leaders have assured the Pope that they will not interfere with the laws of the church. There the matter rests as the year ends.

On Easter Sunday Pope Pius presided at the canonization of three saints, bringing the total during his regime to 16. They were Andreas Bobola, a 17th-Century Polish missionary; Giovanni Leonardi, a 16th-century Italian, and Salvatore Da Horta, a 16th-century Catalonian.

The Venerable Maria Giuseppa Rossello, founder of the Sisters of Our Lady of Mercy, was beatified on Nov. 6 and the Venerable Francesa Saveria Cabrini, founder of the Missionary Sisters of the Sacred Heart, was beatified Nov. 13.

Belleville Chapter No. 55, O. E. S. Instals Year's Officers

Holly wreaths, ferns and chrysanthemums lent a colorful background to the beautiful ceremony of installation which took place in the Oddfellows Hall last evening when officers of Belleville Chapter No. 55, Order of Eastern Star, were installed for the coming year. The Chapter was privileged to have as chief installing officer, Mrs. Anna Boyd, Past Grand Matron, of Capreol, formerly of this city.

The ceremony was most impressive, innovation adding to the dignity and beauty of the ritual, especially as the Star Points were installed. During the ceremony which took place in the presence of a large crowd of members and visitors, Mrs. Lillie Law was installed as Worthy Matron.

Assisting Mrs. Boyd with the installation were: Mr. F. Wessel as Grand Patron; Mrs. P. Barlow as Grand Chaplain; Mrs. F. Smith as Grand Marshal; Mrs. B. Grills as Grand Organist; Miss A. Taking Star Point chairs during the ceremony were the following Past Matrons: Miss Irene Hallam; Mrs. Beatrice Embury; Mrs. Grace McEwan; Mrs. Susan Chesher; Mrs. Ethel Adams.

Among the visitors present was Mrs. Ruby Fleming, of Colborne Chapter, District Deputy Grand Matron for this district.

Mrs. Charlotte Vivian of Toronto, an honorary member of the chapter, presented Mrs. Law with a handsome hand painted altar cushion of her own excellent artistry for the use of the members. The new Worthy Matron received and dedicated it to its intended use in a very pleasing ceremony.

Miss Irene Hallam, P.M., presented her sister, Mrs. Phyllis Barlow, retiring matron, with the jewel of her office and Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, P.M., made the same gesture to the retiring patron, Mr. George Adams.

The officers:

Worthy Matron—Mrs. L. Law.

Seven Sheep Buried Under Straw Stack By High Winds

John Taylor, Hillier farmer, thought the gale that swept his district this week was one of the strongest he had experienced in years but he did not think it was hardly strong enough to blow seven sheep into practically complete oblivion.

However, that is what happened, so he thought, until he noticed that the force of the gale had toppled the top of a large straw stack in his barnyard to the ground.

On Wednesday while pondering over the disappearance of his "woollies" an idea struck him. Calling his help, he began to dig in the mass of piled straw. An hour later he discovered the missing flock, five of which were alive and the remaining two dead. It is believed the heavy straw packed around the bodies of the five sheep protected them sufficiently from the zero temperatures of that day and night, to keep them alive.

Dinner Parties and Dances To Usher in the New Year

The fact that New Year's Eve is on Saturday this year, and in the ordinary course of events festivities should cease at twelve midnight, this fact will not deter Belleville from "seeing the Old Year out" in traditionally celebrative manner.

Included among the more prominent functions scheduled for tonight are dances at the Armouries where the officers of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) will be hosts; the officers mess of the 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, and "open house" at the Belleville Club.

Quinte Inn, near Rednersville will also hold forth in an evening of gaiety while members and friends of the Belleville Yacht Club will join in their South End Clubhouse in welcoming the New Year with a special program of dancing and other entertainment.

While a number of residents "got off their New Year dance steam" at dances held in various parts of the district Friday night, private parties and dinner parties provide the most popular form of entertainment tonight.

Downtown "the boys" will in likelihood celebrate the birth of the New Year in the regular manner. Police issued a warning today however that although it is the festive season, no rowdyism will be tolerated; 'the boys' must temper their celebrations with a little common sense, "or else . . . ."

However, be that as it may, residents of the city and district will clink their glasses contain what they may, at the magic hour of midnight, and the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" will ring out ,to usher in what is hoped a new era for all.

Canada to Make Merry

(By The Canadian Press)

Canada, with the rest of the world, rings out the old today and rings in the new. With customary enthusiasm Canadians from coast to coast will bid farewell to 1938 and welcome to 1939.

With a year of toil behind them, celebrants welcoming the New Year will be able to do it at a cost slightly more reasonable than a year ago. Prices have been reduced a little but the variety still is as great.

Toronto has an innovation in New Year's parties with a roller-skating festivity that costs but 25c a person. And the top price in Canada for dancing has been set at $7.50 per person, lower than a year ago when prices were $1 or $2 higher.

With New Year's day falling on a Sunday, Saturday night closing restrictions in many parts of the country have been lifted, and celebrations in hotels and night clubs will continue into the dawn. But in Ontario where closing regulations are being enforced strictly, dancing in public places will have to be halted at midnight. Dinner and a floor show, however, is permitted afterward in Toronto.

In Quebec Province the 2 a.m. closing for liquor sales is under unofficial suspension, according to night club operators.

Winnipeg and other western Canadian centres are lifting restrictions slightly and celebrants on the Prairies and Pacific Coast are expected to outnumber those of a year ago. Winnipeg Hotels are charging $7 a couple for dancing and night clubs $4.

There will be special watchnight services in many churches across the country with the customary New Year's Day masses in Catholic churches.

OBITUARY

LATE ALFRED E. HARRIS

The funeral of Alfred Edward Harris took place Thursday afternoon, December 29th, from his late residence, 64 Murney Street. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox.

The bearers were Messrs. Chas. Slingerland; Whitney Slingerland; Harry Langridge; Frederick Furmidge; Albert Matthews and Garfield Matthews.

Police Give Helping Hand to Stranded Motorist

The spirit of the New Year pervaded the police station today following investigation of the alleged strange actions of one Andrew Lawson, who claims he hails from the sunny slopes of British Columbia.

Wandering through the second floor of a Front street hotel, without bothering with the formality of registering at the desk, Lawson suddenly found himself in the arms of the law. Questioning by Plainclothesman Isard elicited the information that Lawson had been robbed of some seventeen dollars by a "friend" who rode with him from Toronto, where he had purchased a cheap car. He had been wandering in the upper floor of the hotel looking for a place to wash his hands.

Satisfied with the explanation and in view of the fact that Lawson was enroute to spend the New Year holiday with friends near Tweed, "the law" dipped down into its pockets and produce sufficient cash to buy Lawson gasoline to take him to his destination.

No other business marred the holiday serenity of the police station with the exception of nine transients who occupied the cellblock prior to seeking havens for the New Year festivities.

American Business and Financial Outlook for 1939

By Roger W. Babson

(Copyright)

Babson Park, Mass., December 31—Total business by the end of 1939 will be as good as—perhaps even better than—at any year-end since 1929. There may be periods when business will mark time, but the average volume for the year will be around 20 per cent above the 1938 level. Jobs, wages, retail sales, stocks, and even farm prices should all chalk up good-sized gains. It is even possible that the sharp peaks of early 1937 will be topped—but this is a pretty long shot. Considering all factors, I forecast that 1939 will be a year of moderate prosperity.

There are no "hedges" tacked on to my forecast as there were in several years past. In 1937, I feared that the sit-downers would upset the apple-cart. A year ago, Washington's inertia worried me. But today, I can see no reason why the tides of recovery should not carry us vigorously forward—perhaps even to new highs since 1929! This will merely be a continuation of the uptrend which began in 1932. Frankly, I do not consider the 1937-1938 Recession as anything more than a temporary, but sharp, interruption of the upward swing.

"LOST HORIZON"

I emphasize this bit of "back history" because I believe it has an important bearing on confidence at the moment. Millions of people—as we get further and further away from 1929—look upon that year as setting a record which can never again be touched As a result of the sharp ups-and-downs of the past decade, they have come to believe that hard times are now normal times in America. I disagree. I think that these people have lost their horizon! I do not believe that 1929 necessarily represents the pinnacle of American business.

It is true that some factors are less favorable than in 1929. Among them are taxes, bureaucracy and lack of faith. We have, however, the following favorable items today:

1. Our population has grown 7,000,000 since 1929.
2. Thousands of new products have been invented.
3. Production efficiency has soared 50% in ten years.
4. A huge deferred demand for goods has piled up.
5. Credit reserves are the greatest in history.
6. Production costs are lower than last year.
7. Wholesale and retail inventories are relatively low.
8. Confidence is returning as "business baiting" lessens.
9. Billions will be spend an armaments and pump priming.
10. Building is on the threshold of a real boom.

GRADUAL GAINS IN EARLY MONTHS

For these and other reasons, I believe that the forces of recovery are still predominant. Right now business stands at 99 on my Babsonchart compared with 84 a year ago, 1939 will open, therefore, with activity 18 per cent above the early days of 1938. Indications are that, as we work along through the first half of the year, business will register slow but healthy gain over the January level. The entire first half of the New Year should show a 25 per cent increase over the gloomiest months of early 1938.

The second half of 1939 should see a continuation of the gains. My forecast, however, is contrary to the expectations of many people. They look for business to taper off and even to slide backward when government pump priming ceases next May or June. Nevertheless I am willing to predict that the second half of the year will be better than the early months and will run 15 per cent above the last half of 1938. The entire year's gain should average around 20 per cent. This would put the Babsonchart at 106 to 108 by next Christmas.

MORE JOBS AND STRIKES

Better business next year naturally means more jobs. There are about 9,000,000 jobless today against 7,500,000 last Christmas. This total ought to drop at least 2,000,000 during 1939. New building, railroad equipment, factory machinery, and the tool industries, plus the service businesses, should provide a good portion of these jobs: As business increases, labor troubles may likewise increase. However, I now foresee no widespread strikes such as 1937 witnessed.

Wages may edge higher in 1939, but I do not expect any general increases, such as we had two years ago. Hourly rates will be marked up only in special instances later in the year. More jobs and slowly rising wage rates should add up to the biggest payrolls and best urban buying power since the Boom. These payrolls would even exceed 1929 were it not for the new "Wage and Hour" Act which is a ball and chain on most workers.

FARM OUTLOOK BETTER

Farm income should also be better. Farm products' prices can score moderate advances led by wheat, corn, fresh vegetables, and potatoes. Butter, eggs, and milk should not sell for much more than they did in 1938. Cattle will feature the livestock picture, while bigger supplies of lambs and hogs will hold down their prices. With wool demand high, and world supplies not burdensome, higher prices are logical.

Indications now are that production of farm products, while less than last year, will again be above average. So barring drought or other abnormal weather conditions, farm income may jump 10 per cent above 1938. Farmers' profits will be somewhat better than this year even though the goods which farmers must buy will cost more. Because the outlook is only moderately better, I see no reason for farm land values to change greatly.

FOOD TO BOOST LIVING COSTS

Food eats up practically 40 per cent of the average family's budget. Hence, the strengthening of farm products prices is the biggest factor in the living cost outlook. In addition to bigger food bills, clothing will also cost more in 1939—perhaps 5 per cent. An advance in fuel oil prices from current low figures by Spring is a distinct possibility. Soft coal prices may rise slightly. The demand for coal may increase as people find that a fully automatic stoker gives certain sections cheaper heat than does oil.

Rents should not move much in either direction except in the case of especially desirable urban properties. Taxes, of course, will be no lower. Electric light and gas rates will continue their long-term downward trend. Home furnishings, in general, will cost more. Adding up all these various items, my estimate is that by next Christmas we may find total living costs 5 to 8 per cent above present figures.

HIGHER WHOLESALE PRICES

Before leaving living costs, industrial commodity prices should be mentioned. They have been trailing recovery to date. In fact, they are actually lower on the average than they were when business started to skyrocket last June. So an advance is in the cards for prices of such raw materials as hides, leather, rubber, gray goods, zinc, lead, lumber, and the like. These gains mean that retail prices during 1939 will reverse their long downtrend. That is why I predict that home furnishings and clothing will cost more next year.

A jump in retail price-tags and in household bills ordinarily means cutting into consumer purchases—but the 1939 increase in payrolls and farm income should offset them. Consequently, I expect merchants, wholesalers, and jobbers to have a better year than in 1938. Dollar retail sales ought to average 8 to 10 per cent above the last twelve months with the best comparisons coming in June and October. Unit sales will not rise quite so much because of the higher prices.

Store profits should increase even more than dollar volume of trade because there need be no stock write-downs in 1939 as there have been during the past twelve months. A heavy demand for luxury and semi-luxury merchandise is logical. Charge account business will expand and, while I do not like to forecast it, I think that instalment sales will probably increase faster than cash business. With the outlook for higher retail prices, wise shoppers will stock up during early '39 "clearance" sales.

GOOD YEAR FOR SALESMEN

While 1939 looks like a GOOD year for merchants, it can be a BOOM year for salesmen. As one prominent business man recently put it, "1939 is going to be a salesman's year if it is going to be anybody's." Big things are ahead for salesmen who have been patiently doing their spade work through the last four or five years. Many jobs and orders that were killed by the Recession should "break" in 1939. Salesmen in the automobile, machinery, building materials, air-conditioning, advertising, real estate, household equipment, and other lines can look forward to a real year.

Best sales areas should be the industrial sections. Cities like Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Birmingham, Toledo, and Buffalo may show the biggest percentage gains, but trade in the agricultural sections should also be brisk. The Southeastern and Southwestern farm areas look particularly favorable. I advise stepping up advertising budgets and sales quotas by at least 15 per cent. In reaching 1939's good markets, advertising managers should not forget that newspaper coverage is still the best and cheapest medium.

BUILDING TO PACE INDUSTRIES

Nearly all industries can look ahead to better business in 1939. A possible 25 per cent gain in building (with costs creeping slowly upward) will be the most important. A sharp increase—around 40 per cent—in auto assemblies will stimulate activity in many related industries. Railroad material and equipment buying should improve as the current upturn in carloadings continue.

Gasoline consumption, electric power output, and aviation manufacturing will hit all-time record highs. Steel operations should average around 60 per cent of capacity for the year. Textile mills, mines, shipyards,, office equipment plants, building supply houses, rubber goods and tire factories should all be from 15 to 25 per cent busier than in 1938.

ROGER W. BABSON'S BUSINESS BLUEPRINT FOR 1939

BUSINESS:	Twenty Per Cent Gain Over 1938
TREND:	Gradual Uptrend With Second Half Best
CONGRESS:	Relief from New Anti-Business Legislation
PRICES:	Moderate Increases From Current Lows
FARMS:	Produce Prices To Rise; Income Higher
LABOR:	More Jobs, Steady Wages, Increased Strikes
RETAIL TRADE:	Ten Per Cent Gain; Price-Tags Marked Up
LIVING COSTS:	Food, Clothing to Lead Five Per Cent Rise
BUILDING:	Major Prop to 1939 Gains in All Industries
REAL ESTATE:	Rents Steady; Values, Activity Higher
SECURITIES:	Stocks and Medium-Grade Bonds to Advance
FOREIGN:	No War For U.S., England, or France
SUMMARY:	1939 To Be Far Better Year Than 1938

STOCKS TO RISE

With industrial activity rising, it is only logical to expect higher stock prices. Increased business, better earnings, pressure of idle cash, healthier trends at Washington should all help to strengthen the market. How far the advance will go, I am not prepared to say. There is an outside chance, however, that the March, 1937 Recovery highs can be broken during the coming year. Naturally, transactions on the various exchanges should be much more active than in 1938.

Readers ask that I name those stock market groups which I feel have the best outlook. I do not like to do so, but will mention the CHEMICALS, OILS, ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT, RAIL EQUIPMENTS, BUILDING, MACHINERY, nd STEELS as having good prospects. For ten years, I have never recommended a RAILROAD common stock and I do not intend to get messed up in this sick industry now. However, I believe that the RAILS may have the best chance of all groups in 1939 for percentage gains. This especially applies to certain defaulted bonds.

SHARP PROFIT AND DIVIDEND GAINS

During early 1939, I would prefer to buy securities of companies in strong financial condition, without funded debt if possible. But no security can be put away in a safe-deposit box and forgotten. Sharper control over operatin costs, brought about by the Recession, should produce the best profits since 1929, excepting only late 1936 and early 1937. Only higher taxes and labor costs will prevent earnings from being the best since the Boom. With a big step-up in profits, investors can expect many pleasant dividend surprises as the year progresses.

The same factors which will help stock prices will also rule bonds. Second-grade issues may be the sensation of the market. Force of capital seeking investment can keep high-grade bonds steady—but by year-end the pressure will be on the downside. I forecast no material change in 1939 in our abnormally low money rates. We are one year nearer the time, however, when those investors who have over-concentrated in low-coupon, high-grade, long-term corporate and government bonds will be very sorry!

PEACE PROSPECTS GLOOMY

I urge investors to leave foreign bonds alone because international relations will continue in a turmoil. The Munich Pact merely postponed war—for how long, no one knows. I am more optimistic than most observers, but I am not willing to predict—as I did a year ago—that there will be no war in Europe during the New Year. I feel, however, that Great Britain, France, and the United States will get twelve months more of peace.

Despite unsettled foreign relations, our overseas trade will be better than in 1938, but not as good as in 1937. The biggest gains will be with Great Britain and the Dominions. The improvement in South American commerce will also be considerable. Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade agreements and the recent Latin-American talks at Lima, Peru, should further these trade gains. Germany and Italy will remain poor markets and our trade with Japan will suffer.

LONG-TERM OUTLOOK UNCERTAIN

The above is a good outline of what I figure the New Year has in store for us. While 1939—and perhaps 1940—should be better, readers must not think that I believe we are out of the woods. Our standards of living must sooner or later be readjusted to actual conditions. Subsidies and other forms of government relief must some day cease. Many communities are now living in a fool's paradise. Ultimately, we must get back to fundamentals.

I am convinced that we cannot have any lasting prosperity in America—nor peace throuhout the world—until we have rebirth of character, a revival of unselfishness, and a renewal of our love for our fellowmen. When this takes place we will have truly "happy new years."

3rd. Sidney

3rd Sidney.—Service at Aiken's Church on Sunday morning was opened with Christmas music played by Mrs. Lee Grills and Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton. The Christmas spirit was manifest in the anthems rendered by the choir and the message by the pastor, Rev. H. B. Johnson. Several from the neighborhood who had been ill during the past few weeks were present at this service.

Mr. Bart Hogle, who has been confined to his home as the result of a fall, is steadily improving and his many friends hope for a speedy and complete recovery.

Miss Clara Adams is spending the holiday week at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Grills, Gordon and Gerald, spent Christmas Day with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bradshaw, Trenton.

REFLECTING
UPON THE EVENTS OF THE PAST FOUR YEARS
we are stirred with the feeling of worthy achievement, the pleasant realization that throughout Belleville and District we have many loyal friends old and NEW. Having over thirty-six years experience in the manufacture of Bread, Cakes, Pies, Buns, Etc., and an enviable record in Wedding and Birthday Cakes, having shipped the same all over Ontario and even parts of Quebec. We are conscious, also, of your splendid response to our efforts. The evidence of confidence in the principles so rigidly maintained, has contributed in no small measure to mutual understanding and progress, and has been also a source of inspiration to us. ALLOW ME TO EXTEND OUR SINCEREST GRATITUDE, and hope for a continuance of this valued relationship in the future.

THE NEW YEAR COMES

Tonight the air will ring with the messages of bells in the time-honored custom of bidding farewell to the year 1938 which will pass within a few hours and welcome to the new year.

"Ring out wild bells, to the wild sky,
The flying cloud, the frosty light,
The year is dying in the night
Ring out wild bells and let him die."

All that the year 1938 has given is now written in the records of nations and in the hearts of, the peoples of the nations, much that cannot yet be definitely read and understood, but every agency which was at work in the twelvemonth will leave its eternal impress somewhere in this earth. Never again can there be a year 1938. Next year which begins at midnight will be an entirely new story of hope, effort, and accomplishment, and it is hoped of happiness, peace and goodwill among the nations. In a sort of way there is a fatalism about this time which may be expressed in these words— "What's done cannot be undone" but there remains another year which may correct conditions. And in this other year so soon to be born, what visions will be granted to men and what achievements will be recorded as events in their baffling maze are written on the pages of 1939, have yet to appear and to take place.

It was Tennyson who gave poetic setting to the progress towards betterment in combatting "old shapes of foul disease", in curbing the quest of power, and ending "the thousand wars of old". He uttered a cry for peace which will ring down the ages and which appeals with especial poignancy to this present age—

"Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace."

War has yet to be rung out, as only every bell in the world and the bell in the heart of every human being could ring on such an occasion as the end of wars forever and on the coming of world peace, so that down the vista of the years, there can be seen no cloud of war. Some may believe this state impossible while man is man, because of his unwarranted ambitions, his selfishness and lust of power and because no such era is absolutely certain until the unregenerate hearts of individuals and the hearts of the nations and races undergo a great change under the guidance of brotherly love. But it is a great vision to possess and follow with care, for in the long run it may tend to bring closer to the race realization of this vision of human brotherhood.

Heavy loads have rested upon all peoples in 1938, there have been disappointments and shocks as the turn of events in Central Europe, which brought a stern realization to every nation and people that they must stand on guard for liberty. Statesmen have performed herculean deeds but a vast amount of the task is passed over to the year 1939.

As this age is carrying the burden of the world in its international aspects, so in the local field, men and women are being tested. That there may be more work for men who have been out of employment, that the year now at hand may be such that men will be able to say with confidence that the conditions of business are improved and will go far to lighten the burdens which are being borne, is the hope of all. May the united efforts of every agency for improvement in trade and in the relations of people and of races be successful.

The world has heard much of German, Spanish, Italian, and Chinese and Japanese affairs, because they are really world affairs, yet men desire to forget and feel free from al lthe cares of statecraft They desire for a short time at this season to give themselves over to the oldtime feasting and celebration of the coming of another year. Tonight there will be the customary jubilations, watchnight services, and all manner of welcomes to the year and Sunday, New Year's Day along with Monday, will furnish the opportunity for the people to observe the occasion. New Year's is quite different from Christmas, which is inspired by the story of the Babe of Bethlehem. New Year's has not this inspired background, but is associated with Christmas as a part of the midwinter celebration of the time when the sun has reached its lowest and will thereafter begin to climb the heavens. New Year's has not the family character of Christmas yet it does preserve its festivities, though to a lesser degree. New Year's is much more like the ordinary day of the year than Christmas. On New Year's people move away from their own firesides and a more worldly interest is taken in the day. New Year's really marks the end of the midwinter festival and season.

It naturally has its own salutation such as "Happy New Year". Such a phrase carries the feeling of gaiety. People peer into the future from now on and look for brighter things. It is but natural that the great brotherhood of mankind should on such an occasion greet everyone with the season's compliments.

THE PASSING OF THE OLD YEAR

We have bid good-bye to the year that's past,
The dear, dead days that have been so fleeting,
Through sunshine and shadow they hurried fast
The wonder of dawn and dusk repeating;
There were days of darkness and days of dream,
There were days of losing and days of winning,
But the golden dawn of a New Year's gleam
Gives us the chance of a fresh beginning.

The book of the old year is blotted o'er,
We gaze on its leaves with heartfelt sighing,
But we needs must think of these days no more,
But turn to the days now before us lying—
The days of the New Year a-gleaming bright
Their lure of light and life are flinging,
Gladly we turn to the dawning light
And hail the joy of a fresh beginning.

—HELEN B. ANDERSON.

HOGMANAY; THE LAST DAY OF THE YEAR the day in which New Year's festivities begin in Scotland where New Year's has even more significance in the matter of ceremonials than Christmas, which is also true of the French, particularly the French Canadians who celebrate the advent of the New Year with feasting and joyfulness. Hogmanay is also the name of the cake which is given children who make calls on this morn. Scotch parents used to tell their children that on Hogmanay a fearsome man walked about. He had one body but many heads, in fact one for every day in the year. There are many men now living who can recall that hunt on Hogmanay for the man with many heads. "The first foot" is also a Scotch legend. It is important who will be the first caller on New Year's Day, hence the "First Foot" which is supposed to bring good luck or otherwise. Formerly New Year's Day was the day for friendly calls, and still is to a limited extent. Young men made a round of their friends and at each house were given a glass of wine and a piece of cake. Before the calls were finished one can imagine that the spirit of hilarity would be the predominant note.

AMONG THE MANY MESSAGES OF GOOD CHEER RECEIVED BY THIS GREAT FAMILY JOURNAL AT THIS SEASON OF GOOD WILL comes one from Bowmanville enclosing renewal subscription and these kind words:

"WE SIMPLY COULD NOT DO WITHOUT YOUR SPLENDID PAPER. IT IS MUCH IMPROVED. I HAVE TAKEN IT FOR YEARS, BELONGING TO ONE OF THE OLD FAMILIES OF FIFTY YEARS AGO . . AND STILL ENJOY IT.. I WISH YOU A VERY PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR..

FROM PEORIA, ILLINOIS, COMES THIS APPRECIATIVE NOTE:

I wish to express my appreciation for your publishing my enquiry which I sent some time ago in regard to tracing my family history — the Hermon family. When I sent it I really had not much expectation of the grand results I have had. I have received four replies — three from cousins, and one from an old friend of the family there. I am well on my way, I think, in looking into the history of my family. Thank you, and good wishes for success in the coming year. (Miss) Henriette Hermon.

Oh ye of little faith—don't you know that the Great Family Journal never fails its friends — and no task is too difficult for it to at least tackle. 'Tiz easy, when you come to think that the Ontario Intelligencer Family includes over six thousand families, most of them in this immediate district. Six thousand families with an average of five each aggregate thirty thousand readers, who, after thoroughly digesting the paper, pass it on to friends and relatives near by or at a distance thereby enlarging materially the Family. Gosh, all hemlock! the response to advertisements and queries in this paper has even astonished the staff on occasion — and we certainly expect much, knowing the Ontario Intelligencer Family, as we do.

Why Do Partridge Die Out?

The peak of abundance among the ruffled grouse or partridge, as it is more commonly known, occurs evrey seven years.

The mystic figure is found applicable after study of the species, reported on in a bulletin of the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries.

This bulletin does not, however, explain definitely what influence works to create this cycle, other than to describe it as "the same disease which periodically affects the rabbit." The drop in numbers almost to the point of extinction lasts for about three years.

It is on the operation of the cycle that the open seasons are arranged and it is further intimated that, if it were possible to distinguish the male from the female, hunters might be given additional privileges by way of shooting male birds, since the partridge is a polygamous creature.

The same bulletin tells how the partridge makes that familiar and unusual sound resembling distant thunder. Motion pictures show it to be done by using the wings to beat the air in a rapid vibratory motion, so fast as to be almost invisible. For many years, it is stated, this has been a disputed point.

The rapidity of the rehabilitation process, after the birds have almost disappeared owing to the unexplained disease, is due to reproductive ability. The young flocks run ten and upward and when these broods in turn the following year bring forth their own young the increase is rapid, from one pair to a hundred individuals in two years under normal conditions. The instinct of self preservation is also helpful. The young chicks are adept at hiding and the mother bird quick at giving alarms as well as courageous in defence.

The bird is a native of North America and in no sense migratory unless driven from place to place by bush fires or seeking food. It is partial to rough hilly country and the banks of streams in any bush area.

To the Department information may be added the statement that the partridge at the present season lives on undeveloped buds of poplars, spruce and other trees, on such berries as cranberries and similar foods. When the weather is cold it will bury itself in the snow and remain there, sometimes for a week or more. Birds and animals can generally live long periods without food.

It frequently happens that in the spring months or at other times when rain or mild weather is followed by cold, to form a crust on top of the snow, the partridge are imprisoned and die.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

JOE KENNEDY

It is easy to understand why Joe Kennedy is a popular Ambassador in England. He defies the notions of those who libel the English by assuming that they have the highest regard for Americans who imitate them. The truth is that their favorite Americans' aside from the film stars, are people like Joe Kennedy, who have no "side", make all sorts of natural human errors, feel terribly about them and then make some more. We live no more in the days when the faux pas of an Ambassador are likely to set off the tinder box, but a well-liked Ambassador can put in much fruitful labor in the vineyard. The present Ambassador to the Court of St. James has done a lot of it, even if he did get too close to the line in the co-operation - with - dictators speech.

Any way you take him, Joe Kennedy is a more satisfactory diplomat than the "I am afraid I cannot discuss that" variety. — Baltimore Sun.

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

That body of yours ofr Saturday Acquiring Sensible Health Habits for 1939

As 1939 approaches there is the thought or wonder of what it is going to mean to you—business life, home life, and perhaps rest or recreation. All of these are important yet it is the way you are able to meet the strains and stress of life that really counts. Naturally I have in mind your physical condition or health.

Is your heart—that simple but vital pump—still able to do ordinary work without causing breathlessness?

Is your blood pressure high enough to give you a sense of well being, or is it so low that you seem tired all the time?

What did your dentist say about your teeth the last time you consulted him?

What about your appetite? Do you enjoy your meals? Are you constipated? Do you have indigestion, gas, bloating? Do you see and hear as well as you did? What about your weight —loss or gain?

When you have been checked over by your physician and dentist and any defects have been corrected, you would naturally expect to feel strong and buoyant—ready for any kind of work or play.

However you don't feel buoyant very much of the time despite the fact that you are in good health. Why?

Dr. William P. R. Emerson, Boston, and Dr. J. Grant Irving, Hartford, Conn. in the Journal of the American Medical Association, report the findings in the examination of a group of employees of an insurance company. They state that it is the daily health habits that cause fatigue, overweight, sometimes underweight, high blood pressure and other symptoms.

"The daily programs of both executives and employees revealed, almost without exception, the stress of artificial living. The usual program was a continuous performance, mentally, physically or both throughout the day with meals at the same rate of speed as work or play and ending with overeating at the evening meal. This program caused overfatigue and also gave rise to habits of fast eating and eating when overtired."

Speaking particularly of high blood pressure, the most serious faulty habits were being always tired (caused by continuous working under pressure), excessive eating, indoor living lack of exercise and worry and stress.

Think over your daily health habits. Faulty habits may be the cause of your "tired" feeling.

BRIDE BY MAIL

Our social customs are such that it seems difficult for many men and women, who would be glad to become life partners, to make known their ambitions to each other. This was emphasized by a recent news story which outlined how a young woman, a nurse 24 years of age, travelled 4,000 miles from England to Fort William, Ont., to meet a man to whom she had become engaged by correspondence. Neither had ever seen the other before the bride reached Fort William. Her prospective husband had to travel 400 miles from the bush district at Stratton, near the Ontario-Manitoba boundary where he has a 350-acre farm and specializes in beekeeping.

The young Englishwoman who is making this adventurous experiment in matrimony admits that the engagement began as a joke. She and half a dozen other nurses in the London hospital where she worked joined a matrimonial correspondence club paying a fee of $2.50. She received half a dozen proposals by letters from farmers, doctors, lawyers and merchants. She accepted that of the Canadian farmer.

She will find life on the bush farm a great contrast to that in the world's largest city. She will have no electric lights and a few of the amenities of civilization. The nearest neighbor is a half-mile away and the general store is four miles distant. The home in which she will live is a two-roomed shack without running water. In winter the temperature occasionally registers 40 below zero.

Human beings are very adaptable and if this young lady is possessed of the right temperament she will be able to extract satisfaction from the life she is destined to lead, even if it is to be vastly different from that which she has been accustomed to.

Evidently the fascilities that would expedite the coming together of men and women who might enter into life partnership are not ordinarily efficient. It ought not to be necessary to resort to long distance correspondence in such matters. Perhaps there ought to be some sort of official bureau that could bring together those whose circumstances make it difficult to discover where an acceptable partner may be found. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Britain's Advertising Expert

Sir Charles Frederick Higham, British advertising expert, died recently in London, where he was born sixty-two years ago. Starting as a chemist's assistant, he tried sixteen jobs in nineteen years in America until he embarked in the advertising field and became a public figure and Great Britain's "slogan king."

Sir Charles was the chief protagonist of collective or group form advertising whereby the public has been encouraged to "eat more fruit," "eat more bread," or "buy a British car." He is credited with introducing American advertising methods in England.

Sir Charles, who received his knighthood in 1921, was born in England and came to America a poor boy, at the age of 10. He entered advertising as a young man, rose to the post of advertising director of Frederick Loeser & Co., in Brooklyn, and then became Western manager for the Calkins & Holden agency.

At the age of 30, having obtained a thorough training in newspaper advertising, he returned to England to become the principal exponent there of American advertising methods, which he had become convinced were the best in the world.

On his visit to this city last Winter, he told interviewers that in the last twenty years he had placed $75,000,000 worth of newspaper advertising. As the largest buyer of newspaper space in the British Isles he expressed the firm opinion that it was the most-value medium of advertising.

"I know there is a tendency among many advertisers in your country to employ other means of selling things besides the press, but I have yet to meet an advertiser who has made a success without it," he said.

Sir Charles disapproved of the radio as an advertising medium, partly because he believed that the British, at least, do not appreciate something they get for nothing. He told an American interviewer that he thought the United States would eventually follow the example of Great Britain and eliminate advertising from the air waves.

At the outbreak of the World War Sir Charles raised one of the first battalions of volunteers in England, but was himself rejected for active service by the military officer. He did important work for the allied cause, however, as a writer of government appeals for men and money, coining some of the most effective slogans of the British home campaigns.

In 1922 Sir Charles helped plan and promote the first international advertising convention, held in London in 1924 and attended by 2,500 Americans. He served three terms as European vice president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World. He attended American conventions, including those of Toronto, 1912; Dallas, 1914; Indianapolis, 1916, and Milwaukee, 1922.

He was a member of Parliament for four years, representing South Islington, as a Conservative Unionist, from 1918 to 1922.

In the early Spring of 1925, Sir Charles, on his arrival in New York, announced that he came to develop a $1,000,000 advertising campaign in the interests of the British tea-growers in India. He said that he had increased the consumption of India tea in the United States by 3,000,000 pounds the previous year through newspaper advertising, using approximately thirty papers in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Boston and Philadelphia.

This increase, he explained, was due in part to the introduction of a 4 o'clock tea-drinking habit in this country.

Noted for his wit, Sir Charles, about ten years ago, presented to his friends a slim gold volume entitled "Tittle-Tattle." Here are a few of the epigrams it contained:

"Love is fanned by a bank draft."

"Beauty is a skin game."

"A little blonde is a dangerous thing."

"It's always darkest before it's bleached."

"It's never too late to spend."

"Tea for two often gets cold."

"Sirens are golden."

"Champagne has made many a finger sparkle."

"Gay dogs don't know they are puppies."—Obituary in New York Times.

Mr., Mrs. L. E. Mills, Shannonville To Observe Fiftieth Anniversary

Shannonville—Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Mills, well-known and respected residents of the village will quietly observe the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, January first. Mr. and Mrs. Mills who operate a general store in Shannonville, are held in very high esteem by everyone with whom they come in contact. Although they are very proud to have reached the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding they seem to think the achievement not very unusual. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mills are exceptionally agile for their age, both have excellent eyesight and can recall details of their younger life with uncanny ability. When queried by the Intelligencer Correspondent as to the particulars of their marriage they were able to relate everything even to the minute details.

On the first day of January 1889 Mr. and Mrs. Mills were quietly married at the Morven Methodist Parsonage. The marriage ceremony was performed by Mrs. Mills' father the Rev. W. H. Peake, assisted by her uncle, the Rev. William Shortt of Kingston. Mr. and Mrs. Mills became acquainted when Mrs. Mills moved to Shannonville with her father who took charge of the local Methodist Church. Mrs. Mills resided in Shannonville for three years from where she moved with her father to Morven. During this time Mr. Mills had been increasing his business and they finally decided to enter the ring of matrimony. Therefore Mr. Mills journeyed to Morven where the ceremony was performed. A journey to Morven today would be of very short duration and would be one of comfort but in 1889 travelling was not by motor car but by horse and buggy or as occasion would demand by cutter and therefore was very tedious and at times very uncomfortable. After the wedding ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Mills returned to Shannonville where they are still operating their merchant business. Their marriage was blessed with one son whom they named Reginald and who at the present time operates a laundry at Barrie where Mr. and Mrs. Mills spent the Christmas weekend. Mr. Mills has established a very remarkable record inasmuch as he has operated a business in the village for more than fifty-six years. Both Mr. and Mrs. Mills are devout church members, both attending Shannonville United Church regularly. Mr. Mills is also a member of the Shannonville Orange Lodge. Mr. Mills is eighty-five years of age and Mrs. Mills is sixty-nine and are still operating their business without assistants.

Vocation of Cheese-Making Not Likely to Be Invaded by Women

Why not women cheesemakers for Canada?

Those connected with the industry in this immediate section are at present pondering the news from New Zealand where it is reported more women than for some time past have this year been enrolled as students in dairy schools, where they will later be graduated as bona fide cheesemakers, if successful in passing the usual examinations.

"Women cheesemakers in Canada are no novelty; I've seen three or four of them in my time. And they were good makers," comments Mr. J. L. Irwin, veteran Dominion dairy grader of the local office.

"Women are peculiarly adapted for the job of making cheese, and they are splendid makers. They are neater, more sensitive about their work and the task of making good cheese, and put many a male cheesemaker to shame in the matter of sanitation and neatness.

"But the employment of women in Ontario and Canadian cheese factories will never become general," believes Mr. Irwin. "The work of handling the bigger Canadian cheese is too much for most of them. The industry in this country is not adapted for this class of worker. But if they ever did take up the job seriously, a lot of the men would have to buckle down to business to keep their end up."

Local Jews Faced With Problem of Raising Funds for Assistance

Jewish Councils of the city, faced with one of the greatest problems yet experienced, have been attempting to find their way out of the difficulty by long and lengthy discussion.

In line with other Jewish communities of Canada, Belleville Jewry has organized to bring aid to their fellow beings on the borders of Germany and in Czechoslovakia, but find themselves hampered by lack of funds with which to make any definite move toward actual assistance.

The matter was explained by one of the city's prominent business men this morning.

"Canadian Jews, as well as those of the United States, have subscribed heavily lately in an effort to help members of their race who have been suffering all the indignities to which they have been subject. Families in Palestine at present have agreed to take the youth from these oppressed communities, to Palestine at a cost of $364 each, to keep them and train them at this sum for a period of two years at least. It is the aim of all Jews to subscribe at least this much apiece to do their share. We in Belleville, many of us cannot afford that much. We have given heavily in the past and this is now being felt.

"In Kitchener, a city of a population not so much larger than this city, a total of $4300 was subscribed and has been sent to the officials of the Jewish Distribution Committee of Canada and the United States. That is the problem in Belleville—how to help with the little we have available."

Review of Year's Work Of Board of Education

A year of cautious deliberation and reserved expenditures was marked by members of the Belleville Board of Education in a term which is about to close.

In the main it was a year of routine nature, not characterized by any large amount of spending, but by a rigorous policy of economy as announced at the first of the term by Chairman C. L. Hyde, one of the most efficient chairmen yet to guide the destinies of this important civic body. And when the books are closed for the year, a satisfactory balance will be shown, a balance which has been the result of savings and careful paring of spendings in almost every department, notably the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee, and the Supplies Committee, which committes are entrusted annually with the bulk of the spending of the yearly appropriation.

The year 1938 was a year which differed greatly on the Board from those that had gone before in that it was the first year of the newly constituted Board which consisted of nine elected members, and one member or trustee appointed by the Separate School Board.

In the year 1936 the Board was faced with a heavy overdraft as it took office, the result of necessary spending on unlooked for contingencies by previous Boards, and in the year 1937 it was forced to levy for sufficient to cover this. But in the year 1938 members were able to reduce this by a similar amount until it enters the present era with a satisfactory balance, and all debts paid. Since then the policy of progressive economy has been the rule of the Board.

Among the work projects of minor nature which was undertaken by the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee this year was the reconstruction of the parapet of the Collegiate and Vocational Institute. This was found necessary owing o the danger caused by the advanced state of disrepair of the upper section of the walls. This year saw also the appointment of a special music teacher in the public schools and the emphasis of music instruction in the Collegiate, the results of which were clearly demonstrated at the recent series of school concerts. The term saw also the serious discussion of the advisability of setting up Domestic Science and Manual Training classes in the four public schools.

First Banquet Held

In November of this year there was the innovation instituted by Chairman Hyde of the first banquet of the Board at which trustees were hosts to the Hon. Dr. Simpson, Ontario Minister of Education, and Mrs. Simpson, school principals and staff of the Belleville Collegiate, the public schools and St. Michael's Academy, Albert College, the Ontario School for the Deaf, the Ontario Business College and other local teaching institutions, which made closer the friendship of trustees and staff, and from which developed a new spirit of co-operation to assist the work of the Board.

One of the most important pieces of legislation in some years which directly affects affairs of education in the city was the bringing in by Chairman H. J. Allin of the special Rules Committee of a new revision of all rules and regulations affecting the Board, specially adapted to suit the newly revised Board of smaller membership.

On the third Friday of January, 1939, the first meeting of the new board will be held. Two of last year's Board will be absent, Mr. P. C. McGuire, who will retire, and former Chairman H. J. Allin, who, having attained to the highest post on the Board of Education has now been elected as councillor on city council. They will be replaced by Dr. A. C. Locke, and by J. W. Deacon.

Choice For Chairmanship

Whether a contest will be held for the chairmanship of the Board next year remains to be seen. The choice it is understood, has been narrowed down to the two oldest members of the Board, Trustee Russ. Wotten, and Trustee Reg. Moncrieff, each with eight years of continuous service to his credit. Both have taken an active part in the affairs of educational management, both have expressed themselves as ready to offer themselves for the chairmanship. This past year Trustee Wotten held the chairmanship of Finance, one of the most important posts on the Board, Trustee Moncrieff that of Supplies, the committee which he fathered as Trustee, and which has proved one of the most popular innovations put into effect by any Board.

The year ending was a full, purposeful year, registered as one of the best governed years, in which affairs of education were executed wtih promptness and despatch by a smaller Board which more easily takes care of the many duties entrusted to it. It ended with a second innovation introduced by Chairman C. L. Hyde, that of a dinner gathering at which he was guest to members and friends.

Officers constituting the Board in 1938 were: Chairman, Chas. L. Hyde; Trustees—H. J. Allin, F. G. Cushing (Separate School appointee), H. B. Fetterly, Lt. Col. E. A. Geen, Dr. J. W. Kinnear, P. C. McGuire, Reg. Moncrieff, Rev. A. B. Payne, F. R. Wotten.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

How the Quints Were Cured of Sucking Their Thumbs

Yesterday I warned mothers against getting too excited or upset because the baby persists in sucking its thumb. Every infant born indulges in thumb-sucking to some degree. There isn't anything sinister about it. Along with other things, it is just a method of child action. You know the baby's first real instinct or habit is the habit of sucking. And the baby's first playthings are the parts of its own body. That is why the thumb seems to find its way so naturally to the mouth.

The mother shouldn't get too upset about this thing; she should take it as a matter of course. It just shows that the child is seeking its own interests. Like all other baby habits, providing that the infant is treated wisely, other ideas develop, and the child finds other means of satisfaction and expression.

Usually the desire to suck the thumb will wane at six months, and by the time the child passes its first birthday, it will heve stopped—that is, if the mother hasn't over emphasized the habit too much in her efforts to make the child stop. You may stop the habit by the use of apparatus, but the danger is that the child will resent such methods.

Besides it is wrong, I think, to dam up a child's energies by such restraint. The wise parent will change this habit by giving the child something else to do that will take its attention. We all know the impulse we have to go ahead and do something we have just been told not to do.

Of course we had this problem of thumb-sucking with the Quints. However we avoided letting them see that we were trying to break them of the habit. As a matter of fact, they did it occasionally until they were three. Even now, if excited or taken by surprise, we see a thumb going automatically into a mouth.

No, we didn't try to break them of the habit. What we did, though was to try to see that they were kept busy doing something all the time they were awake. Their routine is well arranged and they are doing nothing. When their sleep periods come along, they are tired enough to take advantage of them. Naturally our routine is not rigid but it would surprise you just how little it varies from day to day.

Our nurses have had to use other methods from time to time. If they see a child sucking its thumb, or doing anything else it shouldn't be doing, they call attention to something else—to a picture, a new game, a bird, anything to distract the child's attention.

Sometimes this thumb-sucking appears during a story period. You know that example is contagious, and we have five children together to look after. But the nurses have learned how to distract their attention and get them to do something that puts an end to the thumb-sucking, for the time being, anyway.

Just another word to mothers: If baby begins to fall asleep with its thumb in its mouth, don't disturb him. Wait until he is asleep and then remove the thumb. If you waken him to take the thumb out, he is likely to stay awake and think over the thing to which you have drawn his attention.

Roslin—On Wednesday evening, Dec. 28th, a large crowd of friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bailey, Roslin, in honor of their eldest son, Carman, and his bride (nee Edith King). Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have been residing in Windsor since their marriage in Sept., last, and it is now when they have returned to Roslin that the young people took the opportunity to welcome them back to there home here and to honor them with a miscellaneous shower. The gathering was called to order by Mr. Everett Hodgin who read the following address:

Dear Edith and Carman:

We your friends have gathered in this joyous season to express our pleasure and to extend best wishes for your continued happiness.

For sometime past you have been of our community, in that time you have won a permanent place in our affection.

As a tangible expression of our good wishes for a long and happy married life, we ask you to accept these tokens which express our esteem and good will toward you.

Signed on behalf of your friends assembled, Everett Hodgins, Charles Dawe, Gordon Gray.

Mr. and Mrs. Bailey both expressed their appreciation for the lovely gifts and invited them all to visit them in their new home. All joined in singing "For they are jolly Good Fellows." After which a dainty lunch was served. The evening was spent in dancing, after which each departed to their homes feeling they had spent a very enjoyable evening.

Mind Profile When Buying A New Hat

ANITA LOUISE
Her hats harmonize with her lovely Features

By HELEN FOLLETT

When selecting a hat, mind your profile. Survey nose, chin and forehead. The wrong hat, or the wrong tilt, will throw facial features out of balance. Think that isn't so? Don't be silly. A long-nosed woman will make her nose look longer if she wears a hat with a point in front or a hat that hangs onto the back of her neck.

Millinery is in the public eye and gets crazier every minute. Hats have assumed more shapes and disguises than the detective in the mystery story. To make a happy selection requires heavy thinking and at least two mirrors, three being better.

The placing of the chapeau is a woman's own special business; she can do as she pleases about it. The tilt that will glorify her may make the next woman look like a caricature. Certainly the hat is the distinguishing detail of dress. How a woman wears it tells you whether or not she has the dress sense highly developed.

There can be no rules offered as to the right combination of hat shapes and facial features. The marriage ritual of a face and a hat must be performed by good taste.

More and more women are flaunting the upped hairdress. It's not easy to keep rear locks sleeked up, but one can't afford to fall behind the fashion cavalcade. Strong winds play the dickens with the lifted coiffure. Well it's all a part of the beauty game.

With the upswept topknot have come all manner of hair ornaments, combs and bands, clips and wreaths. Perky ribbon bows appear, quaint as a baby's bonnet. Barrettes are here again. Look over grandma's treasures; you may find one of fine tortoise shell. They were beautifully designed in the late nineties, were used to keep the pompadour in place.

To remove ink stains, while it is still wet sponge thoroughly with skim milk. Wash sponge in cold water, then wash ink again with milk, and keep up the process until the stain has disappeared. If the ink has dried, remove from white cloth only by oxalic acid or lemon juice and salt.

If you buy undergarments that are loose, without being too large, they will wear longer and not make you uncomfortable by twisting or climbing. Wash them frequently with lukewarm water and plenty of mild soapsuds to get longest service.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Marriagable Girls'.. Appearance Often a Deciding Factor in Future Happiness

Old Mother Eve must have whispered into the ears of those who operate the Manhattan School of Women's Garment Trades, New York City, when she urged them to open a genuine dress and millinery shop.

Everything in that shop is made by the students and the money collected from the sales averages over $15,000 a year. This is turned over to the Board of Education. Fine! But not half as important as the fact that these girls know how to cut and fit dresses which give them an excellent wardrobe at the same cost as one or two dresses purchased at department stores. For, as everyone knows, the feeling of being well and becomingly dressed banishes fear and gives a girl a sensation of being tops with herself and the world. She's like a racing yacht, every inch of canvas spread, full sail on a winning breeze.

Clothes affect a woman's chance of happiness. And the part they play in marriage cannot be overestimated. All girls have a natural and proper desire to hold their boy friends. Wise women have warned them that an engaged girl or one who is going "steady", is eternally on dress parade. And that if her sweetheart can't be proud of her appearance at any and all times, his affection is apt to wane.

If girls have to carry economy to the pinching point, here is where the Manhattan School of Women's Garment Trades looms as a beacon showing the way. A girl doesn't have to be shabby and out of fashion and fear that, as her wardrobe shrinks and loses luster, so also will the boy friend's love. With a needle, thimble, pair of scissors and a couple of yards of material off some bargain counter she can turn herself into a fashion plate, which will enable her to prance down the street or out on the ballroom floor with perfect composure and aplomb.

Nearly all schools—public and private—have sewing classes where young ladies hem napkins and make aprons and dreary little shirt waists that would hardly attract a fly. But the great art of learning how to perform miracles with a pair of scissors on a piece of material, and make a dress which will stress your own good points by cutting and draping it into a knock out, has been withheld from girls except in this advanced Manhattan high school.

These girls seem to know something about the facts of life, as well as the facts of business. For, if they don't marry as soon as the ink on their graduation diplomas is dry, there are jobs awaiting them. Women's ready-to-wear garment shops are always glad to get these girls, even as designers, if they show sufficient talent. They are equally welcome in tailoring establishments and hat factories, because their four years of training makes them invaluable. They usually start at about $15 a week, and what they get after that depends upon the ability of the girls.

In no sense does this high school attempt to compete with private industry. Wholesale orders are not accepted. The store is merely regarded as an outlet for the things made in the class-room. And all the money realized is turned back into school supplies and material In addition to knowing how to make lovely clothes, which suit every type of beauty, or those less-endowed, with pulchritude the girls are given a thorough course in salesmanship which makes job-getting easy.

First choice is given pupils on anything they make. All that is expected of them is to pay for material.

GOOD MANNERS

Writing to Unmet In-Laws To-Be

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My engagement recently has been announced to a young man from out of town, and we are to be married very soon. I have never met his family, and I would like to write to them, as they live out of town.

I am very uncertain just what to write to them, and would appreciate it very much if you can tell me juust what to say.

Bettina

You do not say whether your in-laws to be have written to you (as it would be natural, and correct, for them to do), and if this intended letter of yours is in answer to their letter. If they have written the customary welcoming into the family letter to you then your letter would thank them for their kind letter and for their welcoming and would chat with them in a "daughterly" way about your and their son's plans for the future.

If they haven't written you, you should not stand on ceremony, but should write to your fiance's mother, saying how much you are looking forward to being a member of her family; telling her of your love of her son; telling her how closely you feel about her and her husband and family because of the many fine things your fiance has told you of them; how happy you are at the thought of meeting and knowing them.

You must remember how much they will appreciate being told about your plans for the future, your plans about the wedding, about the new home—all the delightful big and little things that it is natural they will love hearing about from you. Make your letter informal, chatty, appreciative, establishing a high-hearted relationship with your new relations.

Resignation Letter

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

As my time is pretty well taken up with several organizations I belong to, I find that I shall have to sever my connection with one.

Will you kindly give me a form of letter that would be suitable to send to a ladies' organization which confines itself to charity and educational work, tendering my resignation? This is the first time I have ever resigned from any organization, and I am at a loss to word my resignation.

Jane

You would write your letter of resignation to the secretary of the club, and it might be worded somewhat like this:

Mrs. George Wells
Secretary, Main Civic Club.
Buffalo, New York

Dear Mrs. Wells,

I regret very much that, because of the pressure of other responsibilities, I find it necessary to resign from the club. May I ask you to present my resignation at the next meeting?. I especially regret that I must resign, because I have deep faith in the fine work that the club is doing and I have greatly enjoyed participating in the meetings and in the activities.

Very sincerely,

Today's Menu

By BETSY NEWMAN

Meat Loaf Surrounded with Onions
Baked Potatoes
Molded Tomato Salad
Pumpkin Pie Cheese Coffee

I FEEL that I have neglected the lowly onion in these menus. Maybe you detest onions, in which case you don't mind the omission. But scalloped, fried, baked or stuffed onions are very welcome to the person who loves the vegetable, as I do. I was served scalloped onions with my turkey on Thanksgiving.

Scalloped Onions—Peel and slice enough onions to fill a casserole three-fourths full, sprinkle with pepper and salt. Melt one tablespoon butter in hot milk, enough to cover onions, pour over sliced onions, top with cracker or bread crumbs or crumbled corn flakes, sprinkle a little grated cheese on top and allow three-fourths of an hour to bake.

Stuffed Sweet Spanish Onions—Cook onions until tender, remove from water, drain and fill with equal quantities of bread crumbs and nippy American cheese (grated) and one-third as much butter as cheese. After filling onions, place in shallow pan with small amount of water, bouillon, chicken broth or cream and bake until crumbs are brown. The onion centres which are removed for stuffing may be chopped and added to cream sauce for a sauce for the onions. You may fill the centres of the onions with creamed peas, if you wish, instead of the stuffing given.

No need for straggly locks when arriving at an evening affair these nights. No, not with those fascinating babushka kerchief bonnets that come in velvet trimmed with fur bands, sequin and rhinestone orders and trims.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

Pretty as a picture is an evening frock of American beauty red velvet. Its heart-shaped strapless decolletage is trimmed with shirred ruffles of the fabric. The skirt is full, the bodice very fitted

Still going strong is the afternoon suit. A wearable model is of black woollen, the cutaway type jacket untrimmed. Worn with the suit is a petunia silk jersey blouse, a black felt hat with big pinwheel ornament of monkey fur and a big monkey fur muff.

Big and Small is the story of the tiny hat and the huge muff tied up into interesting ensembles. A charming set has a tiny hat, a disc of turquoise velvet quilted in a floral pattern. A tiny black feather is thrust through the crown. The enormous turquoise quilted velvet muff conceals a handbag.

Lots of attention at Balencia's midseason showing was given to black and white costumes. A charming informal evening frock consists of a long-sleeved white point de Venise lace blouse tucked into a wide purple satin girdle and worn with a wide-hemmed, black sunpleated skirt.

It is easy to find a smart coat this season. A good choice for general daytime wear is a model in purple wool, cut to look like a suit, with a vestee of kolinsky dyed a sable color.

Before the footlights, especially on first nights, one gets a fine fashion show. A new theatre suit is of red woollen with gold and silver threads forming a shadow plaid effect.

AT THE BELLE

"The Citadel"

Great as it is . . . the most pronounced success in Belle Theatre history, "The Citadel" co-starring Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell, must close its record breaking engagement at the Belle Theatre. A festival of fun and merriment has been arranged for the 10:45 show when you will have the opportunity to laugh out the old year and laugh in the new year enhanced by balloons, Scotch pipe band and double community singing, plan now to attend. . . . Join the crowds and have the time of your life. Donald Duck in an uproarious color cartoon "Fox Hunt" will be presented on the same program.

Midnight Show.

A cast of high and low comedy experts, combined with some of the loveliest red and blonde beauty on the screen, has tackled a fresh and original idea in "Thanks For Everything", and has whaled it away into one of the most entertaining pictures 20th Century-Fox has ever turned out. The Belle Theatre at midnight will present a special preview presentation of this scandalously funny picture and the bubbling antics of its cast of glamor, wit and nitwit that includes Adolphe Menjou, Tony Martin, Binnie Barnes, George Barbier and Warren Hymer.

Four Grand Shorts.

Four grand short treats have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including "Dog Daze", a clever and entertaining vaudefilm "What Price Safety", another of the ever-welcome "Crime Does Not Pay" stories so popular with Belle audiences, a splendid Pictorial Review and a song-filled Community Sing filmed appropriate for the occasion.

"Just Around the Corner"

There's so much to laugh at, so much to love, so many things to take away and remember in Shirley Temple's new picture, "Just Around the Corner", that even the most glowing comment can hardly do justice either to Shirley or to the delightful show which 20th Century-Fox has fashioned around its number one star.

Among those who share in all this fun are Charles Farrell, as Shirley's dad; Joan Davis, as lady-in-waiting to a kennel-full of Park Avenue pooches; Amanda Duff (a promising young newcomer to films) as the girl with whom Farrell is in love; Bert Lahr, as Joan's chauffeur-sweetheart and the inimitable Bill Robinson, who does a new dance routine with Shirley that surpasses even their "Toy Trumpet" number in "Rebecca".

The picture opens with Shirley returning home from boarding school to find her architect dad down on his luck.

The reason, he explains to Shirley is because of what is happening to Uncle Sam. Uncle Sam could fix everything—if only people would help him.

Shirley naturally assumes that her dad is referring to the fabulously wealthy Samuel Henshaw—who is "Uncle Sam" to her playmate, Bennie Bartlett, and to the lovely Amanda. So she conspired with Bert Lahr, Joan Davis and Bill Robinson to put on a big benefit show in the basement of the apartment house—and "Uncle Sam" (Henshaw) is to be the beneficiary!

Four Short Gems.

Four entertaining and varied treats are announced for exhibition on the same program including a very funny Walt Disney Color Cartoon "Brave Little Tailor", "Hillybilly Goat" offering twenty minutes of uproarious fun, the popular Belle Newsreel, and Athletic Oddities introducing Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Under Western Stars"

Roy Rogers, star of "Under Western Stars", at the Capitol, hitch-hiked to Hollywood from Cincinnati Ohio, when he first made up his mind to "crash the movies".

The young westerner had no luck with the studios during his first tries. He then turned to radio and with a program which he organized, called the "Sons of The Pioneers", began to make a name for himself.

It was nearly four years later, however, before he received his first screen role, and several months after that before Republic Studio discovered him.

The 'break' which has come to Rogers makes the long wait well worth while. The new Roy Rogers-Smiley Burnette series of western pictures promises to make both of them full-fledged stars overnight.

"Under Western Stars" is an exciting story of a young cowboy who suddenly finds himself elected to Congress. He takes Smiley along to Washington, D.C., as his secretary, and the two westerners show the nation's capitol elite society some tricks of the cow country. Many amusing situations arise as well as plenty of action, before the final fade-out.

"The Missing Guest"

Ghosts and giggles, tragedy, comedy and tense situations follow one another in Universal's latest production, "The Missing Guest", the second feature on the program at the Capitol, starring Paul Kelly, Constance Moore and Wm. Lundigan.

"Service De Luxe"

Take two stars, three comedians, a crack director, an excellent story and a wealth of production — and literally and figuratively you've got "Service De Luxe", which has its midnight Preview showing at the Capitol.

The stars are Constance Bennett and Vincent Price. Perhaps it's a bit early to dub Price a cinema star. It is his first screen effort. But star he is, if a smooth convincing performance, a truckload of personality and a heap of ability makes a star.

Getting down to the comedy element of the offering, it's there in an opulent degree. Charlie Ruggles, Mischa Auer and Helen Broderick form a threesome that grabs every inch of laugh-making material in the picture.

Deluxe entertainment served by masters in merry-making!

AT THE McCARTHY

"There Goes My Heart

The following review on "There Goes My Heart" which opens next at the McCarthy theatre, was written by Roly Young, reporter, of theatre attractions, for The Globe and Mail, Toronto, Ontario. Mr. Young gives the picture three and a half stars as well as this splendid writeup.

United Artists release of Hal Roach's production, directed by Norman Z. McLeod, with the following cast:

Reporter	Fredric March
Heiress	Virginia Bruce
Salesgirl	Nancy Carroll
Chiropractor	Alan Mowbray
Editor	Eugene Pallette
Photographer	Arthur Lake
Millionaire ...	Claude Gillingwater
Secretary	Etienne Girardot
Salesgirl	Patsy Kelly
Shopper	Marjorie Main
Cleric	Harry Langdon

The years spent in making short comedies are standing Hal Roach in good stead, for all his recent feature comedies have been able to ring the bell, and his list of laugh hits becomes more impressive as it lengthens. "There Goes My Heart" is another in the series, and is recommended to all who revel in farcical complications. The fact that the cast aren't even given names, but only descriptive nouns for identification shows how unimportant they are except for what they do.

The heiress, rather obviously patterned after Barbara Hutton, sails home on her palatial yacht, and under a false name gets a job in one of her chain stores as a salesgirl. The reporter is assigned by his editor to expose her, and, of course, falls in love with her. On this slender thread is hung a series of hilarious episodes and escapades. Funniest, to most people, will be the sequence in which Patsy Kelly solves the lighting problem by plugging a couple of floor lamps into the flashing electric sign outside her window. Patsy also has an hilarious time with a reducing machine (and obviously she has been using one both on and off the screen). Fredric March and Virginia Bruce have a funny session in an ice rink, and even the final desert island sequence, with Harry Landgon as the minister who turns up opportunely to marry them, is filled with laughs.

For bigger and better laughs, see "There Goes My Heart."

ANY "NEW ORDER"

strictions, currency changes and tariff alterations.

After delivery of Japan's Nov. 18 note, Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita gave the British and American Ambassadors a further oral exposition of Japan's attitude toward foreign economic rights in China.

He was reported to have told them frankly that the principle of the open door in China had vanished and to have used the language, "hereafter, you will be permitted . . . you will not be permitted etc." in discussing what trade other countries would be allowed to carry on with China.

Obligations Recalled.

The United States' new note was understood to have recalled Japan's obligations under the nine-power treaty of 1922 which guaranteed the open door, or equal economic rights for all, in China. It also contended that obligations of the treaty could not be renounced unilaterally, that is by one nation signing it; that if it was to be changed, it must be done by international agreement.

The United States thus followed a position which paralleled that it took throughout Japan's 1932 conquest of Manchoukuo and establishment of the present regime there which has never been recognized by the United States.

GERMANY'S PLAN

pean picture may have an important effect upon Prime Minister Chamberlain's talks Jan. 11-14 with Premier Mussolini in Rome.

Restricted Under Treaty.

Under the Anglo-German Naval Treaty, Germany agreed to restrict herself to 35 per cent of British tonnage in every category but submarines. She agreed to limit her U-boat strength to 45 per cent of Britain's. But it was further agreed that Germany had the right, if she deemed it necessary, to build up to the full British submarine tonnage after "friendly discussion" between the two countries.

Britain has been trying, apparently in vain, to persuade Germany there is no imperative need for her to build a vast submarine fleet, while Berlin has held out "the Soviet threat" as justification.

Germany was expected to go ahead with the submarine building, but at the same time she was understood to be anxious not to shatter her naval treaty with Britain.

Can't Overtake Britain.

She would be in a hopeless position in any attempt to overtake Britain in capital ships because of her lack of foreign currency and raw materials.

Since Great Britain is dependent upon imports for food, the admiralty is concerned about the effect of a big German U-boat fleet upon her merchant shipping in case of war. Since the Great War Britain has made several unsuccessful attempts to abolish the use of submarines by international agreement.

Dorothea Kent, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds and Frank Jenks, stars of "Youth Takes a Fling," at the McCarthy Theatre.

Charles Ruggles, Joy Hodges, Mischa Auer, Constance Bennett, Vincent Price and Helen Broderick in "Service De Luxe," coming to the Capitol Theatre.

Belleville 'Hi-Speeds' Defeat Picton 9-2 in Opening Game Of Junior "C" Loop in City

'Toots' Holway's Band of Youngsters Easily Superior

ALWAYS ON TOP

'Stub' Ethier Collects Seven Scoring Points in Contest

Flashing a brilliant display of concerted offensive hockey, backed up by a sterling defence and a checking display that surprised the most critical fan in attendance, "Toots" Holway's blue-and-gold-clad "Hi-Speed" band of junior pucksters lifted the curtain on the local hockey season here in Hume Arena last night, when they won a decisive well-earned victory over the Picton youngsters by a 9-2 count to annex their first win in the district Junior "C" loop.

Spotting their opponents a distinct advantage in weight, the local kids uncorked an offensive that netted them one goal in the first period, four in the second and the same number in the final chukker. Picton retaliated late in the second period and again in the dying moments of the game.

Showed Superiority

The Holway crew showed a distinct superiority in all departments over their opponents. Their attacks were well organized while their coaching was exemplified in an outstanding display of checking, both going and coming, that turned back the Picton attack many times. They boast a sturdy offense in Goyer and Ross Clare with both lads showing an offensive ability that was another feature of the game. Goyer was brilliant in all departments, his rushes at times standing the small attendance on its feet as they culminated in a brace of markers. Clare was good, rushing consistently, while both men gave Cook, in goal, a fine defence.

Up front, the "Hi-Speed" sharpshooters were paced by "Stub" Ethier, right-wing flash whose work bordered on the sensational. He grabbed himself seven scoring points getting four goals and three assists. Mark Storms showed a fine turn at centre on the "Louis" line his pivot work standing out as he fed Ethier and McGuire who flanked him. The latter also shone up front getting one goal and three assists.

Whippet Line Smart

No less effective was the "Whippet" line of Reid, Weller and Rosebush. The latter got a goal and an assist as did Weller. This line of diminutive speedsters were checking thorns in the side of the opposition all night and did not lessen the effectiveness of the squad while they were on the ice. Warren and McBride provided an effective second line defence.

The Pictonians put up a plucky fight in a losing cause. However, while at present they show a lack of coaching, they will improve, as they are a hard-checking, fast skating crew that boasts plenty of weight and "what it takes" and their defeat last night was no disgrace. They battled the entire sixty minutes and were fighting hard when the final whistle blew. Roblin, Hicks, Pike and Corke shone for them.

The second period was perhaps the liveliest as both squads threw caution to the winds and put on a display of heavy checking, that had the rink in a roar. Picton pressed hard in effort to cut down the two goal lead, but the speedy front lines of the locals aided and abetted by the fine defence work of Goyer and Clare, broke away to ram home the rubber on different occasions.

Always on Offensive

The third chukker saw no let-up in the offensive tactics of the "Hi-Speeds". They only sent thrust after thrust into enemy territory, and only the fine work of Corke in the Picton nets kept their score down to a quartette of markers. It was in this period that Roblin, husky defenceman of the Picton squad, scored the prettiest goal of the night, when his hard drive from the right wing ripped past Cook for the second and final score for the visitors.

The game was clean with only six penalties being handed out by referee "Bouncer" Holway, four of these coming in the second period, when tempers flared momentarily.

All in all, Belleville should be proud of the showing of the "Hi-Speeds." A fast-skating, fine stickhandling gang of youngsters, two of whom are eighteen years of age and the rest fifteen and sixteen, they showed a turn of hockey ability last night that augurs well for the future.

The Teams:

Belleville: Goal, Cook; Defence, Clare, Goyer; Centre, Storms; Wings, Ethier, McGuire; Subs., Reid, Rosebush, Weller, Warren, McBride, Clarke.

Picton: Goal, Corke; Defence, Welbanks, Roblin; Centre, Hicks; Wings, Sprung, Pike; Subs., Mason, McNeil, Channel, Benson, Welbanks, and Martin.

NO MEDDLING

Canadiens' camp in the N.H.L. has looked at times this season like a clearing house for transient hockey players as shifts were made almost daily in an effort to bring some measure of won-and-lost prosperity to the team. The shifting is over now, according to Ernest Savard (above), president of the Montreal team. There will be no more executive meddling as far as player deals go and the team will attempt to go places with a fairly consistent lineup.

Sports Roundup

By DREW MIDDLETON

New York, Dec. 31 (AP) — New Year's Bowl football selections—take 'em or leave 'em—in the Rose Bowl, Southern Cal over Duke, three cheers for Coach Wallace Wade who hit Billy Patterson. . . . All good things have to end and Duke's phenomenal record won't escape. . . . Southern Cal is too big and you don't beat Notre Dame with mirrors.

In the Sugar Bowl Texas Christian over Carnegie Tech, bagpipes and all. . . . Davey O'Brien is still around and Carnegie Tech hasn't faced a passer of his ability this year. . . . Closest of them all is the Orange Bowl classic but this corner will take Tennessee over Oklahoma . . . Texas Tech over St. Mary's on the theory the Gaels always blow the big ones . . . New Mexico over Utah.

Didn't the year go fast? . . . And what a year. . . . A lot of laughs, a lot of times when your throat went tight, a lot of gags, a lot of guys . . . the things to remember beside the final score. . . . More than anything else the steaming hot night in Yankee Stadium and the way the crowd started to roar as Louis walked into Schmeling . . . Louis hitting so fast you could tell when his punches landed only by watching his shoulders . . . and the awful change in Schmeling from a superbly-conditioned, confident fighter to a broken, battered bloody one—in a little over two minutes.

Henry Armstrong lying on the emerald turf at Pompton Lakes one August day and talking of Tony Galento, that curious mixture of gladiator and clown . . . "I don't know what makes him the way he is, but all fighters are like him . . . when I'm in there I'd like to take the other guy's head off, I want to see him on the floor."

The football season: Sid Luckman playing the greatest one man game you ever saw against Yale when the season was young and Columbia was winning. . . . The last quarter of the Syracuse-Cornell game, the most exciting you'll ever see . . . 226 points, three touchdowns on long passes and the other on a 92-yard run . . . and Syracuse winning with three minutes to go. . . . And Tommy Farr in the 14th round agaist Lou Nova, worn, groggy and spent . . . the naked heart of a fighting man, alone and unafraid.

HOW TO SKI

E. FRITZ LOOSLI

Beginning Tuesday we will commence a great new feature series on HOW TO SKI Ski enthusiasts are constantly on the increase and a feature that tells them all about their favorite sport is bound to be a hit.

Written by Fritz Loosli, instructor at the Toronto Ski Club, this series will run for three weeks, one article a day, the first one for release January 3rd.

HOW TO SKI will be a valuable feature for your sport page during the winter.

Rabid Hockey Fan Great Admirer Of Gus Marker

Toronto, Dec. 31 (CP)—Probably the world's most rabid hockey fan lives down in Tulsa, Okla. She is 17-year-old Virginia Lee Morris and she owns what possibly is the largest and most complete hockey scrapbook in existence.

Started in 1929 when Miss Morris, then eight, began attending American Association professional games at Tulsa, the scrapbook has grown to such proportions that she trundles it around on a special little cart made by her grandfather. It weighs more than 35 pounds and is still growing.

Chief hero in the huge book, which contains information and data on all professional leagues and all available pictures of players who starred during the last nine seasons, is Gus Marker, right winger of Toronto Maple Leafs in the National League. Marker, at present on the injured list with a bad knee, began his professional career at Tulsa with the Oilers just about the time little Miss Morris started her collection.

Career Closely Traced.

Marker's career with Tulsa, then with Detroit in both the N.H.L. and the International League, with the Montreal Maroons and now with Leafs is closely traced in the book. While interested in all developments and phases of the game, the Tulsa girl has become a Leaf rooter, just as she was a rabid supporter of Maroons and Red Wings when the right wing star from Camrose, Alta., was doing his puck juggling for those teams.

His pictures, in various uniforms, are plastered all over the walls of her bedroom. Only tough part of the entire set-up, from Miss Morris' viewpoint, is that she has not seen Gus play since his Tulsa days. She never has seen a major league game.

Hockey, her scrap book and the Leafs were given chief consideration this season when the pretty high school graduate selected the motif for her Christmas cards. On them she had a picture of herself, sitting beside the book and its little wagon upon which was propped a cover from one of Maple Leaf Gardens' hockey programs. One of the cards is proudly displayed on the mantelpiece in Marker's apartment here.

Moments in Year Along Sports Front

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, Dec. 21 (CP)—Moments in a year along the eastern front...

...Little Aurel Joliat sitting forlornly in the Canadiens' dressing room at Montreal and musing: "You're good when you've got it; and when you haven't got it the time has come to quit. I've had 16 good seasons."...

...Strapping Johnny Samis, a 19-year-old from Vancouver who couldn't get past the first round in 1937, winning with ease the Canadian badminton championship in the green-walled rackets room at Quebec City's winter club...

...Don Penniston doing one of the year's prize coaching jobs with Cornwall Flyers, a hockey team that reached the Dominion finals without an outstanding player....

...Bespectacled Gordon Robinson of Stamford, Ont., almost upsetting the eventual titlist, Frankie Parker of Hollywood, by taking 11 straight games from him in the Canadian tennis championships...

...And the greatest moment of all...Slammin' Sam Snead whacking a towering wood shot over a tall elm and over the creek at Mississauga's long 12th hole, for an eagle three that turned the tide his way in the playoff with Lighthorse Harry Cooper for the Canadian Open golf championship....

....St. Catharines athletics coming from behind in game after game on their march to the Dominion senior lacrosse throneroom...

...Trying to get players of the University of Western Ontario football team to tell who made the fumble that cost a game with University of Toronto...and no one telling...

...Buster (Red) Storey, the story-book boy from Barrie, Ont., his knees up around his chin, bursting through Winnipeg Blue Bombers for three touchdowns in the National football final riding the road to glory for Toronto Argonauts...

GOODYEARS HELD TO SCORELESS TIE BY NIAGARA FALLS

First Time This Season Classy Team Has Not Scored

OSHAWA WINS

G-Men Secure in Second Place with 6-4 Victory Over St. Kitts

The rampage of Toronto Goodyears, bane of all Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" teams until now, has been halted. Niagara Falls Brights, trounced badly by Goodyears in Toronto 10 days ago, have the formula.

The fourth-place Brights, on their own ice, waded into the league leaders last night and, backed up by Goalie Johnny Mowers, held them to 70 minutes of scoreless hockey. The overtime battle was a moral victory for the Falls and marked the first time this season Goodyears have been held to no score.

Meanwhile, at Port Colborne, the hometown Sailors walloped the tail-end Brantford Red Birds 6-1 while Oshawa invaded St. Catharines for a 6-4 victory.

Still Undefeated

The results left Goodyears, undefeated this season, five points ahead of the second-place Oshawans. St. Catharines and Port Colborne are tied for third place, each with 10 points. Niagara Falls has seven points and Brantford, two.

Much credit for the fighting Falls' display went to Mowers, who kicked out 60 hots. Herbie Mortimer in the Toronto cage handled only 29. The rough game took nearly three hours to play because of frequent stops.

Two were injured, but continued after treatment. Mowers blocked a hard drive with an eyebrow and a 20-minute halt was called while he waddled to the dressing room for stitching. Defenceman Bobby Laurent, playing on the wing, needed similar attention when caught across the forehead by a stick.

Manager Moose Ecclestone of Goodyears delayed the tilt at least five minutes when he dashed on the ice to argue with referee Dinty Moore against a penalty imposed on Laurent for dumping Smoke Allan, Falls defenceman, after he received his injury.

Protest Officials

Both Port Colborne and Brantford officials said they would protest the refereeing of Babe Bogardis of Fort Erie as unsatisfactory. A total of 22 penalties, including a major and a misconduct, were issued.

Earl Laroche and Al Thompson each scored twice for the Ports. Captain Vince Upper and Rusty Waldriff made up the total. Ray Krieger counted the lone tally as the final period opened.

Goalie Peg Hurst was a big factor in the Oshawa win. Since he took over the janitor duties five games ago, Oshawa have won four games and tied one. Before the game, the city corporation turned the newly-built arena over to the management of the City Parks Commission.

Lex Chisholm, crafty Oshawa centre, took over the league scoring lead with three goals and two assists for a total of 2 points this season. Carl Maundrell and Winkie Smith were the other scorers for the winners.

Rudolph Pilous, a thorn in the Oshawa side, nabbed three goals for St. Catharines. The other goals was scored by Billie Cooper. Three of the losers' goals came in the third priod after Oshawa scorers had been leashed.

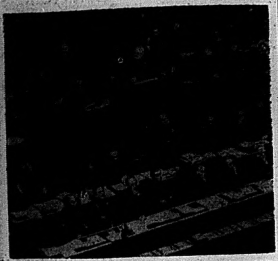
AL SIMMONS MOVES

Like Zeke Bonura, his former team mate with Washington Senators in the American League, Al Simmons (above), veteran outfielder, will perform in the rival National League next year. Al, who twice led the junior circuit at bat and posted an even .300 average in 1938, was sold outright to the weak-hitting Boston Bees.

FIGURES CAREEN AROUND KARAKAS

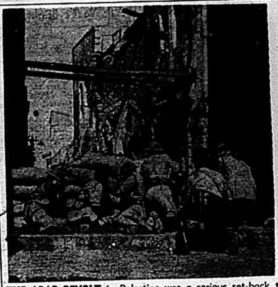
It's easy to understand why hockey teams use up so many miles of adhesive tape and bandages in the course of a season by taking a look at this picture, taken when Red Dutton's ancient but fast-travelling Americans were playing Chicago Black Hawks. Down on the ice in front of his goal is Mike Karakas, Black Hawk net-minder, and leaping over him, neither skate very far away from where it could do considerable damage should it accidentally connect, is Nels Stewart (6), ace goal-getter of the New York team. Tommy Anderson, his teammate, has the puck (hidden from view behind the foot), while holding him off and trying to prevent a shot at Mike is Earl Seibert, Chicago defenceman.

Munich Pact Heads List Of Greatest Stories In 1938



CRIES FOR THE ANNEXATION of Tunisia, Corsica and Nice by members of the Italian House of Deputies, in the presence of French Ambassador Francois-Poncet, put a severe strain on diplomatic relations between Italy and France.

THE MUNICH PACT, and the subsequent annexation of the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia, will undoubtedly go down in history as the most important event of 1938. The full results of this pact may not be seen for many months and it is still a subject of controversy as to whether Prime Minister Chamberlain gained or lost by the signing of the pact.



THE ARAB REVOLT in Palestine was a serious set-back to Britain's plans for the resettlement of Jews in the Holy Land. The revolt also showed that Germany and Italy were actively engaged in fomenting anti-British sentiment among the Arabs.

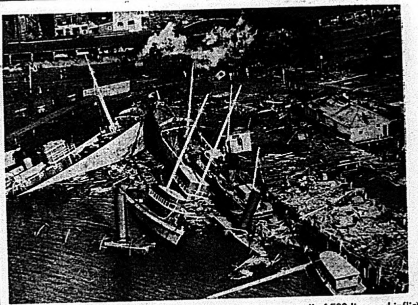
THE FAILURE OF THE FRENCH STRIKE gave Premier Edouard Daladier the power of a virtual dictator and was a serious blow to Communism in France. As a result of Premier Daladier's victory it is expected that France's rearmament program will go ahead with increasing speed.

THE GLOBE-CIRCLING FLIGHT of Howard Hughes and members of his crew contributed more to the science of flying than any other aviation feat of 1938.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO FRANCE undoubtedly strengthened the bonds of friendship between France and England and gave assurance to France that England still considers her as its closest ally.

THE ANGLO-U. S.-CANADIAN TRADE TREATY, signed in Washington, was a serious blow to the trade aspirations of the totalitarian countries and cemented closer relationships between Great Britain and the United States

THE ANTI-WAR PACT, signed by Joachim von Ribbentrop, left, on behalf of Germany, and Georges Bonnet, right, behalf of France, was hailed as an important step toward European appeasement.



THE HURRICANE which swept the New England States taking a toll of 500 lives and inflicting property damage which mounted in the millions was the worst disaster to hit the North American continent in the past year.

THE JEWISH POGROMS in Germany, and their subsequent flood of refugees, had world-wide repercussions and caused the United States to partially forsake their "isolation" policy and to enter into European affairs by strongly condemning the actions of the German government.

THE RESIGNATION of Anthony Eden as British foreign secretary marked the first open disagreement with Prime Minister. Chamberlain's foreign policy.

THE ANNEXATION OF AUSTRIA by Germany marked the first important victory for Chancellor Hitler in his bid to gain control of Central Europe and also proved that Germany and Italy had agreed, temporarily at least, not to interfere with each other's expansion plans.

JAPANESE VICTORIES, marked by the fall of Canton and Hankow, were a severe setback to the forces of Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and gave Japan control of one of the most industrially important sections of China.

TORONTO STOCKS (CLOSE)

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)— Firming of a few oil stocks featured the closing session for 1938 on Toronto Stock Exchange today. Trading volume was limited with industrial issues particularly dull. Mild optimism ruled among lower-priced gold issues.

Purchase of controlling interest in Canadian oil by a Canadian investment house was reflected by a rise of 1-2 in the common stock to a year's high of 18 1-2 on volume of more than 500 shares, unusual activity for this issue. Imperial Oil and International Petroleum also firmed fractions.

Foothills led the Western Oil group, jumping 7 to 1.08.

Augite, continuing its role of activity leader, moved higher to 46. Hard Rock added 9 to sell at 1.76.

McIntyre improved 1-2 to 53 1-2.

International Nickel added a major fraction to 56 5-8 and Ventures, Waite Amulet, Sudbury Basin, Sherritt Gordon and Eldorado had advances of as much as 35.

National Steel Car dipped 1-4 to 60 1-4 and Abitibi was chipped down to 2 5-8. Distillers moved up 1-4 to 20 1-4.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Dec. 31 (AP) — The stock market shuffled off the coils of 1938 today with a brisk rallying celebration in which selected rails, steels and specialties were leaders.

Activity was much more pronounced than usual on the day before New Year's, transfers running in the neighborhood of 800,000 shares for the two-hour proceedings.

With the exception of a small decline in Hiram Walker, most Canadian issues moved forward. Gainers of fractions included Canadian Pacific, Dome, McIntyre Porcupine and Distillers. Canada 4's were neglected.

Among favored stocks were Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Chesapeake and Ohio, Delaware and Hudson, Illinois Central, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Chrysler, Yellow Truck, Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical, J. C. Penney, Loew's, Continental Motors, Electric Boat, Consolidated Edison, Public Service of N. J., and Paramount.

Produce Market

Toronto, Dec. 31.—There was an easier tone to the Toronto egg market at the beginning of the week, but weather conditions, which developed later, caused a slightly firmer feeling, reports the Dominion Department of Agriculture in its weekly review. Receipts in fair volume have moved satisfactorily, with the exception of A-large. Demand for this grade slowed up somewhat, causing dealers to shade their prices.

Grade A-large were particularly draggy in yesterday's trading. Graded shipments moved at 30c for grade A-large, 27c for medium, 26c for pullets, 25c for B's and 22c for C grades.

A firmer tone undermined the butter market during most of this week. Offerings remained light, and the road conditions held up arrivals of fresh supplies to some extent.

Ontario creamery solids traded yesterday at 21¼c for No. 1 grades and 20¾c for 38 score. Sales showed good volume in retail channels, with top grade prints advancing to the range of 23c to 23¼c and 38 score to the range of 22¼c to 22½c.

Montreal Butter, Cheese Up.

Montreal, Dec. 31. (CP)—Butter prices swung upward in fairly active trading on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported. Eggs fluctuated slightly.

Creamery butter prints to retailers were 22½c to 23c a pound and solids 22c to 22½c. Western butter was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots sold at 21¼c for regraded. Receipts—six boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 32c to 33c for A-large, 28c for A-medium, 27c for A-pullets, B-large 24c to 24½c, B-medium 23c, and 22c for C. Receipts, 444 cases.

ALL MAIN ROADS IN GOOD SHAPE

Some Spots Are a Little Rough and Slippery

Unless today's falling snow creates further difficulties, traffic is now general through the Province, and few roads, except in the more isolated sections of Ontario are closed to motorists, it is stated in the regular daily report of the Ontario Motor League to the local office.

The Toronto-Montreal road is reported in good shape by the bureau, with the section to Belleville giving little difficulty, though east to the Napanee district considerable ice on the highway has slowed traffic. A heavy snowfall east of Napanee on Thursday night has left the road 'somewhat heavy in places'.

Toronto to Windsor road—Lake Shore and Middle road good to Hamilton. Dundas Highway icy and rough in spots from snow and ice on the road breaking up. From Hamilton to Woodstock, fair. Woodstock to London and west to Windsor, slippery.

Port Hope to Peterborough—Some snow and ice on the road, fair condition.

Roads blocked and upon which work is now being carried out to clear them—Wiarton to Tobermory, Guelph to Orangeville.

Highways in the Muskoka district and all others on the snow removal schedule are open. York County roads are all open, a few slippery spots.

Southern Minstrel Troupe Suffers Greatly From Cold

Far from their homes in the sunny south of the United States near New Orleans, five members of a wandering minstrel troupe who entered Canada via Chicago and are now experiencing the first few days of a typical Canadian winter in Ontario, rested briefly at a downtown restaurant this morning, while they sipped hot coffee in shivering silence.

"Lawdee", drawled one of the quintette, "to think we left home for this. Boy you-all have winter up here, what I mean."

Equipped with heavy overcoats, attired in toques and with ear muffs solidly fastened, with feet encased in heavy woollen socks, lumber men's boots and then with pounds of newspapers further wrapping their cold feet, the travelling musicians declared they were chilled to the marrow.

"Man, if we'd known it was this cold in Canada, we'd have stayed down in Noo O'leans.

"It isn't cold yet. Winter hasn't really started here yet", offered George, the counterman.

"B—rrr-rrr, if you don't call this cold what do you Canadians do to keep warm when it does get cold?" asked the shivering musician.

The five musical men who have been playing engagements through the United States, and lately the Palais Royal at Chicago, are en route to Montreal where they have a spot engagement for the New Year's week.

They are travelling in a large car which has had two heaters installed since entering Ontario.

Bacon Contracts Made Every 3 Months

The bacon contracts with the English market are made every three months. If the packers contract more bacon than that which represents the surplus the price of hogs advances because of the lack of supply, and if on the other hand, contracts do not take care of the surplus that surplus will greatly depress the market.

It is therefore, in the best interests of all concerned that the farmers should co-operate in furnishing to the best of their ability, the information that would make it possible to have the contracts represent the surplus.

Some good lots of hogs received during the week of December 30th, are as follows:

NAME	ADDRESS	NO. OF HOGS	GRADE A	B	C	Premium
C. Eggleton	Belleville	8	4	4		$4.00
Garnet Grills	Stirling	5	4	1		4.00
A. Ashley	Stirling	4	2	2		2.00
F. York	Corbyville	8	4	4		4.00

Any farmer who experiences any difficulty in obtaining his premiums kindly notify W. M. Gordon, Federal Department of Agriculture, Canada Packers Limited, Peterborough, Ont.

Business Established 80 Years Ago Moves to Another Part of Building

Remarkable Record of Family History in Tailoring Business Made by Late Thomas Walters and by His Son Charles L. Walters—Friends Pay Appreciation to Mr. Walters with Fine Gift

One of the ties with the business life of Belleville of eighty years ago today undergoes a great change. Charles L. Walters, whose father Thomas Walters established his tailoring business at what is now 269 Front Street, in the year 1859, which was carried on by Thomas Walters until the time of his death and has since then been conducted by his son, moves his head quarters out of the shop which for over three quarters of a century has been one of the familiar places in Belleville, and where many thousands of men of Belleville and district have been measured and attired in the styles of the various eras which have since swept over male fashions. But the break will not be complete for Mr. Walters moves to the upstairs of the building which he owns and there will carry on his trade and also the insurance end of the local branch of a fraternal order. The shop, so long the home of clothes for men, will hereafter be known as a ladies' dress shop.

Change Takes Place Today

Today is the last day of the eight decades in which the tailoring business of the Walters family will be centred in the old shop. The store has recently been remodelled to accommodate the new occupant and Mr. Walters has made other alterations in the building. January 1939 will spell a new day in this premises.

Thomas Walters, the founder of the business left his native England for Canada in 1857 and settled for a short time at Whitby. He came to Belleville in 1858 as cutter for a tailor Joseph Ashton, and a year later entered business for himself in a building just above Victoria Avenue, once known as Hotel Street. The next year, that is in 1859 he bought the building where he set up in business for himself. This is the building which Mr. Walters occupies today.

Charles Walters entered the business as a boy forty-four years ago and thirty-eight years ago on the death of his father took it over, and has since conducted it.

Styles of Other Days

Styles have changed, Mr. Walters told the Ontario Intelligencer today, from the time when he first became associated with tailoring. Great changes had taken place during his father's lifetime in the styles but the changes since that day have not been so marked. "Men wore tight fitting trousers, a few had trousers with bell-bottoms, the sack coats were long and really tight fitting. Mustaches were in the fashion for men." But beards as a rule had long since disappeared before Mr. Walters took over the business. Styles in the sixties, seventies, eighties and nineties had seen great transformations in dress.

Probably this is the only shop in Belleville, which has been occupied by one business and one family for eighty years. It goes back to the days when Front Street was vastly different from what it is today. Close on to three generations of male population of Belleville have known this place.

Friends Make Presentation

Late Friday a number of friends who have been accustomed to meet in Mr. Walters shop assembled and made him the presentation of a fountain pen and pencil set. In an address in which they called themselves members of "the old gang that have frequented your store and used it as a common meeting place to discuss religious and political matters and also to ridicule one another" and declared that they felt the obligation to recognize the occasion in some tangible way. We ask you to accept this pen and pencil and to show our estimation of you. This pen will write, we hope for many years to come and we wish you and your good wife many years of happiness and prosperity."

These friends took the affable merchant by surprise but he found words to express his appreciation of the spirit, which inspired the gift, which he promised to treasure and use.

SMALL OFFERING FOWL ON MARKET

Prices Show Little Change from Last Week

It may be the fact that Mr. and Mrs. John Public had their fill of turkey, goose and other holiday fowl over the Christmas weekend or it may have been the weather, but the pre-New Year city market provided the most sluggish reaction today seen in a number of years.

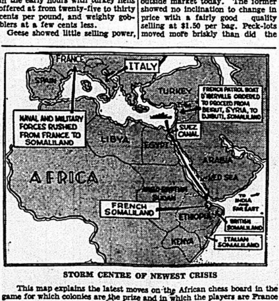
There was a fair offering of turkeys, geese and ducks, with the majority showing a decided decrease in quality from those offered prior to Christmas. Prices however showed little inclination to decline in the early hours with turkey hens offered at from twenty-five to thirty cents per pound, and weighty gobblers at a few cents less.

Geese showed little selling power, with prices hovering about the twenty-two and three cent mark. Ducks were fairly plentiful selling at from ninety cents each. The chicken offering was negligible, with some restaurateurs and hotelmen being hard put to secure supplies for the holiday trade. Fairly choice seven months old birds were offered at from $1.25 up with inferior qualities selling at a few cents less.

Egg prices held up well through the week, with "A" selects selling today at thirty-three and thirty-five cents per dozen. Mediums and ungraded stock were offered at thirty and thirty-one cents per doz. respectively. Farmer's butter shower little or no change over former quotations with two-pound rolls offered at sixty-five cents each.

A light offering of potatoes and other staple vegetables in bushel and bag-lots was available on the outside market today. The former showed no inclination to change in price with a fairly good quality selling at $1.50 per bag. Peck-lots moved more briskly than did the bags, selling at twenty-five cents each. Parsnips, carrots, onions and beets sold at prevailing prices.

Whitefish at twenty cents per pound, and mudcats at two pounds for 25 cents rounded out the fish offering.



STORM CENTRE OF NEWEST CRISIS

This map explains the latest moves on the African chess board in the game for which colonies are the prize and in which the players are France and Italy, with Great Britain and Germany playing roles as anxious kibitzers. Among Italy's demands on France are a share in the control of the Suez Canal and surrender of Djibouti, strategic port of French Somaliland on the Gulf of Aden. Djibouti also is the terminus of the French-owned railroad to Addis-Ababa, capital of Italy's newest colonial acquisition—Ethiopia. France is unwilling to accede to these demands. Reports that Italian troops were concentrating on the borders of French Somaliland brought prompt action by France. Naval and military reinforcements were rushed to Djibouti.

TORONTO NEWSIE TO HEAR OPERA

Having Way Paid and Receiving Pair of Good Seats

Toronto, Dec. 31—(CP)—George Malaiko, 50-year-old lame Toronto newsboy, is going to get one of his most fervent wishes. He's going to New York next week to hear Mozart's "Don Giovanni" sung at the Metropolitan Opera.

Edward Johnson, native of Guelph Ont., and managing director of the Metropolitan is supplying "a good pair of seats," and Richard Crooks, who sings the role of "Don Ottavio" in the opera, will donate the railway fare.

George sells newspapers at Toronto Union Station. A few days ago he heard "Don Giovanni" was to be presented in New York Wednesday. It's his favorite opera—and he has attended many.

Business hasn't been so good with George this year so he couldn't finance the trip himself. He offered to give a newspaper each day for life to any person who would advance him $21 for the New York trip.

"Ordinarily I would have paid my own way but this year I have not the money," said Malaiko. "I knew if I got to New York Mr. Johnson would not fail me."

Mr. Johnson did not fail. He never had heard of the Toronto newsboy but he said: "Any one who has the good taste to choose 'Don Giovanni' certainly deserves a good pair of seats." (Top price is $7 a seat.)

Down in New York someone brought up the question of railway fare. Crooks decided to be a belated Santa Claus and said he would guarantee the return trip. The money will be sent George when he writes the singer—and he's going to write right away.

BELL OF CITY CLOCK IN WORKING ORDER AFTER REPAIRS MADE

After a period of noticeable silence during which time clock custodian Jack Roblin, wrestled to repair the mechanical defect, the bell of the town clock has again resumed its work of tolling the hours, and will be in good shape for the ringing in of the New Year and the tolling out of the old, it is reported by him.

Insistent in his demand that a general overhaul of the clock should be undertaken, the veteran caretaker points to the increasing difficulties experienced in keeping the clock and bell mechanism running and operating proper schedule. Since the lengthy period between its last night overhaul several minor breakdowns have been repaired and the general mechanism is declared to have shown considerable deterioration.

BAD ROADS BLOCK SANTA'S APPEARANCE AT COE HILL CONCERT

A breakdown in his transportation system which left him stranded on the snowy road some distance from the village resulted in the non-appearance of Santa Claus at the annual Gospel Tabernacle Christmas tree and concert at Coe Hill this week. The belated party was held in spite of the absence of Santa who telephoned the church his regrets that "my reindeers have become disabled." Willing workers of the congregation took up the task of distributing the many gifts to the junior members.

Lord Tweedsmuir, present Governor-General of Canada, is due to leave Ottawa in about a year, the Mirror said, and it is customary to announce the new appointment some months in advance.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in his private chair, saying to ma, By gollies it's strange. The thought just struck me, but it's strange. I didn't get a single necktie for Chrissmas, and it's the first time in years, he said.

But my goodness you got other things, ma said. In fact it seemed to me an unusually large number of people thought of you this Chrissmas in the way of presents. I mean I dont think you are justified in going out of your way to feel neglected, she said, and pop said, You dont get the point, my deer, you evidently missed the note of exultation in my voice. I'm delighted at not having received any neckties. My usual fate is to have my neck bowed under the silken yoke of everybody's taste except my own but this year my unjustly apprehensive hands didn't open a single package with a necktie inside, he said.

STAINLESS TIES FOR FAST EATERS
ALL IMPORTED TIES MADE RITE HERE

Willyum Potts that's a fine way to talk after I've given you neckties for Chrissmas every year of our married life except this one, well of all the personel digs, ma said, and pop said, Personel nothing, yee gods do you think I'd sit here in cold blood and pay you a retroactive insult like that? I always considered your choice of ties as marvels of tact and good judgement, I always said so, he said.

Yes, you've said so, but now you've let the truth out of the bag, and the first thing I'm going to do tomorrow is buy you a necktie, and if you dont wear it every day till further natice I'll know that your remark alluded directly to me and not to the air in generel as you so mlandly claim, ma said, and pop said, Yee gods what have I done,, I mean go ahead, you'll see, go ahead and get it.

Wich she proberly will.

The compliments of the New Year were expressed Mayor Bone by the Attorney-General.

IT'S YOU I WANT!

Thrilling romantic serial by Allene Corliss

"Funny," said Whitney slowly, "the different backgrounds people have."

CHAPTER VI

This winter there would probably be a formal announcement in the Herald: "Miss Hester Prentice announces the engagement of her niece, Whitney, to Mr. Scott Prentice...."

And Scott would be impatient about a wedding. He wouldn't like the idea of waiting until another fall. Well, she didn't either. But, after all, she owed Aunt Hester something. And Aunt Hester had her heart set on Whitney's having a second season in Boston. Besides, there was always this stup'd matter of money and they couldn't expect the family to do much more. Uncle Adam had financed Westover for her and all of Scott's law school expenses. And they all knew Aunt Hester didn't have any more than she needed to live on comfortably. And as for Scott's mother. Useless to expect any help from Claire; she was always hopelessly overdrawn on her bank as it was.

So there was nothing to do, so far as Whitney cou'd see, but wait patiently and have as good a time as poss'ble while they waited. After all they were both very young and they were going to spend all the rest of their lives together. Suddenly she saw the clear, distinct pattern of her future with Scott, and she thought: "Life is lovely for a woman....when she can begin and fin'sh it with the one man she has ever loved...."

Then, abruptly, she clutched Jay Nowell's arm. "Look! There he is ....there is Scott. In the gray topcoat." Then she said, her voice dropping sharply with disappointment: "No, it isn't Scott. For just a moment I thought it was. It's Tod. And Scott doesn't seem to be with him...."

Rain began falling lightly as Whitney came down the gangplank. Tod pushed forward unaware of it. Aware only of her face beneath the soft brim of her hat. She saw him and waved and he lost h'mself in her smile. Then he saw her eyes leave him, go beyond and around him. Looking for Scott, of course. And Scott wasn't there. Would never be there again. Not so far as Whitney was concerned. His throat tightened and the pit of his stomach felt empty. Then she was flinging her arms about him. He kissed her, and her face was wet with rain. Her lips were soft and fragrant and casual. She was glad to see him, but where was Scott? He felt her question even in her kiss. Her gloved hands were still on his arm. She was introducing a th'n, dark chap.

"Jay, this is my cousin, Tod Jarvis. Tod, Jay Nowell. He's been nice to me...."

Tod shook hands. He said he was glad to know Jay Nowell. Whitney said something vague about d'nner that night. But it seemed he was leaving for New York at once. By plane.

Tod said: "Drop you at the flying field if you like...." But Jay Nowell said to take a cab. He'd got luggage to see to. Thanks just the same. He was too good-looking and he had the unm'stakable casualness of the very rich. Whitney didn't know he existed though. Tod could see that she was glad he couldn't come to dinner. She said good-by to him and promised to let him know when she visited in New York. She could always reach him, it seemed, through any one of his numerous clubs....

They were through the customs at last and driving away from the docks in Tod's old red Buick. Rain was falling vertically. It struck against the w'ndshield in silver white sheets and washed it clean. Boston was a city of narrow, twisting streets and wet brick and thick, gray fog. It was an old city, incredibly shabby. But tomorrow the sun would sh'ne and it would be gracious and well-preserved with polished brass doorknockers and scrubbed white paint; pointed and covered with the drifting warmth of scarlet and gold New England foliage.

Whitney said: "Where are we going, Tod? And why didn't Scott meet me?"

He had been waiting for this, of course. Dreading it. But now that it had come he answered her easily enough. Not looking at her. Traff'c was heavy on Atlantic Avenue. He said: "Scott didn't meet you because he is out of town and we are going to my p'ace for lunch unless you'd rather go somewhere else...."

Whitney turned her head. He could feel her staring at him. Beneath those c'ear eyelids her eyes would be frowning. Suddenly he felt young and horribly inadequate. Which was silly, of course. Because he was twenty-four and he'd been earning his own living for two years. He was on his way to becoming a decent journalist. Yet Whitney could make him feel adolescent....like a Harvard sophomore.

She said: "Then Aunt Hester hasn't moved !nto town yet?"

"Yes. But she's a'l snarled up with some hospital board meeting. Perhaps you'd rather go to the Touraine?"

"No your place will be nice." She had lunched there before. It meant a card table in front of a fire and lobster salad and coffee and Gorgonzola cheese. The coffee Tod made himself, the salad and cheese he brought up from a delicatessen place around the corner. She would have preferred going stra'ght to the house on Beacon Street and having a hot bath. But she couldn't let Tod down. And why hadn't Scott met her?

"Who was the guy you had in tow? And why ask him to dinner?" Thank God, she hadn't mentioned Scott again. He couldn't tell her packed in a jam of delivery trucks and taxicabs, waiting for a red light to change.

"Jay Nowell? I met him in Paris. I asked him to dinner because he's a friend of Helena's...." She was talking perfunctorily. Tod sensed that. She had a'ready forgotten Jay Nowell. He had sl'pped quietly out of her consciousness along with her six days at sea. She was back in Boston....but she wasn't with him. Not really. She was wondering where Scott was....but she wasn't asking any questions. Yet. She wasn't letting him see how horribly disappointed she was that he had met her instead of Scott. That is, she was trying not to let him see. Of course, she wasn't succeeding.

CHAPTER VII

Whitney smiled at Tod and sa'd: "Nice of you to meet me, darling. Thank heaven, you weren't out of town, too....it would have been a dreary homecoming if you had been."

She had a lovely smile. Clear and direct and sweet. "Yes," said Tod, "that's what I thought. So I stuck around. Tell me about your trip. Was Paris as much fun as you had hoped it would be, and how is Helena?" He wondered if after today she would ever smile in quite the same way again. He thought that probably she wouldn't.

"Paris was all sorts of fun and Helena is fine. She wants me to visit her this winter in New York. She sent you her love and some fifty-year-old cognac. She said she hoped you'd get to be one of the most successful young newspapermen in America."

Tod grinned. It had been Helena who had backed him up in leaving college. She had said: "We're the misfits in this family, Tod. We don't be'ong. People like you and me have to work out our own salvations. Mine is living in New York and writing fash'on reviews and going to first nights; yours is getting a job on a Boston newspaper. You'll probably end up writing editorials for the Herald twenty years from now; on the other hand, you may land on Broadway with a second-rate play."

So far he had simply managed to hang on to a good-enough job. And he'd never had any desire to write a play. Or a novel. But journalism was different ....and in time there might be another war.

Whitney brought him back abruptly to Tremont Street. "What's been happening here at home? I feel as if I had been gone for years instead of only three months. Did you have a nice summer?" Tell me about Scott was what she meant. Tell me what he has been doing and if he has missed me. And why isn't he here beside me instead of you, Tod? You're nice. You're sweet and I love you, of course. But it's Scott I want. Not you.

Tod thought, "My God, don't you suppose I know that?"

He sa'd, casually enough, his lean, tanned face composed, that he'd had a fair summer. He'd worked, of course. And it had been hot in town. The office had been like a boiler room. But he'd got out to the farm quite a bit. And down to Marblehead Neck. He'd got in some good swimming and quite a bit of tennis and some sailing.

Whitney thought: "He's talking all around something. He's making conversation. He's never been like this with me before...." She stared at him. And saw h'm, really for the first time. A lean, almost gaunt young man. Not good-looking in any definite, spectacu'ar way. Just another young man with an angular jaw and good teeth and close-cut tan hair. Nice eyes, of course, and a pleasant smile. always thought of h'm as her own age. She realized suddenly that he wasn't. That he was four years older. For the first time she thought of him as mature. Completely adult. The summer had done it. Hardened him. Given him a confidence, a casual sophistica't'on that he had lacked. But today this was overlaid with something else. Something that had to do with her. Staring at him, she saw that his face was guarded That in repose his mouth was gr'm, his eyes tormented.

She said, abruptly: "What's wrong, Tod? What has happened?"

He didn't look at her. He said simply: "We'll be at my place in five minutes, Whit. Let's skip it unt'l then."

She started to speak and then slumped quietly back, her eyes fixed on his profile. Suddenly she knew. Knew whatever it was it had to do with Scott and her. She said finally, in a voice that sounded cur'ously empty: "It's Scott, isn't it?"

Tod nodded. "Yes, it's Scott."

"Some girl...."

"Let's wait, Whit."

She said "All right," staring straight ahead, her hands clenched whitely in her lap.

Tod lived on the top floor of a narrow brick house on Charles Street. There were three rooms altogether. A fairly large one with narrow casement windows facing the street, a tiny dark kitchenette and bath along a narrow passageway and a bedroom in the rear overlooking the bas'n. Today the front room had been obviously cleaned and put in order. A card table laid with a linen cloth and silver for two stood in front of a small, wood-burning firep'ace.

Whitney walked over to a shabby chesterf'eld covered with blue rep and sat down. She had been here perhaps a dozen times in the last two years. She had helped Tod choose some of the furniture. The wine-colored rug had been her suggestion and the pine bookshelves built across one end of the room. And the old gilt mirror that hung over the scarred white mantel.

She pulled off her hat and pressed her fingers hard aga'nst her forehead. It felt hot and tight.

She said: "Open a window, will you, Tod?"

He opened one and a chill little wind rushed into the room. For the moment it had stopped ra'n'ng. He said: "There's food in the kitchen. I'll go get it."

But he didn't. He came over to her and sat down beside her and put his arm around her shoulders.

She said: "Well?"

"He's married, Whit."

Watching the co'or drain slowly from her face, watching her eyes grow dark and still and enormous, he thought: "My God, I've done it badly. I've made an awful mess of it. Any fool could have told her better than that...."

His arm began to shake violently about her shoulders. He took it away and fumbled for cigarettes. He couldn't look at her just then if he d'd....if he looked upon the havoc that was taking place in her face, he would have to go and find Scott, track him down and lay hands on him. Savagely.

He wished she would speak. Would say something. Anything. He wished she would cry. He hadn't seen her cry for years but it would be better than this. Just s'tting there, staring at nothing, her lips looking so white and tortured. He realized suddenly that whatever she had expected, it hadn't been anything as final, as irrevocable as marriage.

He said, miserably: "Lsiten, glk

He said, miserably: "Listen, Whit, do you want some brandy? I have some."

She shook her head. "No, I'm all right. Or I will be presently."

CHAPTER VIII

Whitney got up at last, and moved across the room to the opened window. It had begun to rain again. A strong wind whipped at the blue linen curtains and blew them straight out into the room. Between them she stood straight and sl'm, her head thrown back a little, the rain drenching her face.

Tod said: "Don't stand there like that....you're getting wet." He walked over and c'osed the window and laid his hand on her arm.

She looked at him and began to laugh. Tonelessly. It was frighten'ng. It was more frightening than if she had sobbed. He would have understood tears. But this strange, unaccented laughter and her eyes very hard. He said: "Don't, Whit...." helplessly.

She stopped. She said: "All right, I won't." Then she said: "Poor Tod. Rotten of you to have had to tell me. How you must have dreaded it."

"Never mind that. I'm sorry I didn't make a better job of it."

She stared at him. "Just how could you, I wonder? There ought to be books on how to tell a girl gracefully that the man she thinks she is going to marry has carelessly stepped out and married someone else. You might have taken me to the Touraine, I suppose, and to'd me casually over a lobster thermidor: Oh, by the way, darling, Scott couldn't meet you today because you see, he took a day off last week and got married...."

She caught her breath sharply and closed her eyes. Then she opened them and said: "When did it happen Tod? Last week?"

"Four days ago. In some little town in Connecticut."

"Someone I know?"

"No. A girl named Olivia Paul. Someone Kay Reynolds knew at Farmington. She's been spending the summer with Kay at Marblehead Neck...."

Whitney said: "I see." She didn't, of course. She never would. Scott couldn't have married a visiting girl four days ago. A girl named Olivia Paul. He was going to marry her....She said, suddenly. "Why, Tod? Why did he do it?"

"I don't know. I don't believe he knows himself. When he comes to in a couple of months and finds out what he's done, he'll go mad with remorse...."

"That," said Whitney slowly, "won't help either of us."

"No," said Tod, "I realize that." Then he said: "I'll start the coffee. We both need some."

He left her and came back presently with a tray of food and an electric percolator which he plugged into a wall socket. Then he knelt and lighted the fire wh'ch was laid on the hearth. Whitney moved automatically toward it but he drew the chesterfield closer and pushed her down upon it and shoved a sandwich into her hand. "Here," he said savagely, "eat this. It will do you good."

She lifted it obediently to her lips. Then laid it down again. "Sorry, darling, I can't manage it just now. Not even for you."

Tod sa'd: "No, I suppose not. But you ought to eat."

She assembled her words slowly. "How did you know .... about Scott? Did he tell you?"

"No, he wired me. He asked me to fix things up at the office and with you."

"Then he did think of me?"

"Yes."

"And you fixed things up for him ....at the office?"

"That was easy. He had a week's vacation coming to him."

"But telling me wasn't easy."

"Telling you was hell."

"I know." She found his hand and pressed it, her eyes going beyond h's shoulder into the far corner of the room. After a moment, during which neither of them spoke and rain slashed the window-panes rhythmically and the coffee began to perco'ate, she said: "Well, where do I go from here, Tod? What do I do with my life now?"

"You go on. You have to. You can't let this throw you, Whit. You can't...." H's fingers were biting into her arm. He forced himself to relax them, to speak quietly. She had been struck down swiftly and he was forced to stand by and do nothing. To tell her banally that she must go on.

"But I don't want to go on Everything has stopped. There has never been anyone but Scott. Not ever, Tod. You know that."

He knew it, all right. She'd built her whole life around him. Since she was fifteen. He'd stood by and seen her do it. He knew now that when she said she didn't want to go on without Scott she meant it. She might as well have finished it and said: "Without him there is no place to go."

She said: "Without him tomorrow and the next day and the day after that have no meaning....no s'gnificance...."

Her voice wore itself out. Her hands clenched and unclenched. She said, suddenly as though just discovering it: "I'm frightened, Tod. More frightened than I have ever been in my life. It's worse than if he had d'ed, really...."

Tod got up and poured her a cup of coffee, held it to her lips. Said: "Don't talk, Whit. Drink this. It will stop that awful shaking...."

She drank it obediently. It was scalding hot and it burned her lips but she didn't seem to mind. She drank it all. Then she said: "Thanks, darling. I did need that. See, I'm not shaking now...." and she held out her hands for him to see how steady they were.

He caught them and closed his own over them roughly. He sa'd: "Listen, Whit, this has been a body blow. No one knows that better than I do. But you're going to pull yourself together and see it through. You're not going to let it lick you. Everyone is holding their breath to see what you are going to do. How you're going to take it. And you're going to take it with your chin up and your shoulders back .... the way Uncle Adam taught you and me to take fences years ago...."

"Am I, Tod? I don't know. I can't think that far ahead. That's next week. Next month. All I can think about is today and Scott's being married. Why did he do it, do you suppose? He really loves me...." Now her eyes were bewildered. Her vo'ce had the curious, uncertain quality of a puzzled child's.

Tod's face was grim. That was the worst of it, wasn't it? That was what made it so ghastly. Of course, Scott loved Whit. But he had married Olivia Paul. Four days before in some little town in Connecticut.

"How could he have done it, Tod? When I was coming home? When he was going to see me in just a few days?"

"Don't ask me. I don't know. Why does Scott do any of the things he does? He isn't l'ke you or me or anyone else. He doesn't think things out, Whit. He just goes ahead and does them and the deuce with the consequences. He happened to want to get married. Maybe he read a book or saw a movie or something. Anyway, Olivia was here and you weren't. You hadn't been all summer. Scott doesn't live in the future....or the past. You ought to know that. Only the present is real to him. Perhaps he'd been drinking. I don't know. I don't think so. I think that at the moment he was in love with Olivia. Just as he's been in and out of love with dozens of girls. Only she married him. The others didn't. Sorry to be brutal, Whit, but Scott is like that. When he's crazy about a girl, he's crazy about her. For about five minutes. You're the only real, honest-to-God emotion he's ever experienced. The only th'ng that's ever lasted. And you weren't around."

It was a long speech. And Tod wasn't given to long speeches. He thought: "She will hate me for this....all the rest of her life she will hate me for being the one to tell her the truth about him."

But she spoke and he knew she didn't hate him. She said: "You're right, of course. I suppose I've known everything you've just sa'd for years. He didn't want me to go on this trip. He wanted me to stay home and get married. I'm glad I didn't, Tod. I'm glad I escaped that. It would have been frightful. Being married to a person like that. A person you couldn't trust out of your sight. Why he's only a child emotionally....a charming, spoiled child, Tod. I'm lucky really. I'm terribly lucky. I ought to be cheering. And waving banners and blowing horns. When you think I might have been unfortunate enough to have married him, Tod! Don't s't there and feel sorry for me, darling! Feel glad. I'm glad. Can't you see I'm glad? Can't you see I wouldn't have it any other way? Can't you see it's a marvelous break for me...."

Suddenly her voice went to pieces pitiously and she was sobbing convulsively, her face pressed against h's shoulder.

He stroked her hair, and presently when the worst of her sobs had worn themselves out he said: "Don't ever try to lie to me again, darling. Save all those brave young phrases for the rest of the crowd. You're going to need them."

She lifted her head. "All right." she said, "I won't. I'll go wash my face. I must look horrible."

Tod said: "The bathroom is the first door to your left and there are clean towels. Take your time and do a good job."

CHAPTER IX

When Whitney came back to the fireside Tod had poured himself a cup of coffee and was drinking it. He looked up and grinned at her. He said: "You look better. You look f'ne now."

She said: "What is she like, Tod?"

"Who? Olivia?"

"Yes."

"She's good-looking. Quite definitely so. B'onde. And small. She's not as tall as you are...."

"It's funny, Tod," Whitney spoke slowly, pulling on her hat. "I can't imag'ne Scott married to a small, blonde girl named Olivia. I suppose when I see them together it will seem real....but right now it doesn't. It's like something I've heard somewhere about someone I don't know very well....I mean, I can't make it seem like someth!ng that has actually happened to Scott and to this girl and to me. But when I see them together I'll know that it has happened...."

"Yes," said Tod grimly, "I'm afraid you will."

She saw them together just eight days later.

Whitney walked northward through a fragile blue dusk. The H'll was at its loveliest in this hour between five and six. Somewhere chimes rang out sweetly and windows sprang suddenly into oblongs of lamplight and smoke from freshly lighted fires twisted ob'iquely against a saffron sky. And she had been home four days.

The br'cks of Hester Prentice's house were washed with mauve color. The fanlight above the ivory doorway was a golden semicircle. And Kay Reynold's eyes had been av'd with curiosity. She had said: "Tell me about Paris, what are the new clothes like and d'd you meet any attractive men?" She had said: "Did you go to the races and how long were you in London and did you get to see the Prince of Wales?" And all the time what she had really been demanding was: "How are you taking Scott's marriage? What are you going to do about it? Are you going to be gay and brittle or cool and aloof? Do I dare mention it to you?"

The answer had been....no, you don't.

And then Whitney had mentioned it herself. She had said: "Scott got married very suddenly, didn't he? Or perhaps, you knew about it all along. Did you, Kay?"

Kay's face becoming wretchedly embarrassed. "No, I d'dn't, Whit. I had no idea. Honestly. None of us had. We thought....well, you know...."

Funny to see Kay stumbling for words like that, her eyes frightened. Almost beseeching. Funny to feel so cool and hard and impervious when you were the one really who should be squirming and uncomfortable and self-conscious. Funny to hear your own voice say casually, with no effort at all: "I know. You all thought he was going to marry me. Well, I thought he was, too. Which all goes to show how little you can tell about these things."

Kay's mouth going suddenly lax. Making her look a little stupid. Her eyes widening ludicrously. Kay not making anything of it. Kay thinking: "Well, of all things to say!" And pulling herself together and becoming suddenly resentful. Resentful that the chance to feel sorry for Whitney, to console and sympathize with her, had been so rudely, so unfeelingly snatched away. Kay saying: "Well, I'm glad you feel that way about it....most girlse wouldn't ....and it.... most girls wouldn't ....and And suddenly being absurdly angry at them all—at Whitney and Scott and Olivia—because a situation that had promised to be thrilling and dramatic and full of emotional fireworks had suddenly gone flat on her hands. And Whitney making up her mouth and drawing on her gloves and saying good-by, and thanks so much for tea, and I'll be seeing you soon, and walking casually away from the Copley....

The telephone was ringing as she let herself into the house. Old Thomas, answering it, said: "It's for you, Miss Whitney. Mr. Tod calling."

She said: "I'll take it in the library, Thomas." And knew that Scott was back.

The library was warm with firelight; a study in brown and cream with sharp accents of scarlet and orange. The saffron-t'pped flames on the hearth. The yellow lamplight, filtered through parchment. The tawny chrysanthemums on the writing table. The hand-too'ed scarlet leather bindings of first editions. The dusky gold flames of family portraits.

Whitney walked across the room and p'cked up the telephone and said: "Hello...."

Tod said: "Hello, Whit...." and stopped. Then he said: "You asked me to let you know when Scott and Olivia got back. Well, they're back. They're at the Miles Standish. They're going to live there permanently at least this winter. I had lunch with Scott."

Whitney didn't answer at once. Just as Tod was beginning to think the connection must be broken, she said: "You did? How is he?"

"He's all right."

"I don't suppose you mentioned me...."

"As a matter of fact, we did. N at first, you know. But later. Af we had exhausted everything el I suppose it was rotten of m Whit, but I knew he wanted talk about you and I wouldn help him out. I wouldn't mentio your name. Finally he said: ' suppose Whit is back?' And I sa 'Oh, yes, she's back and lookin fine.' Then he said, 'If you see he tell her to drop in on us.... an afternoon after five. Olivia wou be delighted....' I said, 'Sure, I tell her.' And....well, I guess th was about all we said."

"Oh," said Whitney, "so th was all you said?"

"Yes, I think so. Darn it, Wh what else could we say?"

"I don't know. Nothing I s pose. It must have been horri embarrassing for both of you as was."

"It was tougher on Scott than was on me. After all, he's the on who has made a mess of things...

"But you are very fond of hi Tod. In spite of everything. Yo know you are."

"Of course, I am. Just becau he's gone and made a ditherin ass of himself is no reason...."

"No reason at all."

"But I could murder him, Whi cold-bloodedly, for what he's don to you."

"I know, darling. You're so dar sweet, Tod. You always have been."

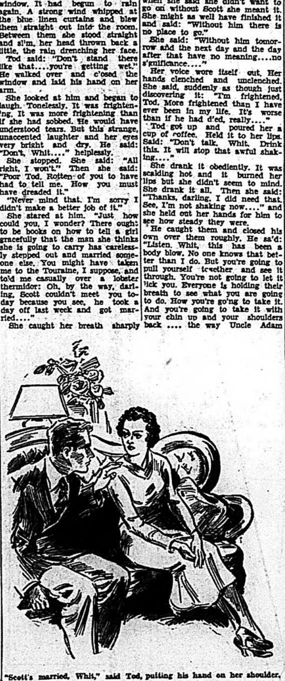
"Don't go, Whit. Stay here and marry me this week," Scott pleaded.



"Scott's married, Whit," said Tod, putting his hand on her shoulder.

"Scott got married very suddenly, didn't he?" said Whitney.

TABLOID PRAISES EXPENDITURE ON COMING-OUT PARTY

New York, Dec. 30.—(CP) — Brenda Diana Duff Frazier was commended indirectly by the tabloid New York Daily News today for helping dispose of some of the United States' surplus produce among 2,000 socialite consumers.

The newspaper made its compliment in taking an editorial whack at those whom it called "share-the-wealthers" for complaining about the $25,000 coming out party staged at the Ritz Carlton Hotel for the No 1 New York glamor girl whose grandfather is Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, the Canadian banker.

The News said most of the money went into active circulation among people who in turn would spend it soon. It also said the $10,000 spent for food and drink for Diana's guests would do something toward reducing the surplus of the country's wild rice, black beans, Rye and Scotch.

Nearly half of the 3,308-mile inter-American highway from Laredo, Texas, to Panama, is now improved with gravel or better surface.
